Popularity and usefulness of Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy—A Thrilling Letter from a Master Mechanic.

LOWELL, Mass., March 25, 1884.

Dr. David Kennedy, Rondout, N. Y.

DEAR SIR: I think it is due to you that I should make the following statement, and I make it voluntarily and willingly; On the 4th day of June, 1881, I was taken with what was called paralysis of the bowels. The seizure was unexpected and terrible. The stomach and other organs seemed to sympathize with it and to have lost all power of action. For a long time my life was despaired of, but at length I recovered so far as to be able to ride out. By the advice of my phisician I visited Poland Springs; Vt., hoping to benefit from the waters. But they did me no good. Neither were the best physicians of Lowell and Boston, whom I consulted, able to afford me more than transcient relief. I gained no strength and my case appeared almost hopeless. In the Fall a friend advised me to try KENNEDY'S FAVORITE REMEDY, and although opposed to patent medicines, I made the trial. To make a long story short—FAVORITE REMEDY, in my opinion, saved my life. I consider it the best preparation in the world for stomach difficulties, as well as of the Liver and other organs. I am glad to say it is in general use among the R. R. men in this vicinity.

Yours, etc., A. J. GIFFORD.

Mr. Gifford is the Master Mechanic of the Lowell division of the Boston & Lowell Railroad, and his illness and recovery are known to many who can testify to the facts in his letter.

Use this medicine for all diseases of the Blood, Kidneys, Liver, Stomach, Bowels, and Skin. It may save you or yours from pain and death.

Short Skirts.

BY THOMAS J. MOORE.

Of all the maidens I have met,
In curls or bangs or gold or jet,
In silks or muslin, lawn or tulle—
One only have I found dull!
For some are prudish, some are bold—
Some seem too warm and some to cold,
And all are heartless cunning flirts,
Except the maiden in soort skirts.

When artless, piquant, saucy, true,
And modest as the morning dew—
With bright blue eyes or tender gray,
And spirits light as feathery spray,
With heart as pure as angels are,
And soul as bright as any star—
Her whole demeanor proud asserts
She is not conscious of short skirts.

This merry, mirthful, gay and wild,
This pensive, mournful, meek, and mild,
Capricious, whimsical and odd,
With mischief full as any pod—
A human rainbow of life's wiles,
And yet the shower of its smiles;
A great influence she exerts,
This fairest maiden in short skirts.

Experience hasn't yet laid on
The thing that blights the smile of dawn;
Cold knowledge hath not yet made room
For stubble where the daisies bloom;
Nor wisdom taught that deadly throes
May lurk within the tempting rose;
She hath not heard the song that hurts
This blithesome maiden in short skirts.

Alas! the time when she shall feel
Her nether limbs she should conceal;
When childhood loses its sweetest strain
Within the jar of passion's pain
Which must disturb the human frrme
While life is hoe or love a name,
Her corcless freedom she deserts
When she disposes her short skirts.

[Philadelphia Call.

THE FACE IN THE GLASS.

I was called by telegram from my office one day to visit an uncle who was dying.

He had never even acknowledged my existence. He was "Mr. Worth, who owns that fine mansion over there," while I was simply—or my small sign declared me to be—"Henry Worth, M. D."

The "M. D." was my only wealth, Station or honor. In fact, when a young physician first puts out his sign that is about all he possesses, save the small stock of knowledge which he has carried until himself and pocket-book are exceedingly below par.

It was no short distance between my city home and my uncle's. Fully one hundred and sixty miles intervened, and it was evening before the train slowed up at the village of Dare.

I alighted with one or two others, and looked around for some person from the "Castle" (as my uncle's home was called). I found an Irishman waiting, who, after a long parley to be sure I was the right person, told me to get into the coach.

We must have ridden a mile and a half when we turned into the Castle grounds.

I could not make out the place very well, for it had grown dark in the approaching night. We turned into a long drive, and far back from the main thoroughfare stopped before the door of a dark stone mansion.

Not a light was visible save a dim one in the hall, which could be seen through the colored glass transom.

The coachman drove around to the stables, while I passed up the marble steps and sounded the brass knocker.

What a noise it did make! It seemed as though every part of the house had an echo and trembled at the concussion.

For some time I was kept waiting outside; but at length the slow footsteps of some one coming to the door could be heard. Then came the sound of bolts being thrown back, and then the door opened.

Who was it?

A woman from the looks of the dress. Yes; it was a woman—an old, wrinkled, wicked looking woman, who reminded me of one of the witches in Shakespeare's "Macbeth."

"What do you want?" was demanded in a tremulously high tone.

"My name is Worth, from R—— city; nephew to Robert Worth," I replied.

"Come in," was all she said, and I was ushered into the hall.

I followed her along the hall until we reached a door that was slightly ajar.

"You may remain here until I acquaint master of your arrival," she said, and left me to myself.

A fire burned dimly in the old fashioned grate at the other end of the spacious parlor. Two wax candles burned in the chandelier. The room was furnished in a manner that declared the owner to be a man of taste, refinement and wealth. Paintings hung upon the walls in such numbers that one imagined himself to be in the studio of some great artist.

The window-shutters were all closed and seemed not to have been opened to admit the sunlight for years.

I stood in the center of this room for some time pondering over my strange adventure.

Robert Worth was my father's own brother. In early life they had quarreled and ever after were known to each other as enemies. This accounted for the "precarious" relationship that had existed between us. Robert Worth had never married, and up to the time he had sent for me on his death-bed I had never seen and seldom heard his name mentioned in connection with my own.

Three pictures in the room took my attention, and one of them I was sure was that of my uncle. It must have been painted when he was about 25 years old. There was a great resemblance between him and my father. There was the same piercing eye; the heavy black eyebrow; the classic nose and firm mouth which declared him to be a Worth.

The other two paintings to which I referred were those of a man and woman.

The man must have been twenty-one or two years of age. To say he was handsome would but poorly express it. [illegible] A high, broad forehead, [illegible] dark eyes and hair, and a mouth so perfect in its formation that even in the painting one almost imagined they heard it speak.

The painting of the woman (or, I should say girl, for she could not have passed beyond her teens) was very beautiful. Her beauty was entirely different from that of the man's just described—a beauty that was purely feminine, golden hair, skin of ivory whiteness, eyes whose azure rivaled that of the summer skies—aye, eyes in which you might read thoughts as pure as an angel's.

"You may come with me."

I started visibly as that tremulous voice broke the stillness of the room. It was from the woman who had let me in. She had come in without making any noise, and had spoken these words close to my ear.

She took one of the wax candles with her and left the room, I following.

We passed up three flights of stairs, and came to a closed door, that, I felt instinctively, belonged to the owner of mansion.

"Remain where you are," spoke the old woman, and taking the candle with her she left me alone, standing in utter darkness.

She was gone about five minutes, then the door opened and I was admitted.

There was but one person in the room besides the woman and myself, and that was the old man in bed.

The room was not large, but everything in it denoted comfort.

"Leave us alone, Margurite," spoke the party in bed in a firm, commanding tone.

The woman obeyed, and we were left alone.

A silence of some moments lasted, during which time I was making an examination of the old man, and I knew he was doing the same of me.

He was a withered old man, and yet it would have been hard to tell his age, for passion and disease had placed their imprint upon him. That he was younger than my father I knew; but could you have brought this man to my father's deathbed you would have declared him to have been fully twenty years the senior.

He broke the stillness by interrogating:

"So you are John Worth's son?"

"I am," I answered.

A pause ensued.

"Of course you know that your father and I were not on very good terms, do you not?" he asked.

"So I have been informed," I answered.

"Do you bear me any ill-will?" he questioned, rising a little up in bed.

"Not in the least."

"I am glad you do not," he continued, settling himself again, "for I am about to die and wish the ill-will of no person."

"Indeed!" I exclaimed. "Whatever has transpired between my father and you is a dead letter to me."

"Let—me—see," again spoke my uncle, "your father is dead?"

"Yes, and has been nearly a year."

"Did he leave you any property?" he interrogated; and then, as if excusing himself for his ignorance, he said: "You see, although a brother, I was a total stranger."

"He left me something which I value very highly," I answered.

"What is that?" he demanded.

"An honest name."

"And I suppose that was all?"

"Yes," he replied.

"All the better," he muttered to himself; and then continuing:

"I like you better than I expected. Draw your chair nearer my bed."

I obeyed, and noticed for the first time since my entrance a very fine French plate mirror that hung on the wall near his head.

"Give me your hand," he asked, reaching out a long, withered hand for me to clasp.

"I did so, and the coldness of that hand sent a tremor to my very heart.

"Do you know why I have sent for you?" he now asked, looking at me with those dark eyes that seemed to pierce my inmost thoughts.

"I do not," I answered.

"I will tell you then. To make you my heir! I am about to disclose to you a part of my life that few persons know. But first you must swear never to disclose it to any one. Swear on your honor as a gentleman—a Worth—that it shall never pass your lips."

Like Hamlet, I took the oath.

"Have you ever heard the name of Franceskie? But I do not think you have. You have seen his picture?"

"Where? Down stairs?"

"Aye; the painting of that beautiful young man with the black eyes and hair."

"I remember it."

"He was of Polish descent, as his name indicates. He and I were the firmest of friends; but it has been twenty-five years ago since he was—since he died," correcting himself. "Did you notice the beautiful girl next to his picture?"

"Yes, I did," I answered, growing feverishly interested.

"Well, that was his wife. Before she married him her name was Dale—Flora Dale. I knew her before Franceskie, and—loved her!"

How despairingly the old man spoke the last part of the sentence!

"She married him. I was for a time insane. I traveled heaven knows where—anywhere—to forget my terrible disappointment. I had loved Franceskie as a friend and now I hated him. How I longed for his destruction! I gloated over the time we might meet. A year passed by and chance threw us together, and—but come closer to me."

I bent my ear down to his lips and he hissed between his clenched teeth—

"I murdered him!"

I started back as if I had been shot. Happening to glance up to the mirror for [illegible] I saw the face of Flora Dale. [illegible]

"And the wife?" I gasped under the greatest excitement.

"I am her murderer, too," hissed the old man, "for my bloody deed made her a maniac for years, when she died!"

"Are you sure she died!" I demanded.

"Sure!" gasped the old man. "Didn't I see her laid out in the white shroud! Didn't I see her lowered in the cold, damp ground. Aye, yes!"

How pitifully he moaned these sentences! Growing more calm he said:

"When my arm struck that fatal blow I did more than murder a husband—I murdered a father. The babe was a little girl. No one imagined me the murderer. I had been absent so long that when the deed was done the world supposed it was the work of some unknown assassin. No one saw me, except—Marguerite. My secret is safe in her keeping.

"I have provided for the child until now she is a woman. The same face that caused me my life's agony and crime is under this roof. She loves me as a father, and little suspects me guilty of a crime. I am dying by degrees, and she will be left alone in this cursed world. I make you my heir—the will is made—on condition that you marry her. —Il the wealth I possess is hers by right. She need never know my crime. Do as I request."

I made no answer. I could not utter a word.

Seeing that he hesitated he said:

"Go to your room and at 5 o'clock tomorrow morning give me your answer."

Marguerite made her appearance and conducted me to my room.

I slept very little that night. Horrid dreams came to vex me, and I was up long before 5 o'clock the next morning. How should I decide?

Here appeared an opening which perhaps never in a life-time would come again. Here was a fortune at my finger-ends only waiting for me to grasp. My profession was a slavish one at best. Well did I know what a close companion poverty was. Here was wealth and happiness before me—and an angel for a wife—why did I hesitate?

Aye, it was that conscience that "makes cowards of us all." In accepting this I must sacrifice my manhood, must be the receiver of blood-money, the partaker of a crime. He had acknowledged that all his wealth was hers by right.

It was enough. Before the old-fashioned clock in the hall struck 5 I had decided the course I should pursue.

I quickly stole from my room to that of my uncle's. Without knocking I went in, came close to his bedside and said;

"I reject your offer."

I expected a torrent of passion. There he lay as I had left him; one hand on the counterpane as it had been stretched out to receive mine. His eyes were glazed. He was dead!

It is a hard thing to keep a man down when he is determined to rise.

I rose slowly but surely in my profession. The two years succeeding my adventure (I call it agventure) recorded above were given to interminable study and zeal. I very seldom lost a case I took hold of. A fever broke out which devastated the country. I was in demand constantly, and my success built me up a name.

Too close attention could not help but tell upon my health. I must have a change of air, my friends advised, and I concluded to have it.

I sought the mountains, and in a quiet pastoral home my health returned.

The glorious Catskills! What an antidote they are to the sick and diseased mind!

One morning, taking my mountain staff with me, I left the village at the foot of the mountain, where I resided, and commenced the ascent of South Mountain.

There was but a single cloud visible in the heavens, and that brushed the top of Clove Peak, across the ravine. The air had that transparency that is often noticed in early autumn. You may gaze until the eye wearies of the distance; the atmosphere is so clear. My path was very intricate, and it was fully two hours after leaving the plain below before I stood on Bowlder Rock, nearly 3,000 feet above the sea level!

My soul was drinking in the beauty of the scene when a scream of terror fell upon my ear.

Another instant I was bounding dangerously near the edge of the precipice toward the cry which I had heard.

I rounded a boulder and beheld a woman clinging to a shrub which grew on the edge of the precipice.

"Hold on, and I will save you!" I shouted.

She must have heard, for she held on, and another instant I had drawn her from the threatened death.

And then she did what any woman would have done under the circumstances—fainted.

It was some time before I could bring her to. When I did, and she opened her eyes—great heavenly eyes—she looked confused and asked:

"Where am I?"

Those eyes—that voice, so low and pathetic—made a thrill go over my person, and it was in a very unprofessional tone that I answered:

"Safe; thank heaven!"

"Oh, I remember. I slipped on the rocks. What an escape from an horrible death!"

I assisted her to the hotel near by, where she was staying, and was the hero of the day among [illegible]

Reader, do you wish to hear more? Well, I will tell you. I have never recovered the heart I lost that day on the mountain.

A few days before our marriage my fiancee turned to me and said:

"Henry, I do not think you [illegible] Do you [illegible] re-plied, "and yet you resemble very close If a painting I have seen."

"I saw you, though, two years ago," she continued, smiling.

"Where?" I demanded.

There was a "tender light" in her blue eyes as she replied:

"In the glass when your uncle confessed his crime."—Philadelphia Call.

A Series of [illegible] and Honest Boat Races that are to be Rowed on Seneca Lake in August.

After the professional fiascos in the boating world during the last two years, a series of absolutely honest boat races will be given with pleasure by all lovers of aquatic sport. The best amateur oarsmen of the United States will take part at the National Regatta of Amateur Oarsmen which will take place at Watkins, August 12 and 13, 1884.

After the Amateur Regatta has been rowed at Watkins the oarsmen and their shells will be taken on board the Seneca Lake steamers and conveyed down the lake to Long Point. The lads will be housed by Mr. John E. Allen at his new $100,000 hotel on this beautiful spot. This gentleman has expended $300 in badges and banners to be presented to winners in the events which will be rowed by the oarsmen off Long Point, August 15th.

Smooth water is always to be had on either one side or the other of Long Point, and a more beautiful course does not lie out of doors anywhere. The wooded slopes afford vantage ground for spectators, and the admirable appointments of the grounds and of the splendid hotel are calculated to render Long Point the future boating course of this section, if not of the entire country. The best accomodation is to be had for shells, and the crews that are entered for the Long Point Regatta will be the guests of Mr. Allen whose enterprise carries forward this Regatta project in a manner so admirable. He is being aided in this by F. W. Mack, Editor of the Evening Auburnian, at Auburn, N. Y.; several years Secretary of the renowned Atlanta Boat Club, of New York city. Mr. Mack will receive entries up to and including Aug. 14th. and may be consulted by wire or letter, at above address, as to details. The races at Long Point Aug. 15, are open to all amateurs. No entrance fees are required. The rules of the National Amateur Association will prevail, and every detail and every race will be arranged to the end of square toed, honest contests in each of the following events to be rowed: Four-oared shells, Pair oared shells, Double scull shells, Junior single shells, Senior single shells, and Eight oared shells. It is believed the people will go to see boat racing of this kind, and all the splendid steamers of the Seneca Lake Navigation Company will carry people to Long Point, and from all trains at Watkins and Geneva.

DR. MARY WALKER has bolted Blaine. Defeat is certain.

AUBURN prison made $457.94 for the State during the month of June.

THERE were nineteen deaths at Havana from yellow fever last week.

WHERE was Ben Butler and what was he about—when Cleveland was nominated.

NOTWITHSTANDING the cholera scare in Europe, the out going steamers Saturday carried about one thousand passengers.

BLAINE'S letter of acceptance is fully prepared. It will contain six thousand words and be given to the press in a day or two.

IT is reported that President Arthur has spoken for a suite of rooms at the Thousand Island house, Alexandria Bay from July 27.

GOULD, whose elevated roads Cleveland boldly cared for with his veto, will not desert the Governor now.—[Syracuse Standard.

ABOUT six hundred workmen in the Albany Capital building will have to be discharged this week for the lack sufficient appropriation.

WYOMING county Republicans have made a complete canvass of the county and claim that Blaine will have at least 1,500 majority there.

THE Syracuse Democratic escort two hundred strong sent the first congratulatory telegram to the Governor, which was received ten minutes after his nomination.

THE wealth of the United States is $50,000,000,000 or $900 to each inhabitaut; that of Great Britain is $40,000,000,000 or $1,000 to each inhabitant.

SECRETARY ELKINS of the Republican national committee says that an effort will be made to carry some of the Southern States for Blaine, but for prudential reasons he declines to say which ones.

THE New York Sun on the 10th inst. says in regard to the Chicago convention "We think Grover Cleveland is beaten." The Sun's predictions on this occasion was similar to that of a weather prophet—clear off.

GENERAL LOGAN leaves Washington this week for Minneapolis, where he will attend the reunion of the Army of the Tennessee and the Grand Army of the Republic on the 22d inst., and afterwards will visit his home.

OUR opinion of Mr. Blaine ought to be pretty well known by this time. Yet he is a fellow of uncommon resources, and a splendid actor. But if he should be beaten, he will be beaten most awfully. The bottom of the Republican party will be all gone.—[New York Sun.

RUSSELL SAGE has had a severe attack of nervous prostration and it is believed that he will retire from active work as soon as he can close his business on Wall street. The recent panic did much to shatter his health, as he was a loser up in the millions. He is 74 years of age.

FLOWER not satisfied with his failure at the State convention at Saratoga, shipped his little boom and working material to Chicago; but there he wilted in quicker time and more noticeably than at Saratoga. This world's goods didn't do it this time.

MR. CLEVELAND will poll nearly the whole of the Democratic vote, he will get the largest independent vote ever cast for a party nominee in the country, and he will, we firmly believe, be the next President of the United States.—[Brooklyn Eagle.

EARL Granville has sent a further note to West, British Minister at Washington, directing him to ask that if advantageous terms are given to Cuba for the admission of Cuban products into America, that the products of the British colonies in the West Indies be placed on the same footing.

THE Democratic platform is a lengthy one and is fitted up to suit every Democrat. It is carefully built and on the whole a very sound and sensibe platform. The tariff plank is not openly for either protection or Free trade. It is simply an attack on the Republicans failing to reduce taxation.

GROVER CLEVELAND was nominated for President of the United States last Friday at the Chicago convention. On the second ballot his vote rose to a hundred and fifty above the required two-thirds and his nomination was made unanimous. His nomination was predicted by many, and was the wisest choice the democratic party could have made. Cleveland knows nothing of trickery, but stands with a clean record for good, honest government. We think that the ticket, Grover Cleveland of New York and Thomas A Hendricks of Indianna, will sweep the country by a rousing majority.

JUST before the meeting of the Chicago convention Gov. Seymour said: "It seems from such reports as reach me that Gov. Cleveland is the wise choice of the New York delegation as its candidate for the presidential nomination at Chicago. I regard him as a man of great strength in this state. The elements of opposition to him in the state are not such, in my judgment as would fail to support him after his nomination. It will be remembered that Gov. Tilden carried the state in 1876, although a much more formidable combination from this state opposed his nomination at St. Louis than opposed Gov. Cleveland at Chicago. Gov. Cleveland's [illegible]

The shanty of a railroad flagman was blown on to the track of the West Shore at Newburg, Saturday, during a terific storm, and a coming train struck the shanty, demolishing it and instantly killing the flagman, who was inside.

There was a remarkable performance at the Chicago driving park Wednesday. Westmont, the noted young pacer, traveled one mile with a running mate in 2:01¾. This is the fastest time ever made for any distance by either a pacing or trotting horse. It beats all records by several seconds.

The crops in Otsego county, according to the Freeman's Journal, do not promise as well as was anticipated earlier in the season, mainly owing to the heavy May frosts and the light fall of rain during the month of June. The yield of hops per acre, may be twenty to twenty-five per cent less than of last year. The oat crops are both likely to be below the average.

An unknown man, while steeling a ride on top of a Central railroad sleeper, was crushed to death while the train was passing thro' the Beach street tunnel, Syracuse, Saturday morning. Several letters were found in his pocket, but nothing to identify him. From a bundle he had it is thought he was a tramp mason. A diary showed that he had traveled over a large part of the country, and had recently worked in Hudson.

Alonze B. Carr, aged 21, driver on the canal boat Martin Miller, was passing the steamer Milton S. Price at Kirkville Thursday; when the whistle of the latter boat was blown. The mules jumped forward, snapping the whiffletree, which struck Carr across the throat, knocking him down the embankment. When picked up it was found that his neck was broken. A physician was soon on the spot but the man was dead. The deceased resided at Grove Springs, Oneida Lake.

The Palladium's Hannibal correspondent says: Mr. Sampson of Mexico is here looking after his interests as county superintendent of the poor upon the Republican ticket. He has called upon his friend, Abigail Schoonmaker formerly of the county asylum.

The Phœnix Register says: Notwithstanding the general satisfaction with which the nomination of Blaine was received in this village we have heard no talk of organizing a campaign club as yet. Nearly every other town in this vicinity has one but they are not making a great deal of noise, and, in fact, with the exception of the bustle of the numerous county candidates everything is very quiet, and the silver tongued village orators are dumb.

GOV. CLEVELAND'S LIFE.

Grover Cleveland is the great-grandson of Aaron Cleveland, a Congregational minister, who was born at Norwich, Conn., in 1774, and lived there most of his life. Aaron Cleveland was a man of singular versatility, who carried on the hat business, wrote voluminously in prose and poetry, and was a staunch abolitionist. One of Aaron Cleveland's son's was father Charles Cleveland, city missionary of Boston, who lived to be nearly 100 years old. Another of Aaron's sons, William, a silversmith, was deacon of the Congregational church at Norwichtown, for twenty-five years previous to his death in 1837. The youngest of Aaron Cleveland's thirteen children was the wife of Dr. Samuel H. Coxe, whose son, Arthur Cleveland Coxe, became Episcopal Bishop of Western New York. Grover Cleveland's father was Richard Falling Cleveland the second son of Wm. Cleveland, the silversmith. After graduating at Yale in 1824, the Governor's father taught school in Baltimore, studied theology in Princeton, and became a Presbyterian clergyman at Windham, near Norwich, 1828. He married a daughter of Abner Neal of Baltimore in 1829, preached a short time in Portsmouth, Va., and then settled in Caldwell, Essex county, N. J., where Grover Cleveland was born in 1837. The baptismal name was Stephen Grover Cleveland, but at an early age the Stephen was dropped, and afterward the Governor has been known as Grover Cleveland.

The Governor's parents had nine children, Anna, the eldest, was the wife of Dr. Hastings, missionary to Ceylon; William N. is a Presbyterian minister at Forestport, N. Y.; Mary became Mrs. W. E. Hoyt; Cecil and Frederick were the proprietors of a popular winter resort at Nashua, and lost their lives at the burning of the steamship Missouri off the Bahamas in 1872; Margaret became Mrs. N. B. Bawn; Susan is the wife of L. Youmans, and another sister, Rose, is unmarried.

When Grover Cleveland was three years old his father moved to Fayetteville, and the boy was sent to the academy at Clinton, N. Y., where he got the bulk of his education. His father was too poor to send him to college. He left school at 16 and went to work in the village grocery store at $50 a year.

Upon the death of his father he came to New York and was for a time a teacher in the New York Asylum for the Blind, at Ninth avenue and 34th street. In May, 1855, he took up his residence with his uncle, Lewis F. Allen, a breeder of fancy stock, at Black Rock, Ill, whom he assisted in the publication of a herd book. He determined to study law, and began at a salary of $4 a week, in the office of Rogers, Bowen & Rogers, at Buffalo, walking, rain or shine, to the house of his uncle two miles distant, often with scanty clothing. He studied hard, amid many privations, and got about all of his pleasures out of his law books.

He was admitted to the bar in 1859, and was appointed Assistant District Attorney of Erie county in 1863. He was drafted while serving his term as Assistant District Attorney and furnished a substitute. At the close of the term he was nominated for the office of District Attorney of Erie county, but was defeated by L. K. Bass, Republican.

He then engaged in an extensive and lucrative practice as a lawyer, and was successively in partnership with I. K. Vanderpoel, A. P. Lansing, Oscar Folsom, his former antagonist, L. K. Bass, Wilson S. Bissell, and George J. Sicard.

He was elected Sheriff of Erie county in 1869. At the close of his term as Sheriff he resumed the practice of law. Two years afterward he was selected as the reform candidate for mayor of Buffalo. The campaign was a vigorous one, and he was elected by the largest majority ever given in Buffalo.

In Buffalo he was a prominent figure. He was a member of the Buffalo club, Vice-Pres. of the City Club and one of the Vice Presidents of the State Bar Association.

His election as Governor by a majority of nearly 200,000 was a surprise to even his firmest friends, and was partly in consequence of the fact that many Republicans either voted for him or remained away from the polls.

In person the Governor is a little above the medium height, well proportioned and portly. His thin, dark hair is tinged with gray and his eyes are dark. He wears no whiskers, but a heavy dark moustache. Notwithstanding the number of preachers in his family he has not been prominent in religious matters, and has since his manhood, devoted nearly all of his time to the law. He is a bachelor.

Thomas A. Hendricks.

Thomas A. Hendricks was born a Buckeye, his native place being a small village in Muskingum county, not far from Zanesville, O. In 1822, when he was 3 years old, his father moved to Shelby county, Ind., and that State has since been his home. His father had sufficient property to educate his children, and at the age of 22 young Hendricks was graduated at Hanover College. He went immediately to Chambersburg, Pa., where he studied law, and two years later was admitted to the bar. He then returned to Indiana, and in the village of Shelbyville hung out his shingle. Old acquaintances say he made a quick success, both by his knowledge of the law and by his attractive personal characteristics. It is said that the late Gov. Morton, when opposing young Hendricks, could usually win before a jury, but in an argument before a Judge Hendricks would beat him every time.

In 1848 Hendricks was elected a member of the State Legislature, and two years later helped to form a Constitution for his State. The next five years he served his district in Congress. Then one morning, while sitting on the portico of his home in Shelbyville, a friend handed him a franked envelope postmarked "Washington." It was from Franklin Pierce, asking him to come on to Washington and take the office of Land Commissioner. He accepted, and for nearly four years discharged the duties of that post. He remained in office one year longer than he intended to because of a controversy with Land Officer Burch of Missouri. Burch's son had taken up a very large tract of the best land in Missouri, and Burch wanted to get a patent for the young man, contrary to law and right. Hendricks cut off the grab, and stayed in office long enough to see that it should not again be attempted. While Commissioner he heard and decided 23,000 contested land claims.

His standing before the people of his State made him the Democratic candidate for Governor in 1860. That was not a good year for Democratic candidates, and Henry S. Lane defeated him. Lane went to the Senate at once, and Morton succeeded to the Governor's chair. Two years later the Democrats turned the State Legislature and Senate inside out, and the new Houses at once elected Hendricks United States Senator for the term expiring in 1869. This was the opportunity which Hendricks needed to give him a national reputation. Democrats could do little more than protest in those days, but Hendricks protested against the Republican reconstruction methods so effectually that he was the most conspicuous candidate before the Democratic National Convention held in New York city in 1868. CHEESE MARKETS.

[From the Utica Herald.]

AT UTICA.

Cheese had some value in Utica Monday, at least ¾c. more than a week ago, and that fact created considerable excitement on the board. It remains to be seen whether the price is too strong or not, a good many fearing that it is too good to last. There were about 1600 boxes less shipped than the corresponding week last year, and the make of the flush has already come upon the market, so that it is probable that the heaviest shipments of the season have been made. There are some holding back still to-day, and no one shipped more than seven days make; and if other parts of the country do not overdo matters there will probably be no more cheese to arrive in the city than will the city than will be really needed to fill orders. By reference to our files we find that exactly one year ago the market advanced ¼c for the same reason it has advanced this week, viz: to fill contracts for June cheese.

Transactions of the day were as follows: 5 lots, 700 boxes at 8½c; 10 lots, 1300 boxes at 8¾c; 76 lots, 8144 boxes at 9c; 5 lots, 588 boxes, at 9⅛c; 10 lots, 966 boxes at 9¼c; 3 lots, 345 boxes at 9⅜c; 3 lots, 624 boxes at 9½c. Sales, 12,667 boxes; commissions, 2,082 boxes; total, 14.749 boxes. Ruling price 9c. Transactions of corresponding day in 1883, 16,335 boxes, ruling price 10c; in 1882, 11,580 boxes, ruling price 10⅞c.

MEETING OF THE BOARD.

Dairy Commissioner, J. K. Brown, was present at the board, and requested that a meeting be called. At the meeting he stated that his attention had been called to that clause of section 3 which says that "Every butter or cheese manufacturer, except those who buy all the milk they use, shall keep a correct account of all the milk daily received." Complaint is made to him that this is not done in many establishments, and he would suggest that a committee be appointed by the board to report the best mode of keeping account of the milk received. It should be kept in such a manner that if a patron died, his executor could tell by inspecting the record at the factory just how much was due to the estate.

Mr. Snell moved that a committee of five be appointed by the chair for this purpose. The motion was carried. Chairman Levi C. Smith named Ira D. Snell, Franklin Blanding, G. Merry, G. A. Smith, and B. D. Gilbert as the committee, which is expected to report next week.

AT LITTLE FALLS.

LITTLE FALLS, July 14, 1884.

Both salesmen and buyers appeared with pleasant countenances to-day, as it was well understood that cheese had advanced in price. Buyers operated with considerable caution, however, fearing that the advance may be too great and cause a reaction. Salesmen were not disposed to crowd their cheese forward, and only sold moderate quantities, the general feeling being that it was best to hold back some of the stocks. From inquiries made of many factorymen, we learn that cheese was sold off to about June 16, on the average, not considering two days' sales, which will not place the date more than five days later. Complaint is general of a large shrinkage in yield of milk, more than usual at this time in the year. Following are the sales of the day:

Lots	Boxes	Price
25	2,298	8¾
55	4,350	9c
1	160	9¼
15	1,598	9¾
2	129	p. t.
9	976	Com
107	9,411
Farm Dairy	858
Total	10 269

FARM DAIRIES.—This class of cheese did not sell quite up in price to shipping goods, the range being 8½ and 9c., the bulk going at 8¾c. The quantity sold was 858 boxes.

On Monday evening Police Justice VanWagenen issued a warrant for the arrest of Mrs. Joseph Barber for an assault claimed to have been committed upon Mrs. Robert Pollock on that evening. Yesterday morning a warrant was issued for the arrest of Mrs. Robert Pollock charging her with an assult alleged to have been committed upon Mrs. Barber the same evening. Mr. Cooley about a year ago was a student at Falley Seminary and has some acquaintances in Fulton.

Fruit Prospects.

The Rochester Union says: "Fruit, throughout western New York is looking well. The prospect for a large yield is excellent. In apples especially, the outlook is favorable. And, in spite of assorted spring weather, that might justify almost any kind of crop prediction there have not been the usual gloomy stories from Delaware about the failure of the peach crop On the contrary we are told that peaches are to be plentiful and as cheap as the canning companies will permit. There is not so much sacrifice of fruit now as there was twenty years ago, the canneries and railroads to distant markets affording opportunities for disposing of all the fruit that can be grown before it reaches such ruinous low prices as were quite common when the greater part of the Jersey and Delaware crop had to be sold for immediate and near-by consumption."

Cayuga County Crops Ruined.

About two o'clock Sunday morning a hail storm did terrible damage to growing crops between Port Byron and Conquest. The storm was about two miles wide and came from the west. Corn, wheat, oats and barley are leveled to the ground. Potatoes are ruined, and fruit trees are completely stripped. O'Neil, a farmer near the river, lost nearly twenty acres of the finest corn in the county. A poor man lost two acres of the only tobacco in the section large enough to be injured by the storm. The loss can scarcely be estimated.

The Churches.

At a meeting of the Presbyterian church and society of this village on Monday evening of last week to listen to the report of the committee which had been sent to various places to listen to clergymen and extend a call to the one which it was thought would meet the approval of the society, they reported that they had unamiously decided upon Mr. Myers of Owasco. The church then voted to extend a call to Rev. Mr. Myers. But on account of the serious illness in his family he will not be able to accept the call at once.

The Rev. [illegible] until further notice.

The Rev. Dr. Shaw, former pastor of the Presbyterian church in this village will occupy that pulpit next Sunday, both morning and evening.

The Rev. Thomas De Long, Congregational minister at Fredricksburg, Ohio, will preach at the M. E. church next Sunday both morning and evening.

The Rev. E. P. Burgess of Newark N. Y. occupied the pulpit at the Presbyterian church last Sunday.

They Go Over the Dam.

"Stag" Coe the well known boatman with a fishing party experienced an unpleasant occurrence while down the river last Friday afternoon. It seems that they were anchored a few rods above Battle Island dam and while busily engaged in fishing the anchor either broke or dragged, the boat gliding into the current without their notice. But when they discovered their situation, which was not until they were within a few feet of the edge, they made a fruitless attempt to check their flight and were carried over the dam. The boat was smashed in pieces while the occupants were hurled into the foaming waters. They fortunately escaped with a good ducking and a few slight bruises.

Base Ball.

A game of ball was played yesterday afternoon on the Fair ground between the Fulton club and a club from Phoenix. The score stood 24 to 26 in favor of Fulton. Gellis, the Fulton catcher had a finger knocked out of joint on the seventh innings. The Fulton boys played recklessly.

Several candidates are in the field in this district for the nomination of member of Assembly. Mr. G. M. Sweet of this village, who represented the district the past session to the general satisfaction, we believe of his constituents, is making an active canvas of the district. It has been customary in the past to renominate the member whose record has been satisfactory for the second term, and we presume the convention will make Mr. Sweet no exception to this rule.—Phœnix Register.

[illegible] Rejoicing in Fulton over the Nomination of the Reform Governor.

The reception in Fulton last Friday of the news of the nomination of Grover Cleveland for the Presidency by the Democratic National Convention was the occasion of great rejoicing among the Democrats and gave general satisfaction. A few luke-warm Democrats were of the opinion that the choice was a poor one while a number of Republicans declared themselves more than pleased with the nomination as they considered it a "walk-away" for their party. But the more level-headed politicians in both parties consider the ticket strong and hard to beat.

The ratification of the nominations in the evening was immense. A cannon was stationed on First street opposite the Universalist church and on the lower bridge and the firing was continued for some time. There was a large display of fireworks during which time there was a street procession and music by the Fulton concert band and a large fire blazed on First street. The celebration was a success and surpassed that of the Republicans.

A Republican's View.

H. N. Gilbert, who has attended both Chicago conventions and reported the proceedings to the Syracuse Standard says of the nomination of Cleveland when asked his opinion: "A good nomination for the Democrats, and quite pleasing for the Republicans too, but if they thing its to be an easy victory they will find themselves greatly mistaken. The nomination of Mr. Cleveland is very satisfactory to the Independents and they will doubtless give him a hearty and united support, while the rank and file of Tammany will march in solid column, they cannot be anything but Democrats, and will not follow John Kelly. Should he conclude to lead the "kickers" I cant say so much for the labor element proper throughout this State. I believe there will be sufficient numbers who like the principles of Blaine so much better than Cleveland—who has never sympathized with the working classes—to turn the scale and give the state of New York to the Republicans."

That Brilliant Meteor.

Over one hundred and fifty nebulæ which have escaped the vision of previous astronomers have recently been discovered by Dr. Lewis Swift, Director of the Warner Observatory, Rochester, N. Y. Y., immediately, giving the direction of view, motion, color, etc.

THE SUN.

NEW YORK, 1884.

About sixty million copies of The Sun have gone out of our establishment the past twelve months.

If you were to paste end to end all the columns of The Suns printed and sold last year you would get a continuous strip of interesting information, common sense wisdom, sound doctrine, and sane wit long enough to reach from Printing House Square to the top of Mount Copernicus in the Moon then back to Printing House Square, and then, three-quarters of the way back to the Moon again.

But The Sun is written for the inhabitants of this earth; this same strip of intelligence would girdle the globe twenty-seven or twenty-eight times.

If every buyer of a copy of The Sun during the past year has spent only one hour over it, and if his wife or grandfather has spent another hour this newspaper in 1883 has afforded the human race thirteen thousand years of steady reading, night and day.

It is only by little calculations like these that you can form any idea of the circulation of the most popular of American newspapers, or of its influence on the opinions and actions of American men and women.

The Sun is and will continue to be, a newspaper which tells the truth without fear of consequences, which gets at the facts no matter how much the process costs, which presents the news of all the world without waste of words and in the most readable shape, which is working with all its heart for the cause of honest government, and which therefore believes that the Republican party must go in the coming year of our Lord, 1884.

If you know The Sun, you like it already, and you will read it with accustomed diligence and profit during what is sure to be the most interesting year in its history. If you do not yet know he Sun it is high time to get into the sunshine.

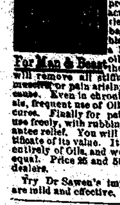
THE WORLD CHLLENGED



This liniment has been manufactured and used for twenty five years and our innumerable certificates of cure prove it to be an unparallel success. We do not offer it as an internal remedy, positively asserting that any liniment that can be taken into the stomach without injury can have little efficacy as a specific when externally applied. This being compounded of Oils, is readily absorbed into the system, giving prompt relief even in cases of acute pain caused by Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Sciatica, Lumbago, Sprains, Bruises, Chilblains, or from any cause where a liniment is demanded. The oils are so penetrating that a thorough use of the Liniment will remove all stiffness of joints, lameness of muscles or pain arising from inflammation or any cause. Even in chronic Spinal Disease, and Paralysis, frequent use of Oil Liniment will effect many cures. Finally for pain in any part of the body, use freely, with rubbing and warmth and we guarantee relief. You will find a trial of it the best certificate of its value. It is the only Liniment made entirely of Oils, and we challenge the world for its equal. Price 25 and 50 cents per bottle. Sold by dealers.

How Watch Cases are Made.

This process of manufacture was invented by James Boss, who started in business in 1854, and the methods and tools used in making these watch cases are covered by patents. This is the only watch case made under this process. For many years the introduction of these goods was slow, owing to popular prejudice against "plated" goods, but gradually the public learned that the James Boss' Gold Watch Case was not a cheap gold-washed or electro-plated article, but was made of genuine gold plates of standard quality and thickness. Conscientious adherence to the determination to make the best watch case ever put on the market, and the adoption of every improvement suggested, has made the James Boss' Gold Watch Case the STANDARD. In this watch case the parts most subject to wear—the bow, crown, hinges, thumb-catches, etc., are made of SOLID GOLD.

Send 3 cent stamp to Keystone Watch Case Factories, Philadelphia, Pa., for handsome Illustrated Pamphlet showing how James Boss' and Keystone Watch Cases are made.

The ecru canvas shoes remain in favor for country use.

The wide neck-ties of white mull discarded last year are again in favor.

Walking boots are of French kid, or else they have patent leather vamps.

Very dark navy blue, brown and red stockings are the colors most in favor.

Black stockings are still worn by children in preference to those of any color.

Small bonnets made of the dress material are worn with white mull dresses.

Black stockings are still commended with dresses of all colors and for all occasions.

Buttoned boots are most used, though there is a renewed effort to introduce laced shoes for walking.

Slippers for the house are cut very low in front, and have their box toes more sharply pointed than shoes.

Tucked spencer waists of white lawn, linen, or mull are again made to wear with silk, surah or grenadine.

Velvet in dark shades is becoming to most complexions and is largely used in trimming summer bonnets.

The English fashion of low heels for shoes is being followed to a great extent, though French heels are still worn.

Sailor hats for country drives, walks, etc., that imitate the pliable Mackinaw braids are restored to favor for young ladies.

Dressy princess wrappers are of white mull, with a Watteau fold behind, shirred to the neck, and falling wider open as it reaches the floor.

Stockings of silk or of brilliant lisle thread with a slight clocking on the sides are chosen in preference to more elaborately decorated ones.

Low shoes, with rounded toe and black or very dark blue, brown or red stockings will be worn out of doors more than they have been at any previous time.

Wrapper gowns that may serve for negligé day dresses or for night gowns in the Mother Hubbard shape made of lawn or cambric are stylish.

Compact round hats for young ladies to wear when travelling, or in the city around, close turbans with the high crown sloping in the Mother Hubbard shape make of lawn or cambric are stylish.

White figured satteen and the gay figured satteens of light ecru or cream grounds are much liked for Mother Hubbard gowns with the yoke and sleeves of embroidery.

Dressy slippers to be worn with black silk stockings on full dress occasions are of kid, with a jetted medallion cut on each, or with spaces cut out in diamond shapes and beaded.

What is called the slipper tie, and also the sailor tie, is a pretty slipper that laps slightly from the sides, and is tied through one or two sets of eyelets; this is liked for house slippers in the day time.

Large poke bonnets with high sloping crowns are in vogue for out of town wear. They have a great bow of gay crape or of white mull in front, or else the brim is nearly covered with roses, or with a bunch of field flowers and grasses.

RELIGIOUS READING.

There are said to be five hundred abstaining Free Church ministers in Scotland, while the Irish Presbyterian church has 311 of its ministers (a majority) enrolled as abstainers, including nearly all of the young men recently ordained.

The Queen of Sweden has sent to England £2,000 to the fund for translating, printing, and distributing gospel tracts among the children of different lands, and has accepted ten thousand Swedish leaflets for distribution among the children of Stockholm.

Henry L. Miller and his wife Catherine A· have presented to the Presbyterian church at Valatie, N. Y., a valuable bell made by C. H. Meneely, which was placed in its tower on Wednesday, July 2, and bears the following inscription: "Let him that heareth say come." Appropriate exercises were held Thursday evening the 3d inst.

A good work is in progress in Atlanta, Texas. Twelve persons have professed a hope in Christ and more are deeply interested. The evangelist of Paris Presbytery, Rev. W. N. Dickey organized a church there on June 23 with five members. The prospect is good. The town has 1,500 people and is growing,

There was Another Question.

Since Wednesday he had been in the country, out of the reach of the newspapers. Late Saturday he arrived at the Union station. His two boys were there to meet him. They grabbed his valise, and ran to get in the street car. As soon as they sat down, the younger son exclaimed:

"Papa, mama told me—"

"How's base ball?" the father interrupted eagerly. "Who beat Thursday?"

"The Baltimores. Mama said—"

"Who pitched?"

"Henderson. But mama told—"

"Who beat Friday?"

"The Mets got whipped again. But as I was going to say, mama—"

"Good enough! How about to day!"

"Mets won—score 17 to 11. But, really, mama—"

"The mischief they did! What was the matter?"

"Don't know—they played bad. Mama—"

"Did Henderson pitch?"

"Yes, sir; and Clinton made seven errors, and—"

"That's a shame—perfect disgrace! What's the matter? Let's see—there's another question. O, yes, how's your mother?"

Angle-worms in beds of earth, or the awn, may be destroyed by freely sprinkling with limewater. Made as strong as possible it will not hurt the plants.

In small gardens tomatoes should never be allowed to lie on the ground. Supports in the way of horizontal wires or slates fastened to upright posts pay for the trouble they cost. The fruit will be earlier, more plentiful and so much nicer if kept out of the dirt.

After the early garden crops are off the ground is usually left to go to weeds. This is very injurious as the seeds of the weeds remain as a disturber of the next year's crop's. It will pay to spade up all vacant places and keep them clean, whether intended for another crop or not.

It is said that a solution made of water and poultry droppings will prevent the striped bugs from injuring squashes. The mixture should be allowed to ferment and the application [illegible]. It will also greatly assist in hastening the growth of the vines.

Galls are liable to appear on horses newly put to work, or those breaking in a new harness or saddle. A few days rest until the abraded parts heal and harden should be allowed if possible. Nothing will cause a fresh and bleeding gall to dry up and cicatrise, as soon as a little table salt sprinkled upon it, To prevent white hair, a mixture of burned leather, lard and gunpowder is valuable.

If the squash branches are vigorous and long stretch them over a level surface and bury every fourth or fifth joint, as wherever the plant is buried new roots are formed for the better nutrition of the stem and fruit. The squash bears male and female blossoms on the same plant, the latter only producing the fruit. If the fruit is allowed to remain on the vines after ripening much of the flavor will be lost.

For self-milking cows the old devise of a neck rack which prevents the turning of the head to the side, is prehaps the best preventative known. This consists of two square frames placed around the neck and connected with each other at the four corners by light sticks, which keep them about a foot apart. A cow's appearance is not improved by such a fixture, but the bad habit may be broken in time.

TEMPERANCE NOTES.

"The average life of temperance people is sixty-three years and two months, while the average life of intemperate people is thirty-five years and eight months. Thus the average life of a drinker is but little more than half that of an intemperate drinker, and yet we are asked to believe that brandy, gin, whisky, and beer are wonderful promoters of health."—Dr. Willard Parker.

A saloon keeper of Indianapolis remarks: "Sir, let me tell you that the keeper of the lowest saloon on the South side, where they throw dice for five-cent whisky, knows more about controlling votes on the morning of election than the richest wholesale merchant who worships at church." That is about the size of it. Saloons practically control municipal elections. They control the balance of power. It is time for law-abiding people to speak.—Kokoma (Ind.) Gazette.

Hon. John D. White writes: "To be perfectly frank with you I think it quite as imported to arouse the good people of the State to a just appreciation of their duties to attend every election, to cast their vote for the best man, and to have their vote honestly counted, as it is to have prohibition victorious. In fact the latter is impossible until the former is an accomplished fact; until the value of the ballot is appreciated and used by every good citizen in the State at every election, we may expect the bummers to control the politics and make the laws of our State."—Louisville Worker.

Popularity and usefelness of Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy—A Thrilling Letter from a Master Mechanic.

Master Mechanic's & Superintendent's Office

Lowell, Mass., March 25, 1884.

Dr. David Kennedy, Rondout, N. Y.

Dear Sir: I think it is due to you that I should make the following statement, and I make it voluntarily and willingly; On the 4th day of June, 1881, I was taken with what was called paralysis of the bowels. The seizure was unexpected and terrible. The stomach and other organs seemed to sympathize with it and to have lost all power of action. For a long time my life was despaired of, but at length I recovered so far as to be able to ride out. By the advice of my phisician I visited Poland Springs (Vt.) hoping to benefit from the waters. But they did me no good. Neither were the best physicians of Lowell and Boston, whom I consulted, able to afford me more than transcient relief. I gained no strength and my case appeared almost hopeless. In the Fall a friend advised me to try KENNEDY'S FAVORITE REMEDY, and although opposed to patent medicines, I made the trial. To make a long story short—FAVORITE REMEDY, in my opinion, saved my life. I consider it the best preparation in the world for stomach difficulties, as well as of the Liver and other organs. I am glad to say it is in general use among the R. R. men in this vicinity.

BY MARY E. [illegible]

I planted a seed in my garden,
A seed that was grandly fair.
I knew it was pure and holy—
I gave it my constant care.

Each morning among the dew drops
I stood where the seed was laid;
And from the heat of the noonday
I gave it a tender shade.

I brought for its thirst cool waters
In goblets of crystal rare;
I thought that a glorious blossom
Would pay me for constant care.

[illegible] in the budding season
Had faded into the past,
How fondly I watched the leaflets
That were blending my hope at last.

How lovingly cared I for it,
How lovingly watched it grow—
The bud of such golden promise,
The bud that so soon must blow.

The spring-time showers gave it
Their touches of loving balm;
The summer heats came softly
With hints of eternal calm.

And there, in my beloved garden,
I stood in a wild despair,
And I watched the thing I'd fostered,
That was neither pure nor fair.

And there, as I tore the worthless
And horrible growth away,
A soil all broken and barren
Before me in silence lay.

A spot of its beauty cheated
My days of their watchful care—
A weed had grown, protected,
Instead of a blossom rare.

And yet, as I look in wonder
And pain at the with'ring weed,
I remembered that there I planted
A pure and a golden seed.

MR. BROWNE'S HEIRESS.

When I had begun to make a little progress, and had saved enough to enable me to do so, I determined to give myself several weeks' stay in the country, where I hoped to recruit my health, at the same time that I pursued my studies.

I meant to live as cheaply as possible, and work hard all the time; yet it was with a host of pleasant anticipations that I jumped into a third class carriage at Liverpool street, and, after a three hours' journey arrived at the quiet little country station for W—. After having ascertained from one of the porters that there were good lodgings to be had at the village inn, I walked up the platform toward the place of exit. As I passed the first-class carriages, my attention was arrested by one of the windows being let down in a violent hurry.

"Eh, porter! where are you all?" exclaimed an irritable voice, belonging to a stout elderly gentleman, who was struggling with swollen gouty fingers to turn the stiff handle of the door.

With some difficulty I managed to open it for him, just as the station-master had given the signal for the train to move on.

The porter, catching sight of me opening the door as the train was moving, shouted to me to "stand back!" and ran to enforce his command; but the irrate passenger forced open the door, which the official had nearly reshut, and jumped out, falling as he did so with one foot between the platform and the train.

Catching him as he fell, while the porter at the same moment signaled for the train to stop, I was fortunate enough to extricate the old gentleman from his perilous position.

"It's Mr. Browne! I hope you're not hurt, sir!" exclaimed the station master coming up.

"Hurt! he replied, stuttering with rage. "I'll—I'll report every man jack of you. If it had not been for this gentleman.—"

"He knows 'twarn't my fault," said the porter sulkily; "you would get out o'that train arter she'd started."

"In that case," began the station master, very deferently, "if Jones is correct—"

"Correct! The rascal—I—I—"

"The man is right so far," I interrupted; "but there was no one near to open the carriage door, and at the last moment, after some difficulty, I opened it myself."

"Gross neglect—ugh!" with a growl of pain; "and as sure as I'm a director—ugh!—"

"I am afraid you are severly hurt," I interrupted; "let me assist you to the waiting-room."

"No; no, straight home at once! my carriage is waiting," he replied, taking my arm, and answering only by a fierce growl the sulky apologies of the porter he limped painfully to his carriage. Just as I had helped him in the station-master [illegible] up and exclaimed:

"I trust you're not seriously hurt, I—"

"Hurt!" he growled with renewed indignation. "I think I have only broken my leg, but that's nothing—nothing of any consequence!"

"You see, Mr. Browne, it's not your usual train, sir," replied the crestfallen official. "Will you let me send the doctor on?" he asked.

"No!" roared the old gentleman.

"I think that would be the wisest plan," I suggested; "for though I think [illegible] can be nothing more than a bad [illegible]—"

"Good gracious, sir! What can you [illegible] it? I tell you I'm in agony. [illegible]," to the station-master, who stood [illegible] his instructions, "why d'ye [illegible] there?" Then to me as I [illegible] to go: "Get in, can't you? [illegible]"

"[illegible] you, but I must find my way [illegible]," I replied, rather stiffly, for [illegible] the tone of his request. [illegible] it all! Can't you see that [illegible] with pain?" he asked irritably. [illegible] that I am going to [illegible] a wretched country [illegible]

[illegible] tressed at my refusal I yielded to his wish, and after half an hour's drive found myself established as an honored guest in his luxurious home. He insisted that I should take up my quarters there during my stay at W—. Every obstacle that I raised was surmounted by him with such perseverance that, in spite of myself, I was forced to yield to his desire.

It was certainly pleasant at Dalehurst. All that wealth could procure was to be found there, for its owner was rich and allowed Genevieve, his daughter, carte blanche in the exercise of her cultivated and refined tastes. His daughter ah! how can I describe her? Beautiful, intellectual, gracious and an enthuiast about art, was it wonderful that I lost my heart long before I knew it? When I did discover it—but I must speak of the happy days that preceded the shock of that discovery.

As I had supposed, Mr. Browne's injury proved to be nothing more dangerous than a severe sprain, but it kept him a prisoner for several days, and as I was always out at work till dinner-time, he grew to look forward to my presence in the evening in quite a ridiculous manner.

He was very much interested in my pictures, although he knew nothing about art, but he thought he did, and his daughter's sympathetic appreciation atoned for his incomprehensible criticisms, and was dangerously delightful to me.

I think, too, that he knew my position Mr. Browne acted in a most thoughtful way, for he insisted that Genevieve should take lessons of me; and what could he expect when two young people, with so many sympathies and tastes in common, were so constantly thrown together? I can conscientiously declare that, had I realized my danger, I should have fled long before I did, for I believe at that time Genevieve was her father's heiress, while I was a poor struggling artist.

When one morning my host announced that he expected his nephew, Reginald Vane, and some friends down for the shooting. I felt a vague presentiment that something unpleasant was in store for me, and insisted on taking up my quarters at the inn, for I knew that with a house full of young people whose sole idea was amusement, while mine was work. I should be out of place and at a disadvantage. Genevieve, however would not hear of giving up her lessons, and whenever they took place it was invariably insisted upon that I should remain to dine at Dalehurst.

The moment I saw Reginald Vane I conceived an intense aversion to him, and he took no pains to hide the fact that the feeling was mutual.

The first evening I spent in his society he treated me with a supercilious affectation of superiority which made my blood boil. The fact that he was in love with his cousin, and madly jealous of every man that found the slightest favor in her eyes, restrained me from resenting his many impertinences; but there is a limit to forbearance, and when one evening after I had been singing with Genevieve, he made some insulting allusion to fortune-hunters, pointing his remark with a look at me that no one could mistake, we came to an open quarrel.

The next morning I sought an interview with Mr. Browne to bid him farewell.

"Tut, tut, man!" he answered cordially. "So that jealous idiot has been showing his airs to you, eh? He spoke to me last night, but I told him I knew you and could trust you."

But I knew that I could not trust myself, so begging him to make my excuses and adieux to Genevieve,, I departed with the intention of seeing her no more.

I was at the time at work on a landscape, which would keep me, as I reckoned, about a week longer in the neighborhood, but for the next day or two my picture made little or no progress; work seemed an impossibility.

Then a feverish energy seized me; I was presumptous enough to believe that Genevieve returned my love; a thousand significant trifles helped me to this conclusion. With such an incentive to spur me on I told myself that I must quickly win the wealth and position which would give me a right to speak. With a rapidity which surprised even myself I finished my picture and began another to pair with it.

Day after day I worked, exposed to sun, and scarcely stopping while the light lasted even to take necessary food.

About 3 o'clock one afternoon I had finished and started to return to the inn. I was feeling triumphantly excited—heart and brain were full of Genevieve. "If I could only see her once more!" I thought, as I pounded my way through the wood with down-bent head.

As if in answer to my longing, on looking up suddenly I saw her. She was at some little distance from me, and as with eager steps I hurried forward I perceived that she was not alone. I stopped, dizzy and confounded, for her companion was my rival, Vane! her hands lay passively within his grasp she seemed to be listening willingly to his eager words; but no—suddenly the downcast eyes were raised—she spoke vehemently—she struggled to release herself. I rushed madly forward.

"It's a falsehood!" I heard her exclaim, "and you are a coward!"

Then her face was turned toward me in surprise, delighted recognition, her trouble and the next moment her [illegible] had measured his length on the ground, while I reeled and fell, for great darkness swam before me, then all was blank.

* * * * * * *

"I beg your pardon!" I [illegible] abently, for I had come into a [illegible] and violent collision with a lady [illegible] recognize her. "Miss Browne! is it possible, and alone? I have grown independent, you see," in slightly tremulous tones. "You must let me put you into a cab. Where are you going? I asked feeling like one who dreamed.

"Home—no, no, please! as I took umbrella and music-roll from her hand, "indeed, I cannot let you; but the words were weak and faltering, and I ventured to disobey.

Drawing her hand through my arm, I walked by her side in silence, for I could hear by her quick, irregular breathing that she was struggling with some painful emotion.

"What must you think of us?" she exclaimed at last—"our silence? It was not my fault. Are you quite strong again?"

By degrees I drew from her that they were quite poor now, and that she was giving daily music lessons in order to support herself and her father, who was quite weak and ill and terribly altered. Quite poor indeed they were, and living in apartments to which her tasteful arrangement of relics that remained to them of their prosperous days, Genevieve had nevertheless managed to impart an air of refinement and elegance. It was only just in time that I had found them, for poor old Mr. Browne, as any one could see, quite broken up, and seemed to depend entirely upon his daughter. She told me that when I had come upon them in the wood, her cousin had just been refused by her, upon which he taxed her for entertaining an affection for a penniless fortune-hunter, who had been kicked out of Dalehurst as soon as her father became aware of his presumptuous designs. Then followed her indignant words, and my interference and sudden faint. As a whole party had been picnicking there, help was not far off, and Mr. Browne would have had me carried to Dalehurst had it not been for his nephew's strenuous opposition.

'A few days afterward her father had spoken to her, and begged her to receive Vane's attentions favorably. Gradually it came out that he had been speculating and was ruined if she did not help him to retrieve his position by this marriage, but this he did not tell her till they had all quitted Dalehurst for the continent, and she had again refused her cousin. From her mother she had inherited a sum which brought her fifty pounds a year. Upon this pittance and what she could make by teaching my brave girl had struggled to maintain herself and her father until now. I had not been mistaken with regard to Genevieve's sentiments, for I had won from her a confession that she had loved me from the first. So now that there was no money to come between us, I asked and obtained her father's consent to our union. We were married very quietly, both for the sake of economy and her father's declining health.

Among the relics of his former grandeur Mr. Brown had retained a picture which, in spite of everybody, he had always persisted in believing to be of great value. This he presented with much satisfaction to his daughter on the occasion of her marriage. He was getting quite childish now, and she nursed and humored him with unfailing sweetness and devotion.

One morning, on coming down into the kitchen, I found her busily engaged in cleaning her father's picture.

"What are you doing?" I asked.

"I am trying to make this 'old and valuable picture' look a little more decent," she replied, laughing gayly. "Poor papa has taken it into his head to give it the place of honor in the dining room."

Of course I grumbled, for it was really an awful production, and equally, of course, darling coaxed me into acquiescence.

"Look hear, dear," she exclaimed, very suddenly, "how oddly this paint has peeled off here in the corner! It looks as if there were another picture underneath."

I looked carelessly at first, then curiously.

"So it does," I replied, and taking the cloth from her hand I carefully continued the process till about four square inches had been cleaned off, revealing part of a limb.

"My word!" I exclaimed, and Genevive must have thought me mad, for catching up the picture I hurried away with it to my studio, packed it up, tore out of the house, took a cab and in half an hour's time was excitedly watching the operations of the restorer to whom I had taken it.

To make a long story short, it turned out to be a Corregio which some Goth had covered, with his own infamous daub. It was sent to Christie & Manson's and sold for £2,500. Mr. Browne's triumph may be easily imagined, but he would not allow that the money belonged to him. "It was his dear girl's dowry," he said.

"So you see you have married an heiress, after all, you mean fortune hunter!" cried Genevieve, with glad tears in her eyes.

"Yes, and therefore I shall paint no more pot boilers!" I exclaimed. I kept to this resolve and next year I had a picture in the Academy.

Before and after Marriage.

Not unfrequently both men and women expect more from their marriage than it is human nature to yield. In the romantic courting days the love-making is fresh, and sweet and all engrossing, and the unreflecting innocents are deluded into the belief that the belief that the bonds of matrimony are alone needed to secure them a life of love and joy at the high fever heat of the warm, youthful moments. But such an anticipation of love upon this earth cannot be. The heat must cool down, and the intoxication of love sober into the tranquility of friendship. It is a great matter to get through the cooling process safely. The danger is, that when it begins, one, or other, or both, ignorant that its cause lies in the nature of things, may throw the blame on an innocent partner, and in his or her sweet heart sigh over the awful misfortune of a dreary union. This would not happen so frequently as it does if, as is often the case, the husband and wife were to cool down at the same rate. As a rule the lady will hold on to the tender love making much longer than the gentleman. It is the man that cools and the woman that is broken-hearted.

Among the causes of evil lying near the surface there is our system of courtship, which seems as if especially designed for mischief. To be kind and attentive to the object of one's affections is natural on the part of both man and woman. But, according to the custom, the gentleman must do all the wooing, the labor of love making falls to him, and, as a rule, he does not spare himself. For weeks, for months, for years, he worships at the feet of the fair one without complaint, flattery and endless attentions. He seems the slave of her smallest wish. In all this there is much acting, often much conscious acting. Marriage is the dropping of the curtain; with it ends the merry but, in its consquences, melancholy farce. And when he sees the effect of the play he sincerely wishes it had never been. The attentions cannot continue. Nor is it desirable that they should. Yet in getting them for a time, women are taught to expect them forever. The arrangement is cruel to women. It is like the practice of first spoiling children, and then punishing them for being spoiled.—Brooklyn Eagle.

JOHN A. McKAY - - EDITOR

CLEVELAND AND HENDRICKS clubs are sprouting rapidly throught the Country.

A LETTER from Detroit to Governor Cleveland says that Michigan will give Cleveland a majority which will make even the eyes of Democrats open in wonder.

JOHN C. ENO, ex-president of the Second National bank, writes to a friend that he intends to live in Quebec. He has sent for his family to join him. His brother is already with him.

CLEVELAND'S letter of acceptance is looked for with much interest as it is expected that he will explain satisfactorily that part of the Democratic platform which refers to tariff and which is being so thoroughly discussed.

A PLOT to blow up the palace at Warsaw, Russia, during the Czar's stay has been discovered. Justice of the Peace Barborski is suspected of complicity in the conspiracy. The arms and dynamite to have been used by the plotters have been found.

THE Kansas Republican State convention was held at Topeka, last week. John A. Martin, editor of the Atchison Champipn, was unanimously nominated for Governor. The platform pledges to Blaine and Logan the largest Republican majority ever given in the State.

WM. PURCELL, editor of the Rochester Union has taken a vacation and expects to go to Europe during the fall campaign The fact is that Mr. Purcell declines to support the Democrtic presidential nominee. Republican journals are much pleased over his "bolting."

THE eight hour movement is now under discussion in all the trades and labor societies with a view to its adoption next Spring. It would have been far better had it taken practical shape a few years ago instead of asking higher wages first. More men would have secured employment and wages would consequently have advanced anyhow.—The Carpenter.

THE first American manufacturer to employ Hungarian labor was Mr. B. F. Jones, the new Chairman of the Republican National Committee. In 1866, he met a strike of his skilled mechanics by importing pauper laborers, and only yielded when the experiment proved inexpedient. Mr. Jones now insists on making the canvass on the issue of protection to American labor.—[Harrisburg Patirot.

LIEUT. GREELEY and six survivors of his unfortunate arctic exhibition, were rescued by the relief vessels Thetis and Bear, on June 22d, in Smith's Sound. Eighteen members of the Greeley party had perished of starvation and if relief had been forty-eight hours later the six survivors would also have perished. The news was received with joy and sorrow throughout the country. This will we hope, end these foolish expeditions. We endorse the words of an Auburn paper which says "Let the north pole discover us, if it is positively necessary that we should come together."

THE cholera is still spreading with fearful rapidity and disasterous results in France. It is expected that the epidemic will spread throughout Europe before long. The health officers of the United States have been authorized to take all the precaution possible against it. There is but little danger of its reaching America if these officers do their duty. It is well, however to be prepaired. See that your cellars and yards are kept clean and let no filth accumilate or dirty water stagnate about your premises. Our intelligent people are sufficiently posted to be on their guard against these epidemics, BLAINE'S letter of acceptance has come before the public. His letter is lengthy and scholarly. It is a revision of the financial condition of the country since 1860, or since the Republican party went into power, interspersed with suggestions of his able logic of the proper way to handle the great nation for its prosperity and the welfare of the working men. Many valuable and interesting facts are expressed in this letter and we advise all who can to read it and also to read Cleveland's letter when it is presented. Then you have the opinion of the two able candidates upon the great questions of the day, which will tend in a great measure in choosing your man.

WE think Governor Cleveland has been an Independant governor, a governor of the people and not of a party. He will no doubt recieve a large support from the independant voters which will surprise not a few when the votes are counted. To say that the Republican party have a walk-away this fall is a very foolish assertion. Tammany hall will support him without John Kelly and the rank and file of the party are daily falling into line. In the eyes of the public Governor Cleveland will grow stronger in not being linked hand in hand with Kelly. Although Governor Cleveland's public career has been rather brief he is able and capable of performing the duties of President. Good honest Republicans are proud of him."

He is a friend of the working man despite the lies that are daily published in Republican journals and has done more for the interests of the workingmen than any other governor New York state ever had. There is no question but what [illegible] is a brilliant man but he is not the man the majority of the people want this time. We do not make this statement simply from our view but [illegible] of public opinion, the [illegible]

Rev. A. W. Paul, of German, having received a call from the Free Baptist church, at Redfield, Oswego county, N. Y., has accepted the same and has commenced his pastoral work on that field. His family will remain in German until fall. Mr. Paul was for two years pastor of the Free Baptist church in this village and has a host of friends here. The church at Redfield is fortunate in securing the services of such an able and devoted preacher as Rev. A. W. Paul. [Quill and Press.

Mr. Kirkland, who has been agent at State Bridge, Oswego county, for the N. Y. O & W. railroad company most of the time since the road opened, was found dead in the station Thursday. He was quite an old man, and had a bunk in the depot where he was in the habit of lying down. He was on duty at the morning trains, and when the local freight passed at 11:44 the conductor saw him lying on the bed as he supposed asleep, with his arms folded across his breast and his new regulation railroad cap pulled down over his eyes. About 1 p. m. a lady living near the station, not seeing the old gentleman around as usual, went over and discovered him there, and on attempting to arouse him found he was dead.

An [illegible] days [illegible] on the West Shore [illegible] in a lively race between the [illegible] trains on the way from Lyons to Newark. For several miles west of Lyons the West Shore tracks are in close proximity to those of the New York Central. The race course could not be finer. The West Shore train leaves Lyons at 4:53, and just then the Central "flyer" comes tearing along and one can quickly feel the increased speed of the train. For a few moments the valve is thown wide open and for four miles the trains have a red hot race. The passengers become much excited, and signal the near by racer. The powerful engines of the West Shore brought us into Newark a trifle ahead although the race was "neck and neck." H. N. G.

YOU CAN HAVE IT.

"My dear, what would I give to have your hair" is often said by middle aged ladies to young ones. Madam you may have just such hair. Parker's hair balsam will give it to you. It will stop your hair from falling out, restore the original color and make it long, thick, soft and glossy. You need not stand hopelessly envying the girls. The balsam is not oily, not a dye but is an elegant dressing, and is especially recommended for cleanliness and purity. 10t4

THE auditor of the state of Indiana says that the fences of that state would extend around the world fourteen and one-half times, counting circumference of the world at 25,000 miles. These fences have cost $117,000,000 or $10,000,000 less than the valuation of the live stock of that state. If laid flat on the ground these fences would cover 550 square miles.

DON'T GIVE UP THE SHIP.

It doesn't follow that a patient will die because doctors have given him up, or that he will recover because they promise to pull him through. It is never too late to try the virtues of Parker's Tonic. Mr. Michael Guilfoyle, of Binghampton, N. Y., was cured of rheumatism by it after ten years of unspeakable suffering. Mr. R. W. Mosher, druggist, of same city, certifies that he has sold over a thousand bottles of Parker's through its reputation for this and other cures. 10tf

THE following were the receipts from the internal revenue during the fiscal year in the New York districts: First district, $2,685,000; second, $1,576,000; third, $4,055,000; eleventh, $10,000; twelfth, $48,000; fourteenth, $635,000; fifteenth, $777,000; twenty-first, $883,000; twenty-fourth, $41,000; twenty-fifth, $14,000; twenty-eighth, $2,014,000; thirtieth, $115,000. Some of these were consolidated in August, and collections in them are for the period between July 1 and the date of consolidation.

JOHN KELLY was born in New York sixty-two years ago.

Wolcott, Wayne Co., N. Y.
Rheumatic Syrup Co., Gentlemen:—For many years I have been a great sufferer with rheumatism. Much of the time I had but little use of my arms; my hands were drawn out of shape and nearly lost the use of one of my limbs. I have been treated by the best physicians, and have taken many different remedies that were highly represented, but grew worse all the time until I commenced using Rheumatic Syrup, and before I had used one bottle I began to improve, and after taking the Syrup four weeks I was completely cured, and to-day I am as well as ever, and can use my hands and limbs as freely as when a boy. The effect of the Rheumatic Syrup has been truly wonderful in my case, and I find on inquiry that it is doing equally well in evey other case where it is being used. JACOB WILLIAMS.

Wells A. Allen, an extensive dealer in tobacco at Baldwinsville, made a general assignment Tuesday. The preferred claims aggregate about $4,000.

HIGH PRICED BUTTER.

Dairymen often wonder how their more favored competitors get such high prices for their butter the year round. It is by always having a uniform gilt edged article. To put the "gilt edge" on, when the pastures do not do it, they use Wells, Richardson & Co's. Improved Butter Color. Every butter maker can do the same. Sold everywhere and warranted as harmless as salt, and perfect in operation.

Men are engaged to-day in breaking up ground on the Dodge lot, corner of Fourth and Broadway, preparatory to building the reservoir house for the water works.

A GREAT DISCOVERY.

Mr. Wm. Thomas, of Newton, Ia., says: "My wife has been seriously affected with a cough for twenty-five years, and this spring more severely than ever before. She had used many remedies without relief, and being urged to try Dr. King's New Discovery, did so with most gratifying results. The first bottle [illegible] [illegible] against the [illegible] we cannot say that it has [illegible] undeserved, because, of all [illegible] compound, thick, hard, and heavy, that is too often made to do duty as a "crust," and which by courtesy is called "pastry. Light, tender, flakey, and digestible pie-crust and all kinds of pastry can be make most readily by the use of Royal Baking Powder without any butter, or with half the usual portion, if preferred, or with a small quantity of lard or other shortening as desired. Pie-crust thus made is much more wholesome and digestible, besides being more economical and easier prepared. In addition to saving all the butter if desired, one-third the flour is also dispensed with, as the crust is rolled that much thinner, the leavening qualities of the Royal Baking Powder swelling it to the requisite thickness. If drippings or lard be used the Royal Baking Powder removes any unpleasant taste, rendering the crust as short, sweet and pleasant as if made from the finest butter. Those who know the appetising qualities of the genuine home-made American pie will rejoice that by the aid of Royal Baking Powder in the pastry it can be made quite as digestible as it is delicious.

Hops.

The Utica Observer hop market report says: Reports from the hop growing region states that the recent cold weather has acted against the growth of the vine, and the growth has been extremely checked. The hops are set now and the vines will grow but little more. The early Humphrey's are in considerable better shape than the late hops and are remarkably free from vermin. An Oneida dealer sold 117 bales for 30 and 31 cents which speaks well for the prospect of an increase in prices. In Madison county the weather for the past month has generally been favorable for the hop crop. There is some complaint about a prospective small yield in old yards, but new yards, with few exceptions are in good conditions. Growers are already busy making preparations for the hop market.

"This constant quibbling and argument are as fretful to Salt Rheum," he said, after they went out; "I've had that enough. For several Springs past there has appeared all over my face and arms a fine scarlet rash. "I've been bilious all my life, but I don't know what to make of this. I felt so sleepy and miserable that I knew my system needed renovating and toning up. I took a great deal of medicine in two weeks, to hit this biliousness. The fine rash remained however. I was all broken out. One day, over at the shipyard, one of the sailors began talking to me about what was used a great deal on shipboard by the lake sailors for bilious disorders. 'Try Dr. Kennedy's FAVORITE REMEDY,' he said 'we get it at the drug store down at the foot of Main street.' I went and got a bottle, and it is the best medicine I ever took for cleansing my blood. The rash disappeared and I never felt better in my life than I did this spring."

CHEESE MARKETS.

AT UTICA.

UTICA, N. Y., July 21, 1884.

Altho' our market to-day was off ¼c. from last week no apprehensions were expressed by factorymen as to the future. Sales were moderate, running only four, five and six days, and in a general way taking the cheese down to the first of July. But the shrinkage of the last week from wind and cold, dry weather has been very marked all thro' this section, and factorymen feel that the turning point has been reached. The make has now shunk from 20 to 30 per cent, averaging, we shonld judge from fully one-quarter. The quality of July cheese is also a marked improvement over that of June, just as it was last year. These points all tend to make dairymen feel more confident of the future.

Transactions of the day were as follows: 6 lots, 700 boxes, at 8¾c.; 81 lots, 8,123 boxes, at 8⅞c.; 11 lots, 1,173 boxes at 9c.; 3 lots, 360 boxes, at 9⅛c.; 10 lots, 1,116 boxes, at 9¼c.; 3 lots, 300 boxes, at 9⅜c. Sales, 11,772 boxes; commissions, 2,411; total 14,183 boxes. Ruling price 8⅞c. For the corresponding day of 1883 transactions were 52,509 boxes, ruling price, 9¾c. For 1882 they were 9,451 boxes, ruling price 10¾c.

AT LITTLE FALLS.

LITTLE FALLS, July 21, 1884.

The market shows little variation from that of a week ago. Prices are very firm, and salesmen manifested little anxiety to sell and buyers generally advised making light shipments. This advice was adopted by the majority of salesmen and the transactions show a considerable decrease from those of last week. The cool weather, and the still further increase in shrinkage of cows in yield of milk, has given the factorymen confidence. They represent pastures as being very dry, and say that on meadows that have been cut sometime the after feed amounts to nothing. The light showeas that have visited this section appear to have done but little good. The transactions are:

AT FULTON.

There were 2,372 boxes of cheese offered from 25 factories, which was sold at 8½a8¾c. Utica ruling was 8⅞c. Our market was ¼c off from last week. The price one year ago was 9¼c.

[illegible]

As we were standing in front of the Midland depot last evening waiting for something to turn up two youngsters—not dudishly dressed—came along, one whistling "I Want to be an Angel" and the other getting outside of a big slice of watermelon, when the following conversation took place.

"Hello, old stockin' !"

"Hello !"

"Did you take in the circus yesterday?"

"Well I should snort. Did you?"

"Naw, I couldn't freeze onto any dust. Did you?"

"You bet. I worked the old man for about a case."

"Did ye see the white elerfunt?"

"Did I! Well I guess so, an' I come it on 'em slick. When the elephant man wasn't lookin' I yanked out my knife and carved my name on the old horse."

"Oh ! come off there."

"Well, I did, and if you don't believe it I'll show you the whitewash on my knife."

Just then the north bound train came puffing in and we lost sight of the "bloods."

He Takes $66 and Skips.

Last Saturday there were some energetic movements made by a few of our citizens. As near as we can get at the facts of the case they are as follows: A Dutch boy of ordinary appearance and innocent countenance, has been working for Mr. Edwin Baker. He carries the milk to the cheese factory and when checks are given out for payment of the cheese sold he carries them to Mr. Baker. Last Saturday the cheese maker handed him two checks to take to Baker of the value of about $66, but instead of taking them to that gentleman he came here to Fulton, tied his horse on a back street and had the checks cashed at Rosenblooms' store. He then went to the depot and inquired about outgoing trains. That was the last heard of him. Diligent search for him has been made by officers but he is still at large.

Stoddard Arrested.

Hal H. Stoddard, the "Syracuse Wonder," who is matched to fight Jack Kilrain, was Monday brought before Police Justice Stilsing in Jersey City Monday to answer the charges of keeping a disorderly house and atrociously assaulting James Connelly. Early Sunday morning Connelly entered Stoddard's saloon at the corner of Railroad avenue and Grove street, and provoked a fight in which he got worsted. He then went to the Gregory street police station and had Stoddard arrested for keeping his saloon open after 12 o'clock. Bail was refused Monday and yesterday Justice Stillsing accepted in in the sum of $500.—[Syracuse Standard.

Take Notice.

What is more annoying than a leaky roof? An excellent preventative has recently been discovered which will meet the hearty appoval of all. That is to always buy first-class shingles. It is true that it always pays to buy the best and when purchasing anything a person will consider both quality and price. Therefore we recommend the people of Fulton and the surrounding country to the lumber yard of that enterprising firm Schenck & Swan. They have now on hand an immence stock of xx and xxx pine shingles also a large stock of hemlock shingles. You will save money by purchasing of this firm. Their goods are the best, their prices the lowest. We advise you to call on them.

The house it was discovered had been somewhat ransacked and it was quite evident that the thieves had been frigtened away by some noise.

A large quantity of tools and machenery owned by him and stored in the building were almost utterly ruined.

Last Friday Mr. V. R. Porter, of this town, was at work on a cottage at the Thousand Islands, which D. W. Gardner, of Fulton, is erecting. He was shingling near the ridge and slipped, rolling down the roof and falling a distance of nineteen feet. He struck on a pile of lumber and was severely injured. A deep gash was cut in his forehead and severe internal injuries were received. He was brought home Saturday evening and it is impossible as yet to tell how serious the internal wounds are, but yesterday he was somewhat easier.—Sandy Creek News.

The man gave his name as William Coffee, and confessed that he stole the horse and carriage at Oswego, which was the property of Mr. F. O. Clarke, last Sunday. He had driven the horse all night and Sunday. Coffee was turned over to an Oswego county officer. The horse was valued at $500, and the buggy and harness at $200.

His Face Was Cut.

A fight took place at the D. L. & W. depot in Oswego Falls last Saturday night in which one Bailey received a severe cut under his left eye. His antagonist proved to be a tramp tailor who was what you might call a "crank." Bailey was slightly intoxicated. In the fight the tailor struck Bailey a hard blow on the face with a tumbler breaking it in pieces. Dr. Marsh took twelve stitches in the wound which was deep but not dangerous. Warrants were issued but no arrests were made. The tramp skipped on the first train.

It was a narrow escape for the boy and will perhaps render him careful about placing coins in his mouth in the future.

The Fulton correspondent to the Syracuse Courier says: Postmaster N. H. Gilbert is in receipt of a letter from his old army comrade, Walter C. Newberry, of Chicago, who with him enlisted in the 81st regiment, and was a number of times promoted and grew to a colonel, and had earned and was to wear a star as Lee entered Richmond. He gives an interesting history of the intervening years which have elapsed since the war, the first half being spent in conservative old Virginia, while his latter life has passed in what he terms the "wonderful city of Chicago." He wishes to be very kindly remembered to any and all of his old comrades who fought with him in the gallant 81st of New York.

Interesting Points on the Liberality of New York City to Its Poor as Observed by Wandering Jew.

NEW YORK, July 20.—"Say, mister," said a tramp to me in one of our public parks a few nights ago; "can't yer give us somethin' so I can get a night's lodgein' an' some supper?" Now I knew that he really wanted a "night-cap" before he "turned in" on the soft side of some stone steps, or sought the seclusion of some unused hallway in which to pass the night. But to draw him out, I gave him a small sum and at the same time asked why he did not make use of some of the many free institutions, governed by the city. "Now, what's yer givin' me?" The park benches and the halls is good enough ter sleep in, and fer grub, I beg, and sometimes I ketch a ten cent dinner or a free lunch. If dese close and the chromo on my nose didn't give me away, I could live like a lord. I manage to live an' sleep and wat more could I ask fer. Well, boss, goodbye. Ta ! ta!" and he was gone. I thought him a foolish person to lead the life he did, but on second thought I could see that he was barred from almost every decent place, both by his personal appearance and his dress. And following up the same line of thought I concluded that it was only the well dressed that could get access to all of the free institutions in the city. It costs money to get around and money is something that is not always at hand among this class of people.

There are some free benefits accessible to one and all, and among these are the city baths. All along the river front—both on the East and North rivers—are anchored these tasty structures known as The Free Baths. Crowds flock to these buildings every day and enjoy one of the greatest blessings that comes to their narrow, cramped lives.

And next is the music. The city at quite an expense furnishes music to thousands who spend most of their time in the tenement houses. At the battery Park every Friday evening, Bayne, the leader of the Sixty-ninth Regiment band presents a fine program. I attended one of these concerts and was well pleased with the music. Every seat around the band house was filled and a multitude of people stood up back of the seats. The calcium and electric lights cast a bright glow over everything and and was reflected back by happy faces and sparkling eyes. Lovers promenaded on the outskirts of the crowd and curiously dressed emigrants from Castle Garden attracted by the music added picturesqueness to the scene. The low splash of the waves on the shore mingled with the harmony of the instruments with a pretty effect. The irrepressible New York boy was abundantly on hand and with the changes of the music showed his varied talents and his close acquaintance of the street lore. Many a weary person went home that night with their life made momentarily brighter by the brilliant scene and music. Most of the people were from the lower walks of life but they were very attentive and appreciative. At Central Park the Saturday afternoon concerts have been changed to Sunday afternoon and this, too, for the benefit of the working people. Fully twenty-five thousand people listened to Seventh Regiment band to-day under the leadership of Cappa. It was surely a musical treat for all, and the programme was finely executed. Below I copy the same verbatim.

The question arises: could music of this character possibly do any harm to the masses on the Sabbath? Some say yes; and one bigoted church goer is working strongly against it. I guess, however, that the people will triumph in this case. Some one ought to prevent this man from going to church on Sunday for he might meet some temptation on the way. Education is free and religion also, but the poor are banished from a great many churches on account of their shabby dress. Not so in the night schools nor industrial schools either. Night schools are accessible to all, and by their aid many of the street boys are started on the road to better and brighter lives. Peter Cooper left a finer and grander monument of his benevolence and forethought than anyone can raise to his memory. Under the roof he erected, is given, without money and without price the open sesame to brilliant successes in this busy world. Some of our best architests, mechanics, artifts and merchants have graduated from the class of Cooper Institute. Hundreds are taught each year the different trades and sciences and they go out to their life work with blessings on their benefactor. In connection with the school is a large library and museum open to all. Free art galleries are abundant and reading rooms without number are scattered all over the city. In any of the hotels are files of daily papers and also stationery accessible to all.

The work done by "The Society for the Free Distribution of Ice Water" is much more humane than that of "The Society for the Distribution of Free Collar Buttons among the Fijis."

New York has on its pay roll a corps of competent physicians who make daily visits to the tenement districts, giving medicines, or passes to seaside homes where the sick receive the best of medical care.

The drawback in the work, however, is the limited amount of money to be spent. The deserving children are provided for by the Tribune Fresh Air Fund, which alone has been the means of saving numberless lives. In this line also are the free dispensaries, hospital clinics, and diet kitchens. Free fresh air is seldom found in the homes of the poor and to provide for the same the city has purchased and beautified several new parks. If a few of our many millionaires would unite and give a small share of their fortunes, they could brighten the homes of hundreds of poor wretches who are now leading lives [illegible]

THE SUN.

NEW YORK, 1884.

About sixty million copies of The Sun have gone out of our establishment the past twelve months.

If you were to paste end to end all the columns of all The Suns printed and sold last year you would get a continuous strip of interesting information, common sense wisdom, sound doctrine, and sane wit long enough to reach from Printing House Square to the top of Mount Copernicus in the Moon then back to Printing House Square, and then, three-quarters of the way back to the Moon again.

But The Sun is written for the inhabitants of the earth; this same strip of intelligence would girdle the globe twenty-seven or twenty-eight times.

If every buyer of a copy of The Sun during the past year has spent only one hour over it, and if his wife or grandfather has spent another hour this newspaper in 1883 has afforded the human race thirteen thousand years of steady reading, night and day.

It is only by little calculations like these that you can form any idea of the circulation of the most popular of American newspapers, or of its influence on the opinions and actions of American men and women.

The Sun is and will continue to be, a newspaper which tells the truth without fear of consequences, which gets at the facts no matter how much the process costs, which presents the news of all the world without waste of words and in the most readable shape, which is working with all its heart for the cause of honest government, and which therefore believes that the Republican party must go, this coming year of our Lord, 1884.

If you know The Sun, you like it already, and you will read it with accustomed diligence and profit during what is sure to be the most interesting year in its history. If you do not yet know The Sun it is high time to get into the sunshine.

TRADE MARK

This liniment has been manufactured and used for twenty five years and our innumerable certificates of cure prove it to be an unparallel success. We do not offer it as an internal remedy, positively asserting that any liniment that can be taken into the stomach without injury can have little efficacy as a specific when externally applied. This being compounded of Oils, is readily absorbed into the system, giving prompt relief even in cases of acute pain caused by Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Sciatica, Lumbago, Sprains, Bruises, Chilblains, or from any cause where a liniment is demanded. The oils are so penetrating that a thorough use of the Liniment will remove all stiffness of joints, lameness of muscles, or pain arising from inflammation or any cause. Even in chronic Spinal Disease, and Paralysis, a frequent use of Oil Liniment will effect many cures. Finally for pain in any part of the body, use freely, with rubbing and warmth and we guarantee relief. You will find a trial of it the best certificate of its value. It is the only Liniment made entirely of Oils, and we challenge the world for its equal. Price 25 and 50 cents per bottle. Sold by [illegible]

WATCH THE KIDNEYS.

They are the most important secretory organs. Into and through the Kidneys flow the waste fluids of the body, containing poisonous matter taken out of the system. If the Kidneys do not act properly this matter is retained, the whole system becomes disordered and the following symptoms will follow: Headache, weakness, pain in the small of back and loins, flushes of heat, chills, with disordered stomach and bowels. You can thoroughly protect the Kidneys by BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS, and when any of these symptoms manifest themselves you can quickly rid yourself of them by this best of all medicines for the Kidneys. BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS are sold everywhere at $1 per bottle, and one bottle will prove their efficacy.

How Watch Cases are Made.

A plate of SOLID GOLD 14 2-10 karats fine is soldered on each side of a plate of hard nickel composition metal, and the three are then passed between polished steel rollers. From this plate the various parts of the cases—backs, centers, bezels, etc. are cut and shaped by dies and formers. The gold is thick enough to admit of all kinds of chasing, engraving, and engine-turning. The composition metal gives it needed strength, stiffness and solidity, while the written guarantee of the manufacturers warranting each case to wear twenty years proves that it contains all the gold that can possibly be needed. This guarantee is given from actual results, as many of these cases have been worn perfectly smooth by years of use without wearing through the gold.

DUBUQUE, IA., Dec. 14, 1880.

I have used one of your James Boss' Gold Watch Cases for seventeen years. I bought it second-hand and know of its having been used before I got it, but do not know how long. It looks good for ten years longer. Did not suspect it was a filled case until so informed by a jeweler a short time since. I most cheerfully recommend your cases to be all they are represented to be, and more.

PAPER HANGINGS!

FOR THE SPRING TRADE

[illegible]

[illegible] popular.

Very little jewelry is used with summer toilettes.

The antique silver pins, coin bracelets, and bangles are in favor at present.

Leather belts are again much used with simple dresses of flannel and wash fabrics.

Mackinaw straw hats are liked for mountain use, as they endure all kinds of weather without injury.

Ear-rings are not worn in the day-time, and only those with jewels and rare stones are fashionable in the evening.

Balmoral petticoats for mountain walks are of gay colors usually, and should be made of striped English toilinette.

For woolen dresses of lighter weight the albatross cloths are in great favor, and the favorite style for these is the accordion skirt.

White wings of small birds are in great favor for trimming straw hats. Scarlet and white wings together are also very effective and popular.

Flannel dresses are popular for the mountains, and are suited for all occasions, as morning, evening, walking, or traveling dresses.

Canvas belts are again seen in white, red, brown, or blue to match the flannel dress in color, or else the color of the braid used for trimming.

The newest belts are open; that is, they consist of two or perhaps three narrow straps of the leather barred across by straps passing the other way.

For lawn tennis, for yachting, and for mountain excursions striped flannels are used for the skirt and vest, with a plain color for the coat-basque and drapery.

Belts of stamped leather and of alligator skin are most popular, and are fastened with large buckles of old silver, or with great hooks, or else the clasp is covered with leather.

The bangles most used are chains from which a single coin or a bar with a Greek inscription may hang, or else there is a charm or coin of some kind pendent from almost every link.

A mountain costume is not complete without dark red or blue Balbriggan stockings and canvas shoes, long-waisted chamois or castor-beaver gloves, and a parasol with an alpenstock handle.

For more costly dresses to wear either at the mountain or sea shore, white, blue, or black Cheviots are chosen, and are made up in tailor styles with velvet vest, collar, and cuffs, or else braid is used in profusion for trimming.

Very small scarf pins and brooches of precious stones, representing bees, butterflies, flowers, crescents, etc., are are thrust about irregularly in the lace on the dress corsage, and one or two may be put in the velvet bow at the throat of a dressy bonnet.

H. C. Geisler guarantees positive relief for any cough, cold, croup, or lung complaint by using Acker's English Remedy, or will refund the money.

FARM GOSSIP.

The ideal ear of corn is one with twelve rows, ten or twelve inches long, uniform in size from the tip and well capped at the tip.

Sows from one to three years old bring the best pigs and are the most profitable breeders. When older they get heavy and lazy, so that with every care it his hard to prevent them from killing their pigs.

To rid a lawn of weeds they should be cut out with a knife, taking care to cut them off a little below the ground. Anything which, applied to the surface of the ground, will kill weeds, will, it is evident, also kill the grass.

It is very important before harvest begins that the implements, especially reapers, should be in good working order, with plenty of extras. Every hour lost in the hurry of harvest is worth a good many dollars to any enterprizing farmer.

Trees to bud well ought not to be more than from three to five eighths of an inch in diameter; and it is best to bud them as near the ground as possible when reset, roots may come from the budded portion of the tree. Peach and cherry trees should be budded on the north or north-west side.

A small charge of dynamite will split the toughest roots into pieces that can be conveniently handled. Bore a hole nearly through the solid part of the root, insert the fuse in a cap and put it down to the bottom. The fuse burns at the rate of a foot a minute, giving with a little calculation ample time for the operator to get out of the way.

Double cropping is one of the paying secrets of the market gardener's business that farmers should avail themselves of it often. To raise two crops in one season the soil must be rich and otherwise in good order. First there may come good early peas, potatoes, cabbage or any soiling crop to be followed by turnips, pickles, rutabagas, cabbage, etc.

The beetle of the apple borer is striped brown and white, and measures about three-fourths of an inch in length. It deposits its eggs during the early summer in the bark of the trees near the ground. Here the larvæ is hatched, becoming a whitish grub, which saws its way into the tree, perforating in all directions and sometimes completely girdling it.

M. L. Blair, Alderman 5th Ward, Scranton, Pa., stated Nov. 9, '83; He had used Dr. Thomas' Eclectic Oil for sprains, burns, cuts, bruises and rheumatism. Cured every time.

Stoves in Summer.

"Is this hot enough for you?" remarked a man to another last Tuesday, on the sunny side of the street.

"Hot? You ain't complaining about warm weather, I hope."

"Well, it isn't so darn freezing cold as it might be, is it?"

"No, nor is it so boiling hot. Why, man, I've got a store, a great big anthracite base burner in my room."

"Thunder and fishes! How do you stand it?"

"Oh, easy enough."

"Well, I'd like to know how." [illegible]

[illegible] those who believe that women are qualified, morally, physically and intellectually, for the handling of money matters or in banks. Gen. Spinner, who first introduced women into the United States treasury as clerks and accountants, left on record a striking testimonial to the efficiency and integrity of the sex, and no one ever had a better opportunity to study the question than he, who at one time had 1,400 women under his direction, engaged chiefly in handling money. He testifies that they count more accurately and rapidly than men, that their ability to detect counterfeits proved to be superior in almost every test, that they were without an exception honest, and were invariably more painstaking in their work. Complaints of inaccuracy and carelessness on the part of men were made frequently during Gen. Spinner's administration of the U. S. Treasury, but such complaints against lady clerks were few. The shrewdest and quickest detectors of counterfeit currency were women, and in cases of dispute as to the genuineness of money, Gen. Spinner invariably took the judgment of a Miss Grandin, who was for a long time employed in his bureau. In speaking of her ability in this particular one day, Gen. Spinner said: "If I were a believer in clairvoyance, I should say that she possessed that power, but as I am not, I call it instinct." Although there are several thousand women employed by the Government as clerks, accountants, postmistresses, and in other capacities, not one has ever proved unfaithful to her trust. Many have been discharged for incapacity and for other reasons, but never one for dishonesty. Popularity and usefulness of Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy—A Thrilling Letter from a Master Mechanic.

LOWELL, Mass., March 25, 1884.

Dr. David Kennedy, Rondout, N. Y.

DEAR SIR: I think it is due to you that I should make the following statement, and I make it voluntarily and willingly; On the 4th day of June, 1881, I was taken with what was called paralysis of the bowels. The seizure was unexpected and terrible. The stomach and other organs seemed to sympathize with it and to have lost all power of action. For a long time my life was despaired of, but at length I recovered so far as to be able to ride out. By the advice of my physician I visited Poland Springs (Vt.) hoping to benefit from the waters. But they did me no good. Neither were the best physicians of Lowell and Boston, whom I consulted, able to afford me more than transcient relief. I gained no strength and my case appeared almost hopeless. In the Fall a friend advised me to try KENNEDY'S FAVORITE REMEDY, and although opposed to patent medicines, I made the trial. To make a long story short—FAVORITE REMEDY, in my opinion, saved my life. I consider it the best preparation in the world for stomach difficulties, as well as of the Liver and other organs. I am glad to say it is in general use among the R. R. men in this vicinity.

Yours, etc., A. J. GIFFORD.

Mr. Gifford is the Master Mechanic of the Lowell division of the Boston & Lowell Railroad, and his illness and recovery are known to many who can testify to the facts in his letter.

My Little Wife.

HENRY AUSTIN.

She isn't very pretty
(So say her lady friends);
She's neither wise nor witty
With verbal odds and ends.

No Fleeting freaks of fashion
Across her fancy run;
She's never in a passion—
Except a tender one.

Her voice is low and cooing,
She listens more than speaks;
While others talk of doing,
The duty near she seeks.

It may be but to burnish
The sideboard's scanty plate;
Or but with bread to furnish
The beggar at the gate.

So I, who see what graces
She sheds on lowly life,
To flash ones fairest faces
Prefer my little wife.

And though at her with pity
The city dames may smile,
Who deem her hardly pretty
And sadly out of style;

To me she seems a creature
So musically sweet,
I would not change one feature,
One curve from crown to feet;

And if I could be never
Her lover and her mate,
I think I'd be forever
The begger at the gate.

—Cincinnati Commercial.

MADGE.

It was a very poorly furnished room in a cottage home; a small cottage, one of many, all small, mean and scantily furnished, and the "hands" lived there. This one was Morgan's cottage, and it was Jack Morgan himself and his sister Madge who were seated at breakfast, lingering, as was possible only on Sunday morning. She was a tall, well-formed, strikingly handsome girl of 19, as she sat facing her brother, who was some five years older; and upon her face was an eager, troubled look, while he was sullen and downcast. Young as they were, they had seen better days; been educated up to three years previous to that June morning, and then been thrown suddenly upon their own resources.

Jack fought his way, sullen and resentful, making few friends and seeking none. Madge was the braver of the two, meeting their reverses with quiet courage, and bringing energy, trust and cheerfulness to the mean cottage home. Just one week had elapsed since an aunt, from whom they had never hoped for aid, had left them each a hundred pounds, and Jack had resolved to try his fortune in Canada, while Madge put hers aside for a rainy day.

"I'll stay here until you are sure of success, Jack," she said, when he urged her to join him, "and keep a home for you in case that you should need one."

"Do you call this hole a home?" he asked bitterly, and she only smiled and answered:

"A shelter, then."

But she was not smiling when she sat at the Sunday breakfast, eating little, brooding sadly, until suddenly she cried:

"Jack, we must do something. Think what we owe Tom King."

"Owe him! I believe we have paid him every farthing," said Jack, sharply.

"We paid him the money, I know; but we can never pay him what we still owe him."

"Bah! Don't be so sentimental, Madge."

"Common gratitude is not sentiment alone, Jack. Jack," she repeated, can you forget who came to us in that sore need, paid doctor and butcher and then buried our mother beside father in the cemetery?"

"And do you forget," her brother replied, almost angrily, "how we worked and saved, starved and perished, until every shilling of the money was Tom King's pocket again?"

"I know! I know! But think how kind he was—how he helped you and me to get our situations in the mills, and how delicately he made the loans of money. And now, oh, Jack, I must do something."

"What can you do? If Tom King chose to lose his money in speculating, how are you responsible?"

"I am not; but, Jack, there is Aunt Kate's money."

"All you have in the world?"

"No," she answered, "I have my wages."

"A noble fortune. Don't be a fool, Madge."

But Madge was fool in the sense he meant. All through the morning, while she put the house in order, while she dressed in her quiet mourning for church, even through the service there, she was thinking of what she owed Tom King. When her mother, crushed by the death of her husband, unable to meet the change from comfort to poverty sank down prostrated; when Jack, unable to work, was cursing fortune, Tom King came, as their father's friend, and kept them from starvation. Madge's heart glowed as she remembered how thoughtful he was about sparing her trouble in every way. He was considerably older than she, and a grave, reserved man, whom she regarded with the affectionate respect she would have given her father, but with that same reverence she loved him deeply. And when the whole town knew that Tom King lay in the Newtown hospital, sick and penniless, the whole noble, grateful heart of Madge Morgan went out to him. Many stories reached her. He had made money and lost it; he had invested in [illegible], and the mines had failed and [illegible] him; he had been engaged according to the Newtown gossips, in a [illegible] speculations, winning [illegible] to lose them. But one [illegible] fact remained, of all [illegible]; he was lying in the [illegible] the excitement that [illegible] broke upon his ill luck. [illegible]

Only a grunt answered her, but she would not be put off by Jack's sour looks, and went on her errand.

Here, upon a low iron cot-bed, pale and emaciated, but evidently on the road to recovery, Tom King lay when Madge Morgan came up to the ward with a nurse, her face so grave and tender that the strong will and patient endurance of its usual expression were lost in the pure womanly sympathy that rested there.

"My friend!" she said, taking the wasted hand extended to her, and Tom King wondered if ever two words held so much as those two.

"Why, Madge," he said presently, looking into her eyes misty with tears, "do not feel so badly. I'm gaining every day. The doctor says he will have me on my feet in a week, and I'm going abroad again."

"Again. When you have been so unfortunate there?"

"Eh? Oh, I see!" he said, with an odd look in his eyes; you've been reading the papers. Unlucky, wasn't I?"

"Yes. But, Tom—I came to tell you—" the words came slowly—"that I have some money that—that is of no use to me. It will start you again, I ——."

"You want me to take it?"

"You can borrow it," anxious not to hurt his pride, "and some day—when you are rich—you can return it."

"Yes I see! have you got it with you?"

"I thought I would bring it with me," she said, her face flushed with pleasure, "and here it is."

He opened the envelope and took it out, one note, just as the lawyer had sent it to her. Tom King laid it on the broad palm of his hand and stroked it tenderly.

"All your wealth, Madge?" he asked.

"Not while I have these," and she held up her hands. "I am so glad, though, that I have it."

He lay very quiet, looking very steadily at the note for some minutes; then he began to speak, his eyes still fixed on the money, his voice steady but monotonous, as if he were reading a story there.

"When I went away, nearly three years ago," he said, "I went to see if I could not shake myself free from a dream I had. I dreamed that I could win the love of a child, a mere slip of a girl, who was forced into premature womanhood by trouble. She was utterly unconscious of my love, but I knew I could not hide it if I stayed beside her. Out of her sight, far from the sound of her voice, the dream, instead of fading, became clearer, more vivid. Day and night I dreamed, but I worked as well. I put what money I had into investments that promised well—but there, I will not speak of that. Providence was merciful. I am alive, at least"—he paused there, but a low, sweet voice took up the story.

"And the dream will become a reality," the voice said. "The child-woman did not read her own heart, nor understand why nothing in her life met or filled the longing there. Not until sharp sorrow came, and she heard of him she loved lying ill and in poverty and pain, did she understand that he took all the love she could ever know away with him."

"And now, Madge?"

"It shall be as you say. I love you. I am young and strong, and I think I can be a help and not a burden to you."

"Will you be my wife, Madge?"

"Whenever you will."

"Madge, did you think, my dear, that I was ruined?" Because I was sick and came here to be nursed, people jumped at the conclusion that I lost everything. But I came here simply because I would have the best of care, and because with all my wealth I could not purchase half the disinterested kindness that I get here. I couldn't go to you, you know, Madge. Don't believe all you hear or read my dear Madge; I am a rich man still—richer than I ever was—but I mean to keep this," and his hand closed over the note. "You shall never have it again, Madge."

"I am content," she answered.

And even Jack was satisfied, something of his sullen temper being lost when he once more found himself on the road to prosperity.

COLOR YOUR BUTTER.

Farmers that try to sell white butter are all of the opinion that dairying does not pay. If they would use Wells, Richardson & Co's, Improved Butter Color, and market their butter in perfect condition, they would still get good prices, but it will not pay to make any but the best in color and quality. This color is used by all the leading creameries and dairymen, and is sold by druggists and merchants.

It Was a Through Train.

"Is this a through train?" asked a traveler of a brakeman, as he entered an unoccupied car.

"Yes, sir," said the brakeman, turning over a couple of seats before making his exit.

And then the tired traveler fixed himself for a nap. After dreaming of awakening in Albany, he did awake and found the car in the same place where it had been before he had the nap. With fire in his optic he sought the brakeman.

"Look here, you tow-headed ruffian. Didn't you tell me this was a through train?"

"I did, sir" quietly replied the car coupler. "And so it is a through train, sir. It's through running for the day, sir.—Younker's Statesman.

Paying an Old Debt.

An aged couple walked into a dry goods store in Syracuse recently and asked to look at some carpets. While the clerk was showing them some patters of ingrains the proprietor of the store noticed the old people and approaching the clerk, told him to show them some of their best body brussels. As he rolled out several pieces of the rich carpets the old lady held up her hands and exclaimed "Oh, we can't afford that!" The merchant asked her which pattern she liked best, and she said pointing to one roll, "That is just lovely," the merchant asked the size of the room and told the clerk to cut and match the carpet and have it made up in time for the train on which the old people were to return. Seeing the blank took of astonishment that overspread their faces, the merchant asked: "Ain't your names so and so?" "Yes," they replied "Didn't you keep a tavern at such a time and at such a place?" They replied in the affirmative. "And didn't you have a boy at one time, who tended bar for you, named —— ——?" "Yes, yes; and we have often wondered whatever became of the little one." "Well," said the merchant, "I am that boy, and when I tended bar for you I stole enough from you to carpet your whole house. Take the carpet and say nothing more about it." It is needless to add that they took it.—Detroit Free Press.

An Editor's Work.

Some people estimate the ability of a periodical and the talent of its editor by the quantity of its original matter. It is comparatively an easy task for a frothy writer to string out a column of words upon any and all subjects. His ideas may flow in one weak, washy, everlasting flood, and the command of language may string them together like bunches of onions, and yet his paper may be but a meagre and poor concern. Indeed, the mere writing part of editing a paper is but a small portion of the work.

The care, the time employed in selecting, is far more important, and the fact of a good editor is far better shown by his selections than anything else; and that we know is half the battle. But, we have said, an editor ought to be estimated, his labor understood and appreciated by the general conduct of his paper—its tone, its uniform consistent course, aims, manliness, its dignity and its propriety. To preserve these as they should be preserved is enough to occupy fully the time and attention of any man. If to this be added the general supervision of the details of publication which most editors have to encounter, the wonder is how they find time to write at all.—Henry Watterson, in Courier-Journal.

An Indiana colored lawyer, in trying to get his client out of custody, exclaimed:—"Da is a law dat's called "habbis carcass," an I'ze goin' to hab de carcass ob dat client o' mine, dead 'o alive."

This Idea of Going West

to Colorado or New Mexico, for pure air to relieve Consumption, is all a mistake. Any reasonable man would use Dr. Bosanko's Cough and Lung Syrup for Consumption in all its first stages. It never fails to give relief in all cases of Coughs, Colds, Bronchitis, Pains in the Chest and all affections that are considered primary to Consumption. Price, 50 cents and $1. Sold by M. M. Williams.

A California doctor cooly admits that he killed his first two patients, and with equal coolness remarked: "I learned a lesson that I have never forgotten—that was, the importance of a correct diagnosis." Just what the lesson was that the two dead patients learned the candid doctor fails to disclose.

YOU CAN HAVE IT.

"My dear, what would I give to have your hair" is often said by middle aged ladies to young ones. Madam you may have just such hair. Parker's hair balsam will give it to you. It will stop your hair from falling out, restore the original color and make it long, thick, soft and glossy. You need not stand hopelessly envying the girls. The balsam is not oily, not a dye but is an elegant dressing, and is especially recommended for cleanliness and purity. 10t4

There is a marked decline in the number of persons starting for Europe. It is attributed to cholera.

DON'T GIVE UP THE SHIP.

It doesn't follow that a patient will die because doctors have given him up, or that he will recover because they promise to pull him through. It is never too late to try the virtues of Parker's Tonic. Mr. Michael Gallfoyle, of Binghampton, N. Y., was cured of rheumatism by it after ten years of unspeakable suffering. Mr. R. W. Mosher, druggist, of same city, certifies that he has sold over a thousand bottles of Parker's through its reputation for this and other cures. 10tf

PORT YOUR HELM.

Among the Marine Stores a Ship Chandler Spins a Yarn about a Storm.

At the foot of Main St., Buffalo, is the main house of McBean Edge Co., a ship chandlers' establishment. Stepping out of a down town car, I entered. High on every side, on shelves and off, were piled an array of wares—a grand medley of everything, from the pewter spoon upon which little Jack cut his gums, to the big oil stoves that warm the daily mess. In the office stood Mr. J. C. McBean, the picture of life and energy, discussing the relative merits of various kinds of starboard and port lights, with a Michigan pilot and an Erie canal man.

"This constant quibbling and argument are as fretful as Salt Rheum," he said, after they went out; "I've had that enough. For several Springs past there has appeared all over my face and arms a fine scarlet rash. "I've been billious all my life, but I don't know what to make of this. I felt so sleepy and miserable that I knew my system needed renovating and toning up. I took a great deal of medicine in two weeks, to hit this billiousness. The fine rash remained however. I was all broken out. One day, over at the shipyard, one of the sailors began talking to me about what was used a great deal on shipboard by the lake sailors for bilious disorders. 'Try Dr. Kennedy's FAVORITE REMEDY,' he said 'we get it at the drug store down at the foot of Main street.' I went and got a bottle, and it is the best medicine I ever took for cleansing my blood. The rash disappeared and I never felt better in my life than I did this spring."

Dr. David Kennedy's FAVORITE REMEDY, Rondout, N. Y.

THE man who started the slander against James G. Blaine's alleged improper railway speculations while he was Speaker of the House—J. C. S. Harrison, the Indianapolis banker—has not only wrecked his own bank, leaving his depositors in the lurch, but now proves a defaulter as the receiver of the Indianapolis Banking Company, a position of trust to which he was appointed some time ago by a local court. A pretty man he is to accuse other men of dishonor.—[Chicago Journal.

ONE week has gone by since the gross charges were made by the Buffalo Telegram, a neutral paper, against the morality of Grover Cleveland's private character, and still neither Cleveland nor one of his organs has come forth and denied the charges. What does it mean? Can it be possible that this is true. If it is a false and malicious attack, destined to present Cleveland before the public in these early campaign days as a vile wretch of unnatural tendencies and possessed of no high moral proclivities, we say if it is false, the Buffalo Telegram should be stamped out of existence and all concerned severely punished. But again on the other hand if the charges are true, and it is proven that Cleveland is guilty, why he is certainly not a fit person to occupy the highest office this great nation can bestow upon man, and should be dealt with in accordance with the law and we say it in all sincerity. We hope the charges are false but if [illegible] is not made soon what can [illegible] before them. The affair is a [illegible] and [illegible] for discussion, but [illegible]

The Lockport Journal prints tne following: "Some people are always picking out little typographical errors in a paper and laughing at them, as though it was merely child's play to produce a newspaper free from mechanical errors. 'Newspapers should make no mistakes!' Such was the remark of a reader a day or two since. She had seen a friend's name spelled with a superfluous letter. How many of those who put on their spectacles to look for two or three errors in ten columns of printed matter ever tried themselves to read and correct a proof? [illegible] dition of the [illegible] majority of the counties favorable reports are made. There is said to be a large yield of wheat of excellent quality. Corn is backward, while oats, barley and rye are doing finely. At most points farmers are willing to sell their wheat at from one dollar to $1.12. The report from Onondaga county says that there is no increase in the acreage, but that there will be three-quarters more wheat to market than last year. Wheat ripened very slowly, owing to the cold and cloudy weather of the last ten days. All the wheat, if the present favorable weather continues, will be under cover this week. The yield will be fully twenty bushels to the acre. Farmers will sell at one dollar, but no less unless obliged to do so.

Of Interest to Dairymen.

The attention of state dairy commissioner Brown has been directed to the neglect on the part of many manufacturers of butter and cheese to comply with the portion of the law relating to the prevention of deception in the sale of dairy products. Its provisions require of every butter and cheese manufacturer, except those who buy all the milk they use, to keep correct account of all the milk daily received and of the number of pounds and packages of each disposed of. Failure to comply is punishable by a fine of not less than $25 nor more than $200, or not less than one, nor more than six months imprisonment. Commissioner Brown declares he shall take active measures to compel the law to be lived up to.

Hop News.

The Oneida Union says: "The hop market still remains quiet and shows very little activity as compared with its condition a month ago. Whether it will improve depends upon the crop prospects in this country and in Europe. The cause of the late decline is the falling off of foreign demand, occasioned by a more favorable outlook for the crop in England. Later reports, however say that the prospects is really poorer than has been represented, and that thousands of acres are already blackeded with blight, also that mould is prevalent.

[illegible] but no one thought of a boom. Cheese was fairly taken up in New York, but no one had displayed any anxiety to buy heavily, and all advices favored a conservative market. The move which set the ball rolling was a direct bid on certain fancy brands which were sure to be competed for. Under this influence the whole market became active, and prices advanced beyond what most of the buyers considered as being safe. But salesmen contended that the make is shrinking so seriously that still better prices must soon prevail, and while a few refused to sell at all, many will send forward only five or six days' cheese. This shows the feeling among factorymen, but buyers are not so confident. They are uncertain whether they will get out this week without loss, and consider the market as being overdone. So it will be seen that there is quite a difference of opinion between the two forces of the market, and it would take a pretty shrewd prophet to decide beforehand which is right.

Transactions of the day are as follows: 2 lots, 212 boxes, at 9c.; 72 lots, 7,170 boxes, at 9½c.; 6 lots, 400 boxes, at 9⅝c.; 10 lots, 1,083 boxes, at 9¾c; 9 lots, 854 boxes, at 9⅞c.; one lot of small cheese, 150 boxes, at 10c.; 4 lots, 687 boxes, at private terms. Sales 10,535 boxes; commissions, 1,528 boxes; total, 12,063 boxes. Ruling price, 9½c. Transactions of corresponding day last year, 11,589 boxes; ruling price, 9¾c. Two years ago, 9,145 boxes, at a ruling of 10½c.

AT LITTLE FALLS.

LITTLE FALLS, July 28, 1884.

CHEESE.—Prices were firm to-day and factorymen were disposed to hold unless concessions were made by buyers. They insisted that the New York market is well cleared out of stock, and that herds are shrinking very much, some estimate this shrinkage at one third off from the flush yield. Buyers at last yielded slightly and prices were advanced from ¼c to ½c, the ruling price being 9½c. At these figures nearly all the offerings were sold. The new arrangements made for rooms and permanent officers of the board of trade are very satisfactory to salesmen.

The transactions are as follows:

Lots	Boxes	Price
7	378	9c
25	1,992	9¼
72	5,450	9½
13	823	Com
121	8,643
Farm Dairy	950
Total	9,593

AT FULTON.

Some dissatisfaction is expressad by salesmen of late in regard to the incorrect report printed as to the price paid here. They claim that the patrons are inclined to find fault with them for not receiving the highest price as reported in the papers but which report is not true. THE TIMES can be relied upon as giving the correct report. In order to get the exact figures of boxes offered and the standing of the association salesmen should register.

But little business was done Monday evening on account of the lateness of the hour Utica's ruling was received which was 9½c. and was not received until nearly midnight. Many of the salesmen were tired of waiting and went home. About 2,000 boxes was offered and 1,500 sold at from 8½ to 9c. the bulk going at 9c.

FARM DAIRIES.—Sales of farm dairy cheese were 950 boxes at 8¼ a 9 3-4c.

BUTTER.—25 packages of creamery sold at 20c and 5 packages of farm dairy at 21c.

A YOUTHFUL EDITOR.
History of the Hardest Struggle of His Life—Of Deep Interest to all Professions.
WORCESTER, MASS., March 23d 1884.
Dr. David Kennedy, Rondout, N. Y.:
DEAR SIR: My son, a lad of fifteen, editor of the "Go-Ahead," amateur journal, of this city, has been at different times most severely and apparently hopelessly, afflicted with Salt Rheum. When a very small child his body was almost entirely covered with this loathsome eruption. It mostly passed away, however, after the teething period, and he was not seriously troubled with it again until about one year ago, when the salt rheum first appeared on his hands between his fingers, then on his limbs, then on his face and head in one solid mass. His condition was terrible. The rash resembled ivy poisoning and we at first fancied it might be something not so bad as his old troubles, but the physicians pronounced it salt rheum and made every effort without avail, to cure it. We tried a preparation widely advertised as a specific for skin diseases, but it made about as much of an impression as so much cold water might have done. You can understand the situation which I say we were in despair of obtaining real help from any source.
At this point, through the advice of Mr. J. W. Bacon, whose daughter had been cured by it, I tried KENNEDY'S FAVORITE REMEDY. This was the right and only thing at last! The skin began to heal at once, and to-day the evidences of the disease have wholly disappeared. How thankful we are Last Doctor, I leave you to imagine. Yours,

Charles Ingamells Shot at by Ernest Baker—His Horses Receive the Charge.

Early this morning as Charles Ingamells, the milk man, was on his way to Fulton to deliver milk, he was assaulted by Ernest Baker who lives about three miles up the river. Ingamells says that when passing the house, Baker, who stood in the yard with a shot gun in his hand, shouted to him and said he would shoot him, at the same time raising his gun. Ingamells shouted back that he could not shoot him and started his horses on a run, whereupon Baker immediately let fire. Eight shots struck the nigh horse, drawing blood in several places, two or three shots lodged in the off horse and scattering shots struck the wagon, one within a few inches of Ingamells who was on the back step. He says he cannot account for the rash act, and that he was friendly to Baker but was not on speaking terms with his father.

Ingamells at once drove to the barn of his brother in Oswego Falls where he left the horse which was badly shot, for treatment. It is probable that such a flagrant violation of the law will not be allowed to rest here. It was indeed a narrow escape for Ingamells, for had he received the charge the result would have been serious.

"The Foundlings."

Many will doubtless remember the "Half Breed" club which camped on Thousand Island Park some three years ago and which was composed mostly of Fulton boys. It is needless to say that any person who was at the Park during their stay have not forgotten them already as they made it a point to let people know that they were there. Some of the old "Half Breeds" have become enthusiastic again and have organized another club which will leave Fulton for Thousand Island Park next Monday for a two weeks camp out. The following are the names of the gentlemen: E. O. Marvin, J. C. Doyle, and William Hees of Oswego; J. E. Keller of Syracuse; John D. Forbes, New York; and E. C. Fralick, J. D. McIntyre, Edward Seymour, E. E. Morrill, J. J. Wright of Fulton. The club all wear knickerbockers with coats to match making a very handsome uniform.

Oh, they are the
Swells of the Park
Out for a lark —

The club have assumed the name "The Foundlings." This name is taken for effect. It will be remembered that the "Half Breeds" received but very little sympathy from the ladies so they have taken this charitable name to secure the commisseration of the fairer sex.

"The Pappa Fire Escape."

There has probably been no improvement in this village so important as that made by the Board of Education in placing on school building No. 2, the Pappa Fire Escape. While the mode of egress from the building has not been such as to render chances for escape extra hazardous, yet it was long since conceded, that in case of conflagration some of the pupils must of necessity be severely wounded or killed outright. This we are happy to say is entirely obviated by the use of this fire escape. To our residents we invite their inspection. It will repay any of our citizens to give it a critical examination thereby enabling them to judge to their own satisfaction.

The Oswego Falls correspondent to the Oswego Times says its readers will doubtless remember the account we gave several months since of Lafayette Christmas of Dexterville selling his wife to Frank Goman for $2.00. It now appears that he is sick of his bargain, or that he considers her worth more than that sum, or at all events he has succeeded in getting her back to his domicile to bake his bread and make fires in the morning. We are not informed whether he paid back the $2.00 or not but rather suspect that Goman put in a bill for board. Be that as it may we hope Lafayette will be more of a Christian hereafter and not barter off her whom he promised to cherish and protect.

New Skating Rink.

Two gentleman from Cortland, N Y., were in town yesterday and completed arrangements for the construction of an immense skating rink. The Ross lot has been leased for five years. The building will be 100 x 200 feet in capacity and will be a handsome structure. The gentlemen propose to have the rink completed and in readiness by September 1st. The name of the firm is Smith & Harrington.

The name of the bank to be established in this place by parties from Cleveland, will be the "Oswego Falls Bank." The company have ordered a safe weighing five tons and costing $1,000 for their business. Mr. Potter, cashier of the Cleveland bank informs us that he is well pleased with Oswego Falls, and thinks it is a business-like thriving place. He is correct in his impressions.—[Observer.

The Palladium's Oswego Falls correspondent says: We understand that the Oswego Falls Reading Room club, which is composed mostly of factory employes, will disorganize and sell their furniture. This is done because of a lack of attendance since the room was moved on Third street. They have a piano and pool table, besides pictures, &c. When the new factory building shall be completed there may be a new club organized.

A reception was tendered Congressman Nutting by the Young Men's Republican club at Oswego, last Friday evening speeches were made by S. M. Coon, T. B. White, S. B. Mead of of Fulton and P. W. Cullinan. Mr. Mead said he was glad to be present at this great demonstration in favor of one of Oswego's most honored men. It was the universal sentiment in his vicinity that this district had been ably represented and that the representative for the next two years should be N. W. Nutting.

THE FRESH AIR FUND.

One Hundred Children Distributed Around Fulton for a Two Weeks Vacation.

Monday evening there gathered from the hot and stifling tenement houses, from the sloughs of New York city and from an atmosphere heavy with disease and bearing seeds of death, 470 children. As they crowded the forward part of the ferry boat that crosses to Jersey City and the cool and pure air of the waters fanned the cheeks their faces brightened at the thought of what was in store for them.

They went into the cars three on a seat, and the little excusionists were off for their country homes. Tuesday morning the company was broken up by parts leaving at Baldwinsville, Phoenix and Lysander and the last at Fulton.

One would have thought it a great day for Fulton could they have seen the crowd gathered at the depot to welcome the visitors. It was a great day. There were between four and five hundred awaiting them and about seventy-five carriages. The train came in a half hour late and over 100 children neatly dressed with their bundle in hand marched out of the cars and were marched in time two abreast. Mrs Wolcott, who came out from the city with them, and Mr. Redhead stepped upon the express platform and called out the names of the little ones and the names of those to whom they were assigned and in this way they were soon carried off to their new homes. After they were all assigned there were many ladies and gentlemen in the close crowd around who called out to Mr. Redhead "I want a girl," or "I want two girls," and when told there were no more, "Then give me a boy," but there were no more boys, and so about twenty five were turned away disappointed. The people were surprised by finding a clear intelligent and mannerly body of children. But the dulled eyes of many, the flabby muscles, sunken cheeks and contracted chests plainly told the story of their coming. They are sent out from New York city for a two weeks vacation in the country by "The Tribune Fresh Air Fund." The movement was inaugurated and is now conducted by the management of the New York Tribune who have put in charge of this fund men and women who are devoting their lives to charity. The fund is supplied by people from all parts of the country who send the money to supply the needs. Contributions are solicited in any sum from fifty cents upward. It costs $3 to send a child two weeks to the country. This season thus far over $10,000 have been contributed and from 2,000 to 3,000 children sent out. It is a beautiful charity and one that appeals to the hearts and sympathies of mothers and fathers and one in which even little children may weep tears of gladness at the good they can accomplish. These guests many of them come from the crowded and filthy streets of the city and from homes where the gentle voice of nature is never heard and its grandeur never seen.

It gives us joy to know that the hearts of our people about Fulton and Oswego Falls have been opened to the strangers and that there has been such a hearty response to their needs.

Let the good work go on. We trust that our hearts will be drawn to this work of charity and that many will save their dimes to send life into the cheeks that otherwise may soon be lifeless, and that the children in our homes will save their pennies that they may send joy to sweeten the bitterness of wretched homes.

A Foolhardy Trick.

Oswego Times: On Saturday there was a peculiar occurance near the Lake Shore shops. An engine had been fired up and was standing on the main track. The engineer had stepped off for a moment, when a man whose name is O'Connor, who is said to be a railroad man, and who was drunk, jumped on the engine and started toward Hannibal, going at a lively rate of speed. As he passed along the sparks from the engine set fire to the dry grasses in a number of places, doing considerable damage. A despatch was sent to Hannibal, to head the man off but he evidently thought better of it and ran the engine back. Reaching a branch he jumped off, turned the switch, ran the engine off and left it there, leaving the switch open. It was a foolhardy trick of which only a drunken man could have been capable and the only wonder is that he managed to escape without doing more damage.

Attention Fresh Air Children.

John Hadcock requests that all persons entertaining fresh air children will call with them at his book store on First street on Friday afternoon of this week when each child will be presented with an elegant present. This is indeed a liberal offer on the part of Mr. Hadcock. Let none fail to call.

Turner—Hickey—On the evening of July 22, at the parsonage, 286 East Cumberland street, by Rev. Noble Frame, Mr. John H. Turner and Miss Ella Hickey, both of Philadelphia.

The above was taken from a Philadelphia paper. Miss Hickey was a former resident of Fulton and is well known by many.

"My dear brethren," said the minister, leaning forward and speaking very earnestly, "in this excessively warm and oppressive weather I can excuse a little drowsiness during the sermon, but I do wish that you would try and keep awake while the collection is being taken up."

It would be well for the board of health to look into the cause of the stench which comes from the vacant lot between the Midland depot and the freight house. It is not only the disagreable smell we wish to call attention to but the fact that it is liable to breed sickness. We cannot be too careful as to cleanliness in these times when epidemics are raging with disastrous results in foreign countries and which may strike our shores at any time.

On account of the inclement weather ast Wednesday the lawn tennis picnic was postponed until last Friday afternoon when a canal boat was chartered and the club with friends, numbering in all about forty started for High Banks, that delightful and popular resort located about four miles up the river. The picnic arrived on the grounds at about three o'clock. At promptly six o'clock all gathered around and partook of a bounteous spread. All were in high spirits during the ride home.

In February last a number of Oswego people put about $10,00 in the hands of Pratt & Co., commission brokers of that city for operation on the Chicago board of trade. July 5 Pratt notified J. C. Bracy, a mechanic who invested $100, that only $11.75 remained of the $100.00 and enclosed a check for $11.75, as the proceeds of his investment. Pratt added that "it was a bad year for speculation." Bracy put the matter in the hands of his attorneys, and Friday suit was commenced against Pratt & Co. for the $100 Bracy invested.

COTTAGE BY THE LAKE.

FISH CREEK, N. Y., July 29.

Before we had the sand dusted from our front piazza this morning, carriages commenced arriving loaded with happy families and each bringing large baskets of refreshments to be partaken of later on. Soon after people came in boats from both sides of Oneida Lake and crossing on a ferry. A dozen steamers and barges fairly flew all day long bringing visitors and returning them to various points. The Ontario & Western Railway run no less than six trains, bringing 75 cars, averaging 80 persons each, or 6,000 people. Those who came by boat and wagon numbered some 5,000 more, and by noon 11,000 people had gathered, and which ever way you turned in this grove of 75 acres you met a gay company of picnicers, in fact "the woods were full of them," and a more orderly and happy gathering than this seventh annual hop growers picnic, has not been seen. An early ride of many miles had evidently sharpened the appetite of everyone, and long before noon the tables were spread, the grassy mounds and more sandy plains were literally covered with acres of eatibles many of the "spreads" being dcidedly elaborate, chicken salad, boned turkey, pressed meats, white bread, brown bread, corn bread, raised buscuit and cake of every kind mentioned in the excellent cook book of Mary Butler of your village. A commissary of McClellan's army would have despaired of ever giving out such a wealth of cooked food. The rich counties of Madison, Oneida, Cortland, Otsego, Chenango and part of Oswego contributed of their abundance. Numerous wells pump abundant good water. The hotels were crowded but had made extensive preparations and all were accommodated. The bands of music discoursed many airs lending a flavor to the entertainment. The address to Hopgrowers, by G. W. Ray, M. C. of Norwich, N. Y., was well written and well received. He said of the eighteen states which produce hops New York raises 81 per cent. and the three counties of Madison, Oneida and Otsego produce 46 per cent. of all the hops in the United States with an average annual earning of more than $3,000,000. The great bulk of the crop of hops is used in the manufacture of beer because of their preservative qualities and peculiar flavoring properties, it is a health giving plant of great value. The hop growers association is composed of leading agriculturalists in the above named counties and their annual gatherings have been noted for their good order and good cheer, and good entertainment. It is worthy of remark that the O. & W. Railroad with a single track carried more than six thousand people to and from, giving way for all the numerous freight and passenger trains without a single accident or break in any of the plans as made by Superintendent Lamphere and his able assistants.

A VISITOR.

Mind Reading.

In company with some dozen others, we were present last evening at the residence of Mrs. R. N. Hoff to witness what proved to be some wonderful manifestations in thought reading. A few weeks since Mrs. Hoff went to Kingston, Ont., to visit her aunt, Mrs. J. C. Gardner. During her stay a member of the family, Mr. Sidney Gardner, a student in Queens University, Kingston, who was spending his vacation in the west, returned home and one day while discussing the wonders of thought, or mind reading, as performed by a cousin, Dr Angelin, a surgeon of Edinborough Hospital, Scotland, Young Sidney Gardner remarked "I think I can read ones thoughts." Whereupon after being blinded, he placed the hand of Mrs. Hoff upon his forehead and led her to an adjoining room and at once pointed out the letter which she had previously set her mind on. The act was repeated in various ways and with a number of persons.

Mrs. Hoff, and son returned home on Monday accompanied by Mr. Gardiner. The testes last evening were numerous, nearly every person being favored with a trial of his remarkable gift—for it is a gift for which he is in no way responsible. One lady opened the Bible, selecting a particular word of a chapter. Then closing the seer came in, opened the Bible and turning the leaves forward and backward till the right place was found and placed his finger upon the correct word. Mr. VanWagenen jr., had quietly placed his cane behind the door as he entered. He was led to it by Mr. Gardiner who handed it to him. Dr. Woodbury and Fred Bennett also gave testes. Bert Hoff willed that he approach a particular lady, remove her hat and take down her hair and this was all carried out to the wonder and amusement of the lookers on. The only requirement is that the person must keep in constant mind the thing to be done, and can include any number of changes which the operator will carry out.

A general desire was manifested that a more public exhibition of his wonderful powers be given to our people.

Death of a Former Resident.

M B. Church died at the home of his son-in-law, Mr. E. A. Hempstead, at Clinton, Ia., on the 22d inst., aged 84 years. In early life he lived at Waterville, Oneida county. About 1848 he removed with his family to Baldwinsville; and in 1860 he removed to Fulton, Oswego county, and in 1869 he went west to reside with his son-in-law. The Clinton Herald says: "He went down to the grave a noble, honorable man. In his profession he practiced in all the courts with honest, devoted ability, with fairness and justice to all parties. He was ever held with esteem and respected by all who knew him as a citizen and lawyer."

The Best Mrs. Grundy Could Find.

When fortune comes smiling she often designs the most mischief. When fortune caresses a man too much she is apt to make a fool of him. Many a man has had this experience with quack business operators. Better be content with fair treatment at Kent & Miller's clothing house 18 and 20 South Salina street.

Books are among man's truest consolers. In the hour of trouble he can turn to them with confidence and trust, as men in need turn to Kent & Miller for clothing of reasonable texture and of low prices, confident that they will get the best in quality, style, fit and make. Long experience has proved that for some kinds of trouble Kent & Miller's ready-made clothing is more valuable and trustworthy than books.

You will find it to your advantage to price goods at Draper's 15 Oneida street, before buying elsewhere, your groceries crockery, glass and platedware, stand and hanging lamps, etc.

THE SUN.

NEW YORK, 1884.

About sixty million copies of THE SUN have gone out of our establishment the past twelve months.

If you were to paste end to end all the columns of The Suns printed and sold last year you would get a continuous strip of interesting information, common sense wisdom, sound doctrine and sane wit long enough to reach from Printing House Square to the top of Mount Copernicus in the Moon then back to Printing House Square, and then, three quarters of the way back to the Moon again.

But The Sun is written for the inhabitants of this earth; this same strip of intelligence would girdle the globe twenty-seven or twenty-eight times.

If every buyer of a copy of The Sun during the past year has spent only one hour over it, and if his wife or grandfather has spent another hour this newspaper in 1883 has afforded the human race thirteen thousand years of steady reading, night and day.

It is only by little calculations like these that you can form any idea of the circulation of the most popular of American newspapers, or of its influence on the opinions and actions of American men and women.

The Sun is and will continue to be, a newspaper which tells the truth without fear of consequences, which gets at the facts no matter how much the process costs, which presents the news of all the world without waste of words and in the most readable shape, which is working with all its heart for the cause of honest government, and which therefore believes that the Republican party must go in the coming year of our Lord, 1884.

If you know The Sun, you like it already, and you will read it with accustomed diligence and profit during what is sure to be the most interesting year in its history. If you do not yet know the Sun it is high time to get into the sunshine.

TERMS TO MAIL SUBSCRIBERS.

The several editions of The Sun are sent by mail postpaid as follows:

DAILY—50 cents a month, $6 a year; with Sunday edition $7.

THE WORLD CHLLENGED

This liniment has been manufactured and used for twenty five years and our innumerable certificates of cure prove it to be an unparalleled success. We do not offer it as an internal remedy, positively asserting that any liniment that can be taken into the stomach without injury can have little efficacy as a specific when externally applied. This being compounded of Oils, is readily absorbed into the system, giving prompt relief even in cases of acute pain caused by Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Sciatica, Lumbago, Sprains, Bruises, Chilblains, or from any cause where a liniment is demanded. The oils are so penetrating that a thorough use of the Liniment will remove all stiffness of joints, lameness of muscles, or pain arising from inflammation or any cause. Even in chronic Spinal Disease, and Paralysis, frequent use of Oil Liniment will effect many cures. Finally for pain in any part of the body, use freely, with rubbing and warmth and we guarantee relief. You will find a trial of it the best certificate of its value. It is the only Liniment made entirely of Oils, and we challenge the world for its equal. Price 25 and 50 cents per bottle. Sold by dealers.

SCROFULA

Usually develops in early life, and is a peculiar morbid condition of the system, usually affecting the glands, often resulting in swellings, enlarged joints, abscesses, thickening of the lips, enlarged neck, sore eyes. A scrofulous condition is often hereditary, but bad diet, too free use of fat meats, bad air, want of sunshine and nourishing food will induce it. Some people are troubled with scrofulous swelling of the glands, and with ulcers and kernels, which may cause very little pain; others may have inward scrofula, scrofula of the lungs, scrofula of the spleen, scrofula of the kidneys, and scrofula of the bones. BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS will drive away any case of scrofula and not to appear in another place, for their action on the blood and bowels will carry the disease entirely from the body.

How Watch Cases are Made.

It is a fact not generally known that the James Boss' Gold Watch Cases really contain more pure gold than many "solid" gold cases. The demand for these watch cases has led to the manufacture of a very poor grade of solid gold watch cases—low in quality, and deficient in quantity. These cases are made from 4½ to 10 karats, and a 5 or 6 karat case is often sold for 12 or 14 karats. It is NOT economy to buy a watch case so poor in quality that it will soon lose its color, or one so soft that it will lose its shape and fail to shut tight, thus letting in dust and damaging the works, or one so thin that a slight blow will break the crystal, and perhaps the movement. It IS economy to buy a James Boss' Gold Watch Case, in which NONE of these things ever occur. This watch case is not an experiment—it has been made nearly thirty years.

HAZLETON, PA., Oct. 24, 1882.

I sold two James Boss' Gold Watch Cases thirty years ago, when they first came out, and they are in good condition yet. One of them is carried by a carpenter, Mr. L. W. Drake, of Hazleton, and only shows the wear in one or two places; the other by Mr. Bowman, of Cunningham, Pa.; and I can produce one or both of these cases at any time.

FASHION NOTES.

Parasols for little girls are ornamented with Kate Greenaway figures.

Yokes are immensely fashionable for young ladies and little girls.

Lace ruffles should trim light summer silks, foulards, all India silken stuffs, and Surahs.

A pretty way of trimming a white and pink gingham dress, is with graduated rows of flat white braid.

The newest stuff in vogue for ladies' is etamine. It is a sort of fine canvas, and comes in all colors.

Sailor hats for ladies have been revived, and will be much worn at watering places and among the mountains.

A novelty in shirts is known as the "Crinolette Shirt" which is made of a new kind of hair cloth, very light and soft, yet elastic.

Small brooches in the form of bees, flies, etc., used to fasten bonnet strings or to place about the body of the dress are much admired.

Velvet dog collars an inch and a half wide, fastened under the chin by a tiny lace pin set with diamonds, are worn with both day and evening toilets.

White dotted Swiss shows printed floral sprays scattered over the surface. This is very effective, and good qualities can be had at 35 cents per yard.

A velvet skirt of a color which harmonizes with white, may be worn with a polonaise of white trimmed with lace and finished with cuffs and collar of velvet to match skirt.

Gold colored silk stockings, with low-cut Ellen Terry half shoes or sandals of black satin, are considered very chic accompaniments to a toilet of black lace or jet embroidered tulle.

White piques are again introduced in vests, with costumes of black or dark velvet. The effect is very pretty, especially for young girls. A light shade of yellow is sometimes substituted for white.

The muslin dress is an ideal summer toilet, and this season it is exquisitely figured upon dotted grounds, in beautifully shaded leaf, flower and fruit designs. It is considered the toilet par excellence for garden parties, with its softening and illuminating ornamentation of plaited lace and softly tinted satin ribbons.

Ladies should wear a Hop Plaster over the small of the back, as it cures all pains and aches. 25cts. at any drug store. All ready to apply.

TEMPERANCE NOTES.

Only five counties in Maryland tolerate saloons.

There are 3,580 local W. C. T. Unions in this country and the Dominion.

The Catholic Total Abstinence Union has 36,911 members. It is believed the number will be doubled this year.

The Christian Statesman says that Milwaukee is conspicuous for the amount of beer consumed in it and also for the fact that there are twice as many suicides in it as there are in any city in this country. Materialism, beer, and self murder make a "conspicuous" trio for any city.

There is a proposition before the Louisiana Legislature for a graded system of license fees, upon the amount of the annual traffic. If it should become law, we imagine there would be an interesting time in finding out how much business had been done and how much tax was to be paid.—American Reformer.

That is good work done by the Catholic Bishop of Albany, in ordering that no more bars be permitted at Catholic picnics in his diocese. He says that he is trying to discourage the base practice of Catholic churches which has hitherto obtained, of farming out the bar as a source of revenue to the church. The prohibition issue includes lager beer.—Union Signal.

Premature grayness avoided by using Parkers Hair Balsam, distinguished for its cleanliness and perfume.

RELIGIOUS READING.

The Churchman says a wise word on the divorce question when it observes that "rigid divorce laws, unless backed ba a wholesome public sentiment, are likely to be dead letters on the statute books."

The Methodists of Canada, now united, will endeavor to make the time of the centenial celebration of the starting of Methodism in this country a time for increasing all their church funds, especially those for missionary and educational work and for superannuated workers. The Canadian church will be represented in the Baltimore meeting in december.

There is an association in London, just a year old, organized to place texts of Scripture in street cars and omnibuses. The street car routes alone number more than 400, and it is estimated that the passenger trafic, which steadily increasing, is 75,000,000 annually. Texts have been placed in fifty of the cars, at a cost of two dollars and a half each for the year, and some good results are claimed.

As an illustration of the progress of mission work in India Mr. Bullock of the London missionary society at Benares recently stated that in 1854 there were but 100,00 Christians there, but now there are 528,000; then there were but 29 native preachers, while now there 674. In 1864 native Christians only raised £60,000; now they give £230,000 a year, or about nine shilings each.

If you are doubful about the economy of using the finest potatoes for seed, try a bushel at least, and see for yourself which will produce the most and largest tubers.

An eminent seedsman and gardner states that to the farmer the entire cost of planting, cultivating, harvesting, storing and marketing cabbage need not be over one cent per head.

Underdraining lengthens the season for the growth and maturity of crops by permitting of cultivation two weeks earlier in the season, and by keeping the soil warmer for a longer period.

In feeding oats to horses during the season of hard labor remember that the best are not always those which look bright and are free from mustiness or other oder indicating previous dampness or heat; weight of oats determines value, if their condition is good. Light ones contain little nutriment. It pays, at this hardworking time of the year to feed good grain and good hay.

The fight with the weeds in the corn field should not stop with the cultivator. We have frequently seen farmers strive manfully against the pests until midsummer, and then, through negligence, subject themselves to annoyance through through the next season. Some weeds have a limited season of growth, and if kept rooted out till midsummer, will rarely come up again; others continue growing until severe frosts come. An old Illinois farmer said a cocklebur would come up in the morning, grow until four in the afternoon, and mature seeds before the frost could kill it that night. This is an exaggeration, yet the cockleburr must be fought until there are heavy frosts. The velvet leaf, Jimson, and rag-weeds, will commence growth almost as late. Weeds are very prolific, and an occasional one gone to seed in the corn field, will insure a good crop the next season. Corn should not be cultivated after it is tasseled, but the weeds can be cut out without disturbing the soil. For this purpose we have seen a short scythe used, but we much prefer a hoe with a sharp edge.

The Dude and the Cowboy.

"Next!" yelled a Third street barber yesterday as he looked around the room for a new customer. At the call a long-haired cowboy from the bad lands of Montana and a Minneapolis dude came to their feet and advanced toward the chair. The dude was a little ahead and seated himself when the cow puncher said he was in a hurry and ordered the dude up; but he claimed he was in his turn and didn't come up.

"Look hyar, ye pin-legged gopher," howled the Montana tough, "ef yer don't vamoose outer that ar chair in less'n two shakes er a steer's tail, I'll break yer up an' use yer ter plug rat holes with.

And the cowboy let off an athletic laugh that made the barber turn chalky, but the dude didn't move.

"Did you hyar me murmur?" shouted the cattleman.

"Aw, yaas, I aw, heard sawmthing," replied the dude.

"Yaas aw, wal aw, I'll give yaw just a half a minute to git."

"Weally, my boy," replied his dudeship, "you see I cawn't think of moving so wapidly. It isn't natural, you knaw; it's weally too warm for such axawsize."

"Aw, it is, aw, wal I'll jest take er contract ter move yer," and the cow man moved over in the direction of the half reclining dude and caught him by the collar. The barber said he thought a Dakota threshing machine had got in and taken possession for the next five minutes; the cowboy's boots went over and mixed up with a lot of cosmetics; a seven-shooter from his belt got into a tussle with a hair brush and a lot of razors, his hair was pounded down in the crack of the floor, and the mirrors were spattered with drops of his gore. When the dude finished the cowboy looked as if he had been holding an indignation meeting in a slaughter house, and straightening his nose, and gathering up what was left of his raiment, he said he guessed he'd go over to another shop, there were so many ahead of him and he was in considerable of a hurry. The dude, pulling a handful of the cowboy's hair out of his pocket and dropping it in the waste basket said: "That will put me in good trim for the ball game this afternoon."—Detroit Free Press.

Popularity and usefelness of Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy—A Thrilling Letter from a Master Mechanic.

MASTER MECHANIC'S & SUPERINTENDENT'S OFFICE
LOWELL REPAIR SHOPS of BOSTON & LOWELL R. R.
LOWELL, Mass., March 25, 1881.

Dr. David Kennedy, Rondout, N. Y.

DEAR SIR: I think it is due to you that I should make the following statement, and I make it voluntarily and wilingly: On the 8th day of June, 1881, I was taken with what was called paralysis of the bowels. The seizure was unexpected and terrible. The stomach and other organs seemed to sympatize with it and to have lost all power of action. For a long time my life was despaired of, but at length I recovered so far as to be able to ride out. By the advice of my physician I visited Poland Springs (Vt.) hoping to benefit from the waters. But they did me no good. Neither were the best physicians of Lowell and Boston, whom I consulted, able to afford me more than transcient relief. I gained no strength and my case appeared almost hopeless. In the Fall a friend advised me to try KENNEDY'S FAVORITE REMEDY, and although opposed to patent medicines, I made the trial. To make a long story short—FAVORITE REMEDY, in my opinion, saved my life. I consider it the best preparation in the world for stomach difficulties, as well as of the Liver and other organs. I am glad to say it is in general use among the R. R. men in this vicinity.

Yours, etc., A. J. GIFFORD.

Mr. Gifford is the Master Mechanic of the Lowell division of the Boston & Lowell Railroad, and his illness and recovery are known to many who can testify to the facts in his letter.

Use this medicine for all diseases of the Blood, Kidneys, Liver, Stomach, Bowels, and Skin. It may save you or yours from pain and death.

[WRITTEN IN THE ILLINOIS STATE PRISON.]

It's curious isn't it Billy,
  The changes that twelve months may bring.
Last year I was at Saratoga,
  As happy and rich as a king—
I was raking in pools on the races,
  And feeing the waiters with "ten,"
And sipping mint juleps by twilight;
  And to day I am here in the "pen."

"What led me to do it?" What always
  Leads men to destruction and crime!
The Prodigal Son, whom you've read of,
  Has altered somewhat in his time.
He spends his substance as freely
  As the biblical fellow of old;
But when it is gone he fancies
  The husks will turn into gold.

Champaigne, a box at the opera,
  High steps while fortune is flush,
The passionate kiss of woman
  Whose cheeks have forgotten to blush—
The old, old story, Billy,
  Of pleasures that end in tears—
The froth that foams for an hour,
  The dregs that are tasted for years.

Last night, as I sat here and pondered
  On the end of my evil ways,
There arose like a phantom before me
  The vision of boyhood days.
I thought of my old home, Billy,
  Of the school-house that stood on the hill,
Of the brook that flowed through the Meadow—
  I can e'en hear its music still.

Again I thought of my mother,
  Of the mother who taught me to pray,
Whose love was a precious treasure
  That I heedlessly cast away.
I saw again in my visions
  The fresh-lipped careless boy,
To whom the future was boundless,
  And the past but a mighty toy.

I thought of all this as I sat here—
  Of my ruined and waisted life—
And the pangs of remorse were bitter—
  They pierced my heart like a knife.
It takes some courage, Bill,
  To laugh in the face of fate,
When the yearning ambitions of manhood
  Are blasted at twenty-eight.

HIS SECURITY.

"Well, I never!" and pretty Minnie Hastings pounced into the old farm kitchen abruptly, looking like some full-blown rose that some wind or circumstance had blown in there to brighten the room—not that it was not bright and clean and pretty as a kitchen can be made by care and "elbow grease;" but the place must have been bright, indeed, that would gain nothing by having Miss Minnie in it.

Her face was a little flushed from some excitement, and her red lips were just a cross between a defiant curl and a distracting pout.

"Why, Minnie, what's the matter?" asked the mild voice of her mother, as she looked up from her work.

"Matter, mother? Why that horrid Harry Davidge is back from his college or travels, or wherever he was (and I'm sure it doesn't matter), and it seems that he is going to take up his abode at his farm and lord it over the whole community, I suppose. But of one thing I am sure," and pretty Minnie was all emphasis, "he won't lord it over me!"

"Why, Minnie! What has Mr. Davidge done that is such a crime?" asked her mother. "I have always heard him spoken of very highly. He was always an honest, manly boy, I am sure, and your father was saying just the other day that he thought from what he had learned of Mr. Davidge as a man, that his manhood is fulfilling all the promise of his youth."

"Oh, yes; I'll be bound papa would think him a paragon. And of course he is very manly and intellectual and all that; but I am sure that he is very unmannerly and unsocial as well. Why, mother, I met him on my way to the postoffice this evening, and he never as much as looked at me."

Now to an ordinary mortal it would seem strange surely in a young man of intelligence, and possessing an "eye for the beautiful," to fail to "look at" Miss Minnie whenever opportunity offered. Indeed the number of young men in the neighborhood who would have gladly aided in bringing about such opportunities for their own benefit was not small, for Minnie was known and admired far and near, and it would have taken all her little pointed fingers to number the beauxs she could have had at her feet had she been of such mind. But they all found her unapproachable, as she laughed at them and sang and fluttered around at sweet-voiced and free-hearted as a thrush. What woman is pretty and does not know it? And how great the number who know it and are not, for that matter?

Minnie liked well to be admired, and when Mr. Davidge passed her that evening on the village road, with his fine head bent down in a deep study, to the entire exclusion of pretty things, real or traditional, she thought she was fully justified in being offended.

Harry Davidge's father died when Harry was in his thirteenth year. John Davidge, the father, had been a life-long friend of Alvin Hastings, Minnie's father. They were boys together at school, in orchards, milldams and such haunts of rural boyhood. They grew to manhood together Davidge married and Hastings was his "best man." They owned fine farms adjoining each other, and had never a quarrel about lines or [illegible] or water rights, and each [illegible] as closely as may be the commandment "love thy neighbor as thyself." [illegible] Davidge died, and the [illegible] passed into the hands of a lawyer [illegible] in the country town of L——, in [illegible] for the heir, the above-mentioned [illegible] Davidge. with enough fine sentiment and good sense in him to draw him back to the old farm to live at his ease and enjoy his wealth of purse and mind among the fields and woods around and in the home where his father and mother lived and worked and died.

* * * * *

The moon came up over the woods in rare beauty, the sky was clear, and the few stars that dared shine when the moon was so bright sparkled and winked from their blue setting. The fields were brown, from autumn's pencil, and as Minnie sat at her window and looked out over them while the evening's calm peace and rest seemed to fall on her life and senses like nature's benediction she could see outlined in the semi-darkness, across a half dozen fields, the fine farm house of the Davidge property, guarded with its strong old trees, that would look so beautiful, with their trimming of autumn leaves, if the sun's light were on them, instead of the moon's. But the old house looked pretty enough, and seemed in such perfect keeping with the light and shadows of the scene, that Minnie, with her chin resting on her palms, and her arms on the window-sill, fell to dreaming about the shadowy place over there, and speculating as to how the "proud" owner was passing the evening alone in his great echoing house.

Of course he was "proud."

Miss Minnie had settled that point in her mind, and found herself half articulating—"I hate proud people."

Minnie felt like dreaming with her eyes open this evening and had gone to her room early. Her parents were on the porch below talking, and she could have heard all they said if she had been attentive; presently, however, some of her father's words attracted her attention and she forgot her dreaming in a hurry.

"I can't see what's to be done," her father continued after she began to listed. "Morgan was partly intoxicated, but sober enough to mean what he said, and he gave me to understand the foreclosure would occur early next week if the money was not forthcoming, and as it is impossible for me to get it, I do not see what we can do but let the place go. It seems very hard, after we have lived here all our lives and are no longer young nor able to face the world as we once were, that we must leave it now, and Minnie——" and his voice sank so low that the wide-eyed listener up stairs, with the moonlight's glory flooding in at the window over her, could hear no more.

But ah, she had heard enough. Her dear old home to be sold, sacrificed? Her parents to be turned out into the world, penniless and growing old? Driven from the home they had worked and striven so hard to make comfortable, that was a part of their lives—oh, what could she do for them?

What, indeed? What may the flower do to turn aside the angry wind?

Well, at least she could cry, and the big tears ran through her fingers and rolled down on the window-sill for the moonlight to sparkle in them.

Presently the front gate opened and shut with a click, and a tall man walked through the shadows up to where her parents were sitting. Minnie could not see him plainly enough to distinguish who he was, and fell to imagining. When the visitor reached the porch she heard her father say:

"Why, Mr. Davidge, you call late, I am glad to see you though, to welcome you back to——"

"Mr. Hastings, excuse my interruption," said Davidge, excitedly. "I do call rather late, but I will explain. I was in the village this afternoon and overheard a half-drunken fellow talking to some companions about your—well, about you and your circumstances. I was very sorry, indeed, to hear it, and it has troubled me all the evening. I did not know how you would take my busying myself with your affairs. I knew I couldn't rest to-night. I took a walk, and here I am, sir, to offer you sympathy in the shape of that—you must accept it—I will take no refusal. Can you read it? That covers that fellow's claim, I believe?"

"Yes, yes, Mr. Davidge," Minnie heard her father falter, "but do you know—this is for a very large sum? What security——"

"Security!" said Davidge quickly; "security be——" checking himself. "I want no security but the honor of an honest man, one who was a friend to my father, and one whom my father loved and trusted and taught me to honor (with a ring in his voice), and you will please accept this—this loan from my father's son! Mr. Hastings, Mrs. Hastings, good night."

And Minnie heard her father's voice following the young man, saying:

"His father's son—may God bless him!" and she sank on her knees by the open window, her face turned up to the beautiful, kind heavens, while her sweet lips formed a prayer:

"May God bless him!"

* * * * * * *

"Yes, I'll do it," said Minnie to herself the next evening, and she got her hat and started "for a walk," as she told her mother, who, with her father, had been in excellent spirits all day.

Minnie was evidently walking with a purpose in view, for she went along briskly. She was very pretty—we all know what a pretty girl is like, so details may be excused. And, of course, as has been said, she knew she was pretty, but she was twice as pretty as she knew.

The path she had chosen seemed to lead her to the Davidge farm house. When she reached the long front porch she hesitated, but, gathering courage, she gave a timid knock on the heavy walnut door set deep in the wall. A voice that she remembered since the previous evening bade her "Come in," kindly.

[illegible] opened the door and there sat the [illegible]

cigar smoke. He almost lost his equilibrium backward when he saw who his caller was, and made a number of ridiculous moves before he reached his perpendicular, the while stammering: "I—ah!—why—say, excuse me; please take a chair!"

He regained his composure when he saw Minnie smiling at him and his embarrassment.

"You don't remember me," ventured Minnie; "I am Minnie Hastings."

"Y-yes," stammered Davidge, "I remember you perfectly, but you have grown so beau—have grown so that I did not recognize—recognize your knock," both laughing at the idea.

But Minnie had a message and it must be out, so she began:

"Mr. Davidge, you will please excuse me for coming to see you—excuse me for the sake of the days when we were children and playmates—for the sake of auld lang syne."

Her Scottish accent was perfect, as was also her smile, and, like Captain Cuttle, Mr. Davidge "made a note o' it," and thought he would certainly excuse her.

"The object of my call at this time, Mr. Davidge"—he wished she would call him Harry—"is this: From my window I heard your conversation with my father last evening. That was the first I knew of his embarrassment. You have saved him from disgrace, and my mother and him from possible beggary, and my father's daughter comes to your father's son to thank him! How shall I do it?"

There was something very like tears in both their eyes, and both had arisen and stood confronting each other.

Minnie's face was flushing beautifully, and her bright eyes shining with sincerity. Mr. Davidge extended his hand to her.

"Minnie," he said—"you must allow me to call you Minnie, for through all these years wherever I have wandered I have always thought of you as the little Minnie of our childhood. How shall you thank me? Believe me, I was not acting the heroic in what I did last evening, and I had not counted on any thanks; but I am only human, and I admit am strongly tempted to accept them, since you bring them. And shall I tell you how to thank me?"

Minnie managed to say "Yes." Had the word been a polysyllable she could never have got it out.

"By letting the Minnie of my boyhood be the Minnie of my manhood; by giving me the confidence, the friendship, the—love you gave me then! I do not ask it as a thank-offering, Minnie, but because I love you, and have always loved you, and because my heart cries out to you! Can you thank me that much, Minnie—my Minnie?"

Minnie was in tears again and could say nothing, but by some superior knowledge that love seems to possess, Harry divined her answer, and they both seemed extremely happy.

Two hours later the lovers walked up to the porch of Minnie's home, where her father was sitting, smoking his pipe, unconscious of their presence until they were almost beside him, when he looked up with surprise to see them together, but did not fail to extend his hand in welcome to Mr. Davidge.

"Mr. Hastings," said Harry, "Miss Minnie and I have been talking over what occurred here last evening—she having overheard our conversation—and I have come to the conclusion that I should have some security."

"Name it, Mr. Davidge, name it."

"Minnie!"

"Minnie?" asked Mr. Hastings in a dazed, perplexed way. "Minnie? Oh, yes, I see"—light dawning upon him—"why, bless me, yes—to be sure—Minnie? Certainly, Mr. Davidge, certainly."

Then Minnie remembered that she had something important to attend to in the house, and bounded away with her lover's admiring eyes and good natured laugh following her.

REGULARS.

One of the strongest proofs of the value of Kidney-Wort as a remedy for all diseases of the Kidneys, Liver and Bowels, is the fact that it is used and prescribed by "regular" physicians. Phillip C. Ballou, M. D., of Monkton, Vt., says: "Take it all in all, it is the most successful remedy I have ever used."

FASHION NOTES.

The skirts of girls' dresses are made longer.

Dark stockings in solid colors are preferred for children's wear.

Hats with high, soping crowns and wide brims are worn by girls of all ages.

Tidies are no longer made square, those of scarf shape being considered "better form."

Ribbon belts, with many loops and a long bow, are much worn and add greatly to the toilet.

Ear-rings are reserved for evening wear, and even then only with jewels and rare stones are fashionable.

Elderly ladies find the the pretty lawns in black and white, and violet and white, both comfortable and becoming.

Pretty costumes of India Mull, are made with no other trimming than that given by yards of fine hem stitching.

Plain white handkerchiefs, with the narrowest possible hemstitched borders are now preferred to those with colored borders.

As little jewelry as possible is worn in the day time by ladies of good taste. The breast pin, cuff-buttons and bangles are quite sufficient.

White flannel costumes are chosen for mountain wear, and are usually severely plain in style, though if desired, cuffs, collar, vest, or rows of silver braid are added.

A pretty pin is composed of a tiny gold eagle holding in his talons a partially furled American flag, the stars and stripes being very decidedly in colored enamel.

Ladies who spend some of their summer hours in making fanciful things for the enevitable church fairs which "come on with the winter's cold," may like to know that the novelties in the way of pin-cushions are those made of olive satin, with flax-colored lace put over two corners and forming the full curtain all the way round, while the two other corners are decorated by handsome painted flowers. In the center of the cushion is a circular hole for scent-bottle. A brush cover to match the pin-cushion of olive green satin, trimmed with the flag lace, lined with quilted pink silk and decorated by a painted spray of flowers. One side is left open that the corner may be turned back to show the lining.

It doesn't follow that a patient will die because doctors have given him up, or that he will recover because they promise to pull him through. ☞For several years we have furnished the Dairymen of America with an excellent artificial color for butter; so meritorious that it met with great success everywhere receiving the highest and only prizes at both International Dairy Fairs.

☞But by patient and scientific chemical research we have improved in several points, and now offer this new color as the best in the world.

It Will Not Color the Buttermilk. It Will Not Turn Rancid. It is the Strongest, Brightest and Cheapest Color Made.

☞And, while prepared in oil, is so compounded that it is impossible for it to become rancid.

☞BEWARE of all imitations, and of all other oil colors, for they are liable to become rancid and spoil the butter.

☞If you cannot get the "improved" write us to know where and how to get it without extra expense. (46)

The Quequechan mill of Fall River, Mass., will shut down within two weeks for an indefinite period, owing to the depressed condition of the print cloth market. This mill employs 175 hands, with a weekly pay roll of $1,000, and a weekly production of 1,500 pieces. The Annawam mill is already shut down for an indefinite period, and the Weetantoe mill is running every other week. A temporary shut down of other mills is probable.

Farmers have nearly closed haying. Most of the grass is light. Potatoes are not flattering as respects having a large crop. There appears to be but few potatoes in a hill.

Politics are warming up. Politicians are telling bad things about the opposite parties. The Republicans are accusing the Democrats of holding to the British policy of free trade, which they call bad. We think the Republicans have a British policy of finance which is worse than the Democratic tariff policy. Both old parties should be very circumspect about talking about each other. Both of them are more British than American.

At Oswego Thursday the races of the Lake Ontario Yacht Association were sailed in a gale, which nearly swamped some of the yachts. The thirty-mile race was won by the Aileen of Toronto over the Vero of Toronto, and the Garfield of Kingston. The fifteen mile race was won by the Iolanthe of Belleville over the Laura, Fascination, Katie Gray and Cricket of Oswego, the Zeta of Sacket's Harbor, Gracie of Belleville and Laura of Kingston. The weather was so heavy that the races were more a test of seagoing qualities and navigation than of speed. Some of the yachts were driven out of the race and drifted down the lake, where they were rescued by steam tugs.

The evidence before the referee in the celebrated Palmer-Kingsford case at Oswego, is in. The whole case hinges on the fact that Mrs Ann Wilber, half sister of Mr. Kingsford, on her death, bed gave the gentleman property amounting to about $40,000, and at the same time gave her only daughter, Julia certain property, which is claimed to have been hers before, with the exception of about $19,000. Afterward Julia was induced to sign papers, which the defendant believes sufficient to stop any claim which Julia Palmer may make. Her counsel believe a great wrong has been done and proposes to sift it to the bottom. The case will be fully submitted September 16, when the referee will go thro' his large stock of evidence.

Not Affected by Age.

Some old specimens of Royal Baking Powder that had been kept on the shelf of a grocery store for ten years were recently tested by Prof. Schedler of New York, for the purpose of measureing the loss of strength they had undergone. It was found that although the powder had been exposed to atmospheric change during all this time—for it was not in air-tight cans—its loss of rising power or strength was less than one per cent, and the powder being practically as good as the day it was put up.

This is a most valuable quality in a baking powder, one which few possess. Most powders if not used when first made are found to inffective. If kept even a few weeks they lose their leavening power, become lumpy or caked, and valueless. This is particularly the case with "bread preparations" or baking powder made from phosphates.

This superior keeping quality in the "Royal" arises from the extraordinary care in its manufacture, and the scientific principles employed in its combination. The articles used in its composition are thoroughly dried by heat before being compounded, and are so prepared and coated as to prevent the action of the acid upon the alkali prematurely, or except under the influence of heat or water necessarilly used in cooking or baking.

The Royal Baking Powder is now used extensively in Australia, Africa, and other low latitudes, where it has been found to be the only baking powder that will withstand the hot, moist atmosphere without detoration.

Edward Brundige, who some time since was in the employ of [illegible] Bristol of this place was arrested last Wednesday night by the sheriff of Cayuga county charged with stealing a horse and carriage from Fair Haven. He was lodged in jail here over night and taken to Cayuga county by the sheriff in the morning. The Auburn Dispatch of Thursday evening gives the particulars. The property belonged to a Mr. Owens, of Martville and was stolen Saturday afternoon from the picnic grounds at North Fair Haven. After getting possession of the property, Brundige drove to Phoenix, reaching there Sunday morning. In the evening he drove to Liverpool, where he traded buggies with the landlord of the hotel there. He endeavored unsuccessfully to sell the horse. From Liverpool he drove to Fairmont, and leaving the horse and buggy here went to Auburn. and on Tuesday returned to Fairmont and from there drove to Elbridge, thence to Jordan and from there drove to Elbridge, thence to Jordan and from there to Fulton—a distance of about sixty miles in one day. He remained at Fulton and again endeavored to dispose of the stolen rig. On Under Sheriff Mead's arrival in Fulton, he secured the assistance of the local officials and soon effected the arrest of Brundige. When arrested, the young man gave away the entire scheme and acted as if feeling exceedingly sorry for the part he had taken. He hardly seemed to realize the enormity of his crime and informed Mr. Mead that he had about given up all hopes of selling the horse and had made up his mind to drive back to Fair Haven. The limited amount of money he had when he left Fair Haven had dwindled down to a few shillings, and the fellow was ready to give up in despair.

Brundige was arraigned before the recorder in Auburn Thursday afternoon. He said he desired to waive examination and await the action of the grand jury. He was committed.

Brundige is but nineteen years of age and is the son of a farmer of sterling Valley who is greatly grieved over his son's misdoings. The Auburn News says the father is pretty well broken up over circumstance, but as the boy has long been tired of farm life and has frequently been suspected of small thefts, he is inclined to make the best of it and regard the prospect of the Elmira reformatory as the best thing that could happen under the circumstances.

Among the Marine Stores a Ship Chandler Spins a Yarn about a Storm.

At the foot of Main St., Buffalo, is the main house of McIteau Edge Co., a ship chandlers' establishment. Stepping out of a down town car, I entered. High on every side, on shelves and off, were piled an array of wares—a grand medley of everything, from the pewter spoon upon which little Jack cut his gums, to the big oil stoves that warm the daily mess. In the office stood Mr. J. C. McBeau, the picture of life and energy, discussing the relative merits of various kinds of starboard and port lights, with a Michigan pilot and an Erie canal man.

"This constant quibbling and argument are as fretful as Salt Rheum," he said, after they went ont; "I've had that enough. For several Springs past there has appeared all over my face and arms a fine scarlet rash. "I've been billious all my life, but I don't know what to make of this. I felt so sleepy and miserable that I knew my system needed renovating and toning up. I took a great deal of medicine in two weeks, to hit this billiousness. The fine rash remained however. I was all broken out. One day, over at the shipyard, one of the sailors began talking to me ebout what was used a great deal on shihboard by the lake sailors for billous disorders. 'Try Dr. Kennedy's FAVORITE REMEDY,' he said 'we get it at the drug store down at the foot of Main street.' I went and got a bottle, and it is the best medicine I ever took for cleansing my blood. The rash disappeared and I never felt better in my life than I did this spring."

AGENTS WANTED!
[illegible]

[illegible] higher prices [illegible] than they did a week ago, as they hardly thought that the state of things in New York would warrant it. Early telegrams from the city were discouraging, but something must have braced up the buyers later in the day, for they advanced the market a full quarter of a cent. The fact is salesmen feel very confident of the future of cheese, and most of them sold only five or six days make. The milk still continues to shrink and the quality of cheese is good, although for the last three days the heat has been rather trying. But there would have been a good deal of holding back if buyers had attempted to hold the market down to 9½c., and rather than see that they added the extra quarter. One small lot of 36 boxes went at 9½c. Then there were 6,768 boxes in 73 lots at 9¾c.; 9 lots, 385 boxes at 9 7-8c.; 10 lots 1,215 boxes, at 10c.; 4 lots, 300 boxes, at 10 1-8c.; 2 lots, 240 boxes, at 10¼c.; and 4 lots 619 boxes at p. t. Sales were 9,863 boxes; commissions 1,052, total 10,915 boxes. Ruling price 9¾c. Transactions a year ago were 11,704 boxes, ruling price 9½c.; two years ago 9,840 boxes, ruling price 10¼c. Unless the make in Canada is much larger comparatively than it is here, it would seem as if the shrinkage must begin to show very rapid in a week, or two at most.

AT LITTLE FALLS.

LITTLE FALLS, July 28, 1884.

We have had a good brisk trade to day with brices advanced fully one-fourth cent above last week's market, and firm at that. Salesmen considered themselves master of the situation and many of them held till the closing hour in order to be sure of the best rate. Such were freely offered at 9¾c., but they expected 10c.; some of them secured it, others concluded to sell at 9¾, and others sold conditionally. All appear to consider the prospect bright for good prices, but they still continue to deplore the heavy shrinkage in yield of the cheese product. No rains of much account to affect pasturage have visited this section as yet. One lot quoted in list below at 10¾c., was the Paine's Hollow factory, and the cheese were the first week in July. Last week this factory sold the last week in June make at 10¼c. Sales to-day are:

1	57	10¾

Farm Dairies.—There was a large sale of cheese on the morning market of the smaller factories and farm dairies. Prices ranged at 9½ and 10¼c., the bulk at 9¾c., several lots at 10c., and only one or two at 10¼c.

Butter.—There were only forty packages of butter sold, over half being creamery, at 22 and 23c., and the balance farm dairy at 21 and 23c.

AT FULTON.

Twenty-three factories were represented at the cheese market Monday evening with 2,191 boxes of farm dairy cheese, which sold at 9 to 9¼ cents. Ruling price at Utica 9 3-4 cents.

Arrested on a Charge of Grand Larceny—Will He be Proven Guilty?

Last Monday morning Mr. V. W. Poole, who for a long period has filled the position of salesman in the drug store of M. M. Williams was arrest on complaint of that gentleman on the charge of grand larceny. Mr. Poole at the time of the arrest was at the Midland depot about to board the train going north, for the purpose of attending of the American Canoe Association to be held at Grindstone Island. On being brought before Justice VanWagenen it was ascertained that the defendant was charged with stealing various articles from the stock of his employer besides money from the drawer. The plea of not guilty was entered and the examination adjourned to allow the defense to prepare.

Deputy sheriff Hulett who made the arrest procured a search warrant and after making an exhaustive search through the luggage and house of the defendant returned the warrant without finding a vestage of the missing articles. We have it from Mr. Stranahan of counsel for the defendant that Mr. Poole will be exculpated to the satisfaction of all and that he deems the arrest a most unwarrented and precipitate proceeding.

REPUBLICAN CAUCUS.

Hot Fight Against Mead in Granby.

The Granby Republican Caucus held at Johnston's hall Saturday at 2 o'clock, p. m. was the largest and most exciting primary meeting ever held in that town, 260 votes being cast for county delegates. The issue was a direct personal attack upon S. B. Mead candidate for District Attorney, the opposition being determined to obtain control of the town and crush Mead who they claim misrepresented the town last spring by voting for N. W. Nutting for delegate to the Chicago convention. The election of iron clad Mead and Nutting delegates to the county and district conventions in the face of intense opposition, and in spite of the malicious vilification of Mead by his opponents attests his popularity in his own town and shows that Mr. Mead knew whereof he spoke when he said in a speech at Oswego that the universal sentiment of this locality is for Nutting. The following delegates were elected.

COUNTY.

H. H. Merriam, Smith Stranahan, Henry Temple, William Summerville, Peter E. Decker, H. C. Gardner, Grove H. Dutton, Barnet Surdam.

DISTRICT.

J. C. Fort, Charles Dexter, Thomas Somers, N. N. Stranahan, Stephen Cathcart, Wm. Hinsdale. A delegation favoring Isaac Pierce for school commissioner was elected by acclamation.

The district delegates were also made assembly delegates and are for H. C. Howe for member. H. H. Merriam, S. B. Mead and John C. Wells were made town committee.

Gov. Squires' Visit.

The Fulton correspondent writes the following to the Syracuse Courier which will be interesting to many here: Colonel Watson C. Squire, the newly appointed governor of Washington Territory, paid Fulton a visit a short time since, and after calling upon a number of old friends and looking through the classic halls of Falley seminary, his early school home, he united with Postmaster Gilbert in a drive to the home of their childhood—the quiet country town of Gilbert's Mills—to where more than sixty years ago two brothers, H. and A. Gilbert, migrated from the town of Paris, Oneida county, refusing land on the banks of the Oswego river, where now stands the village of Fulton, when offered at the moderate price of ten shillings per acre, for fever and ague stared them in the face and they pushed on into the almost unbroken forests, five miles east, and felled the timber, dammed the stream, and erected the mills which gave the village its name. A full quarter of a century has elapsed since the now Gov. Squire was a school boy. He had scarcely reached his majority when the war broke out, and he enlisted and soon after commanded the Ohio sharpshooters. Just before this he had graduated at the Wesleyan university, of Middletown, Conn., and was admitted to practice law in Ohio in 1862. At the close of the war the colonel became interested in the Remington Arms company—marrying Mr. Remington's only daughter, and going abroad filled with important contracts for arms with France, Spain, Russia, Turkey, Egypt, and the South American Republics, winning a high position as an energetic business man. Eight years ago he invested largely in lands in Washington Territory, and has built the thriving village of Seattle, and now has just been appointed the acting governor, on which good fortune his old schoolmates and acquaintances rejoice.

A Fulton Boy Turns Detective.

Sunday July 27, Charles J. Merton was visiting his sister Mrs. J. Coseo, at Martville where he met Andrew Owen, who in the course of conversation stated that he had lost a certain horse and wagon while at Fair Haven and that some one had taken it, and also described a suspected party. Wednesday while Charles was loading his wagon with groceries for delivery, he saw a stranger driving a blanketed horse around on the back streets. He at once recognized the man as the described thief, and telegraphed to Martville and received orders to have the party arrested. Securing the services of Officer Back they went in search of the horse thief. The learned by Mr. Mead, of the Fulton House, that such a party had left some baggage and a horse there and would return some time in the night. Officer Back reinforced the posse by adding Paul Roderick, and stationed him on the canal bridge, corner of First and Oneida and himself on the corner of Second and Oneida, young Merton taking a stand in a lumber car near the Fulton House and awaited results. About 1:30 a. m. Merton heard the low click of a boot heel striking the railroad track and recognizing his man gave the signal and in a minute the officers were on hand and the game bagged.

Baker Speaks.

Last Wednesday morning as I was out shooting squirrels on my father's farm, Charles Ingamells drove by. He called out to me and asked me what I was going to shoot. I said I am going to shoot you. He said you can't. He started his horses on a trot and I asked him if he would give me leave to. He said yes and I shot. I did it without thinking that I would shoot near him and had no intention of so doing. We have been good friends and are now and I am very sorry that such an accident occurred. It was on account of momentary carelessness. I make these statements public that the truth may be known. ERNEST WILLIAM BAKER.

After heairng both sides of the story in regard to this affair we have come to the conclusion that Baker was not wholly to blame. He fired with no malicious intent as stated above. The act was however certainly preposterous.

A Meteor Captured.

The Oswego Falls Obesrver says that on Friday last while H. C. Randall of Fairdale, was working in a field of rye, he heard a whizzing sound and looked up just as a meteorite struck the ground about fifteen feet from him. It crumbled to pieces as it struck and was so hot it scorched the stubble, and after half an hour could hardly be borne in the hand. It was probably three inches in diameter, is of a dark brown color, is quite heavy, and smells strongly of brimstone.

The Democratic Pole.

It is now thought that arrangements will be completed by Saturday for raising the Cleveland and Hendricks pole on First street between the Clark House and Becker's livery. It is of hickory and will be one hundred and twenty-five fieet high from the ground to the truck. Gen. Cochran of New York will probably be the principal speaker. The band will be in attendance and grand old fashioned Democratic ratification if expected.

A Cato citizen lost his hat at a picnic the other day. The Graphic itemizes it as follows: James M. Dutton lost his hat off the tug boat Ross at the teacher's picnic last Saturday. Jimmie says it was a regular Hatter-as gale anyway, and he was busy looking at an "enormous sea serpent" at the time or he wouldn't have lost it.

A Few Interesting Points About the 18th National Encampment of the G. A. R.

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN., July 28, '84.

Editor Fulton Times:

This has been a big week for Minneapolis it being the 18th meeting of the National Encampment of the G. A. R. The old veterans came from all parts of the country. Each State established headquarters where members from the various States were requested to register and where comrades met those they had not seen for years. The New York headquarters were at the West Hotel, the largest house in the northwest, which is just completed, at a cost of a million and a half of dollars. I of course was watching for old comrades but only saw one whom I knew personally, an account of which an account appeared in the Minneapolis Evening Journal. Below is a list of names that may interest some of your readers:

J. R. Young, Co. "H" 24th Infantry and Cavalry, of Liverpool, N. Y.

C. H. Beaulien, Co. "D" 24th Infantry, of Brownsville, Minn.

Wm. McCadden, Co. "I" 24th Infantry, of Louisville, Kansas.

S E. Chandler, Co. "E" 24th Infantry Co. "A" 24th Cavalry, of Minneapolis, Minn.

Richard S. Atkins, 24th Cavalry of Minneapolis, Minn.

E. A. Blakly, Co. "G" 81ts N. Y. Infantry, of Fort Scott, Kansas.

James Gibson, Co. "C" 81st N. Y., of Mason City, Iowa.

A. Whitney, Co. "A." 81st N. Y. Infantry, of Melrose Minn.

E. W. Remore, Co. "F" 147th N. Y. Infantry of LeRoy, Minn.

W. H. Brown, Co. "F" 147th N. Y. Infantry, Bell Wood, Neb.

Andrew Claughan, 147th N. Y. Infantro, Little Valley, N. Y.

E. L. Walrath 12th and 110th N. Y. Infantry, Syracuse, N. Y.

L. P. Storms, Co "A" 110th N. Y. Infantry, of Anoka, Minn.

Samuel W. Earl, Co. "A" 24th Cavalry of Oregon, Wis.

Chas. A. Taylor, Co. "A" 24th Cavalry of Oswego, N. Y.

W. J. Pentelow, Co. "E" 24th N. Y. Infantry.

The two latter were on the roster as delegates but were not present, their names having been taken from the list of delegates.

I culled these names from the roster from regiments that I knew came from "Old Oswego Co."

The roster contains nearly 1,000 names and is gotten up in good shape, it being indexed according to Regiments &c, it will be printed in a convenient form for distribution, accompanying it will be a welcome badge worn by the N. Y. G. A. R. veterans while here, containing the following inscription: "Minneapolis Welcome to New York 18th National Encampment G. A. R. 1884."

This is printed on silk ribbon about 5 inches long by 1¾ wide and is to be kept as a souvenir of the occasion.

This evening, there was a number of former residents of New York, assembled at a down town office to organize a New York society. Each one pesent registered, giving his former home East. A committee on perminent organization was appointed to draft by-laws and plan of action, and the secretary instructed to invite, through the papers, all New Yorkers to send him their names and former residence.

MIDNIGHT LUNCHES.

We have a vocation here followed by several persons that I never saw anywhere else. As you walk the principal business streets after dark you will see men with a basket in one hand and an arrangement constructed out of tin in the other, the latter has an upper and lower part; in the lower part is a heating lamp, and in the upper part is a supply of link sausage, each piece about the size of a man's little finger, these are kept hot by the lamp, the basket contains rye bread sliced, while in a couble of large mouthed bottles can be found prepared horseradish and mustard; the man in crying his wares, says, "red hot 'ere, a nickel pays for a red hot," if you are hungry and have a mile or two to go home you invest a nickel and get two pieces of sausage "red hot" and two slices of rye bread with a bit of mustard or horse radish sandwiches in return. They are on the streets till 12 and 1 o'clock and as a general thing they are kept busy dealing out their "red hots."

Costly Water.

A South Granby correspondent says: Mr. and Mrs. Harrigan of Hinmanville, for the past two weeks have been sending about nine pails of water to the cheese factory at that place in about two cans of milk. The cheese maker, Mr. Burtis, discovered something was wrong, and set about to watch the above parties. They were seen by John Vader and Mr. Burtis to put nine pails of water into two cans of milk. Harrigan has about 20 cows, but Mr. Burtis does not intend to make cheese from water. It will cost Harrigan nearly $400 to get out of this affair.

THE SUN.

NEW YORK, 1884.

About sixty million copies of THE SUN have gone out of our establishment the past twelve months.

If you were to paste end to end all the columns of The Sun printed and sold last year you would get a continuous strip of interesting information, common sense wisdom, sound doctrine and sane wit long enough to reach from Printing House Square to the top of Mount Copernicus in the Moon then back to Printing House Square, and then three quarters of the way back to the Moon again.

But The Sun is written for the inhabitants of this earth; this same strip of intelligence would girdle the globe twenty-seven or twenty-eight times.

If every buyer of a copy of The Sun during the past year has spent only one hour over it, and if his wife or grandfather has spent another hour, this newspaper in 1883 has afforded the human race thirteen thousand years of steady reading, night and day.

It is only by little calculations like these that you can form any idea of the circulation of the most popular of American newspapers, or of its influence on the opinions and actions of American men and women.

The Sun is and will continue to be, a newspaper which tells the truth without fear of consequences, which gets at the facts no matter how much the process costs, which presents the news of all the world without waste of words and in the most readable shape, which is working with all its heart for the cause of honest government, and which therefore believes that the Republican party must go out in the coming year of our Lord, 1884.

If you know The Sun, you like it already, and you will read it with accustomed diligence and profit during what is sure to be the most interesting year in its history. If you do not yet know the Sun it is high time to get into the sunshine.

THE WORLD CHALLENGED

For Man & Beast

This liniment has been manufactured and used for twenty five years and our innumerable certificates of cure prove it to be an unparalled success. We do not offer it as an internal remedy, positively asserting that any liniment that can be taken into the stomach without injury can have little efficacy as a specific when externally applied. This being compounded of Oils, is readily absorbed into the system, giving prompt relief even in cases of acute pain caused by Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Sciatica, Lumbago, Sprains, Bruises, Chilblains, or from any cause where a liniment is demanded. The oils are so penetrating that a thorough use of the Liniment will remove all stiffness of joints, lameness of muscles, or pain arising from inflammation or any cause. Even in chronic Spinal Disease, and Paralysis, frequent use of Oil Liniment will effect many cures. Finally for pain in any part of the body, use freely, with rubbing and warmth and we guarantee relief. You will find a trial of it the best certificate of its value. It is the only Liniment made entirely of Oils, and we challenge the world for its equal. Price 25 and 50 cents per bottle, Sold by dealers.

CONSTIPATION!

There is no medium through which disease so often attacks the system as by Constipation, and there is no other ill flesh is heir to more apt to be neglected, from the fact material inconvenience may not be immediately felt from irregular action of the bowels. When there is not regular action the retention of decayed and effete matter, with its poisonous gases, soon poisons the whole system by being absorbed into it, causing piles, fistula, headache, impure blood and many other serious affections. BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS will immediately relieve, and one bottle positively cure or relieve any case of Constipation.

"Was troubled for a year with torpid liver and indigestion, and after trying everything imaginable used BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS. The first bottle revived me and the second cured me entirely."—J. S. Williamson, Rochester, N. Y.

How Watch Cases are Made.

In 1875, thirteen men comprised the entire working force used in the manufacture of the James Boss' Gold Watch Case. Now over five hundred are employed, and the number is constantly increasing. The reason of this increase is this: In the James Boss' Gold Watch Case all the metal in sight and subject to wear is solid gold, while the remainder, which only lends strength to the case, is of stronger metal than gold, giving gold where gold is needed, and strong, elastic metal where strength and elasticity are needed, a combination producing a watch case better than solid gold and at ONE-HALF the cost.

Over 200,000 of these cases TRADE MARK have been sold, and every jeweler in the country can testify to their quality and merit.

LUDINGTON, MICH., Dec. 6, 1882.

F. W. Marsh, of the Democrat, bought a Jas. Boss' Gold Watch case 18 years ago, and carried it until a short time ago, when I purchased it, and sold it to a customer. The case showed no signs of wear, except that natural to any case, and I am satisfied can be safely guaranteed for at least ten years more. I have sold the James Boss' Gold Watch Case for many years, and the parties who bought the first ones are carrying them to-day, as well satisfied as though they had bought a solid gold case costing twice the money. I regard them as the only cases of this kind a jeweler should sell who desires to give his customers the worth of their money or values his reputation.

WM. J. CUSHWAY, Jeweler.

NEW AND BEAUTIFUL DESIGNS

[illegible]

It is true, my son, a man may smile and smile and be a villain. But it is equally true that a man may never smile and also be a villain of the inkiest hue. I know it is quite the thing with a certain class of people to decry the the smiling man and to entertain the gravest suspicion against the man who is so monotonously pleasant that he is sometimes offensively unpleasant. I know that certain people bid you beware of the man who is always smiling. But you should also beware of a man who always greets you with a glare. If I am to be beguiled by a villain I think I rather prefer the smiling villain. He will swindle me courteously anyhow. I do not admire saturnine countenances even on good men. I do not enjoy any real pleasure in contemplating the the bird of prey visages; the hungry glare of the village horse trader, for instance, never improves my appetite. I do not think there is good reason for fearing the man who smiles in all sorts of human weather. I do not always believe in his smile. There are times when he bores me beyond measure. Sometimes his set, unvarying smile wearies me as does the unwinking sun in the dead, cloudless calm of successive August days, and I want to quarrel with him and try and make him cloud up and thunder a little, or at least lightning. I don't believe his smile is internally a reflex of his feelings. He must feel blue and dismal, and troubled and chafed, and penitent and doubtful, and anxious and longing at times like the rest of us. But if he choses to vail his troubles behind a smile that is so set that it wearies us, why that his way of trying to keep his light shining in this troubled world, my son. It doesn't prove that he is a villian. All men who smile and smile are not villains, nor are all men who look solemn good men. When you hear a man saying, "Look out for the man who always smiles," that is the man, my son, who will rehypothecate your collaterals.—R. J. Burdette.

A Waiting Maid's Revenge.

A woman of great wealth tells me that she is compelled to give up a dwelling which has newly cost $200,000, on account of the successful vengeance of a serving maid. The mistress is old, and as nervous and notional as only persons of fortune can afford to be. The servant one of those young, pretty, velvety French creatures who are now fashionable in New York luxarious households, especially as attendants upon rich women. She was discharged for some misdoing, but was to remain until the end of her month. It was in this interval that she invented a retaliation, which has proven the most ingenious and effective of any that ever I heard of, excepting those involving the perpetrator in danger of punishment. The house had a commanding over look of Central Park, and the girl knew that these fields were dotted over with places where suicides had been committed. No weak passes without at least one voluntary departure from the park to eternity. The lakes are handy for drowning, the trees for hanging, and the secluded bowers for an uninterrupted use of pistol or knife. It is a question with me whether the self-murderers all go there for the purpose deliberately. Is it not likely that the leisure of the unfortunate, when spent aside from the bustle of city business, becomes so lonesome that death seems preferable? The French maid went into no such an abstruse consideration of the subject. She was aware that her mistress was abnormally affected by anything weird or tragic. So she told her of the numerous suicides, pointed out from the window many spots where this poor devil had hanged himself, where that one had died by drowning, and where the other had blown his brains away. She added, with a shrug and shudder, that she fancied she could see, o nights, the ghosts of the self-slain haunting the places of their crimes. The old woman was horrified. She could not look at the park, which had previously been a solace to her eyes, without descrying the points which the girl had invested with grewsome interest. She fondly hoped that the wretch had lied, but on sending a man to the newspaper office to make an examination of the files she found that the tragedies had in the main been correctly located. After months of mental torture, she has gone to Newport for the summer, and will never return to her house alongside Central Park.—[Detroit Free Press.

The Cholera Not Likely to Come Here This Year.

In regard to the cholera now epidemic at Marseilles and other cities in Southern France, Surgeon-General Frank Hamilton says it will probably get to Paris, but he does not think it will be epidemic there to the same extent. An epidemic is not expected in England. The United States, Dr. Hamilton says is still less liable to the scourge. It will not come here this year unless by great neglect of sanitary precautions, but may come next year. Upon the question of funds at the service of the bureau to prevent and check the disease, Dr. Hamilton says the means of the service are greatly reduced. Congress declined to appropriate for the medical inspectors abroad, on whom the bureau must depend for the unbiased information required to take the steps necessary to prevent the introduction of the disease. The sum of $10,000 was asked for and agreed to by the House of Representatives but was rejected the Senate. This expense must now come out of the epidemic fund, as the system of inspection has to be kept up. This fund is also charged with the expense of the quarantine station at Ship Island, Sapelo Sound and and Cape Charles. The total found, after these reductions, available for contingencies and aid of local boards will only be about $[illegible], and will have to be held in reserve. The approach of cold weather is relied on as a check upon yellow fever but has no particular bearing on cholera.—Detroit Free Press.

For several Springs past there has appeared all over my face and arms a fine scarlet rash. "I've been bilious all my life, but I don't know what to make of this. I felt so sleepy and miserable that I knew my system needed renovating and toning up. I took a great deal of medicine in two weeks, to hit this billiousness. The fine rash remained however. I was all broken out. One day, over at the shipyard, one of the sailors began talking to me about what was used a great deal on shipboard by the lake sailors for billious disorders. 'Try Dr. Kennedy's FAVORITE REMEDY,' he said 'we get it at the drug store down at the foot of Main street.' I went and got a bottle, and it is the best medicine I ever took for cleansing my blood. The rash disappeared and I never felt better in my life than I did this spring."

Rev. W. H. Sloan, of Albion, N. Y., has accepted an invitation from the Baptist Home Missionary Society to superintend Missionary work in Mexico.

Grace church, Philadelphia, not long ago a struggling Mission church, has inagurated a misson school at Tioga, one of the beautiful suburbs of the city, which bids fair in time to become a church in a much needed locality.

The whole number of Congregational churches in this country, according to the Year Book for 1884, is 4,016; the number of ministers 3,796, and of church members, 399,246. There was a net gain of 78 churches and 8,627 members during the past year.

The list of Congregational churches without pastors in the State of Illinois has been reduced from seventy to forty within the past few months, owing to the large number of men who have recently gone there from other states and from England.

The death is given by cable of Mrs. Laura M. Kelly, of Maulmain, who fell asleep July 20th. She was a daughter of the late Rev. A. R. R. Crawley, missionary to Burmah, and was with her husband a missionary of the American Baptist Missionary Union. She had been in Burmah less than two years and leaves one child, a son.

Beecher's Bad Head.

For two months in the year Henry Ward Beecher can't preach. In August and September he takes his vacation and endures the onset of the hay-fever. A man with hay fever isn't accountable for his actions. He is frantic with snuffing, sneezing and headache. Every nerve in his skull thrills with distress, and his head is a fountain of tears. He lives odly to fly from seaside to mountain-top in search of relief. This form of catarrh (hay fever) Ely's Cream Balm will cure. Placed in the nostrils it penetrates and soothes the affected parts at once, restores the impaired senses and creates healthy secretions. You cannot run away from hay fever, but you can drive it from you by using Ely's Cream Balm.

Rheumatic Syrup Co.:

Gents:—I wish to express my appreciation of your wonderful remedy for the cure of rheumatism, dyspepsia and general debility. I have been a great sufferer form that terrible disease—rheumatism for more than a year, and could get no rest or relief day or night for the whole time. Like almost everybody else similiarly afflicted, I tried many different remedies, and consulted a number of physicians. But getting only temporary, relief from any of these sources, I almost despaired of ever again being restored to my normal condition and once more free from pain. At this time, hearing some many recommend your Rheumatic Syrup as an infallible cure for rheumatism, and knowing that they had been troubled the same as myself and were now permanently cured by the use of your remedy, I was inspired by their unbounded faith in its healing powers, and resolved to test its efficiency in my own case; and the result of it is that after taking four bottles my rheumatism had all disappeared and [illegible]

History of the Hardest Struggle of His Life—Of Deep Interest to all Professions.

WORCHESTER, Mass., March 23d 1884.

Dr. David Kennedy, Rondout, N. Y.:

DEAR SIR: My son, a lad of fifteen, editor of the "Go-Ahead," amateur journal, of this city, has been at different times most severely and apparently hopelessly, afflicted with Salt Rheum. When a very small child his body was almost entirely covered with this loathsome eruption. It mostly passed away, however, after the teething period, and he was not seriously troubled with it again until about one year ago, when the salt rheum first appeared on his hands between his fingers, then on his limbs, then on his face and head in one solid mass. His condition was terrible. The rash resembled ivy poisoning and we at first fancied it might be something not so bad as his old troubles, but the physicians pronounced it salt rheum and made every effort without avail, to cure it. We tried a preparation widely advertised as a specific for skin diseases, but it made about as much of an impression as so much cold water might have done. You can understand the situation when I say we were in despair of obtaining real help from any source.

At this point, through the advice of Mr. J. W. Bacon, whose daughter had been cured by it, I tried KENNEDY'S FAVORITE REMEDY. This was the right and only thing at last! The skin began to heal at once, and to-day the evidences of the disease have wholly disappeared. How thankful we are I can not leave you to imagine.

Yours,

SEVENTEENTH YEAR. FULTON, OSWEGO COUNTY, N. Y., WEDNESDAY, [illegible] 188[illegible] VOLUME 17—NUMBER 13

TERMS—$[illegible] A YEAR IN ADVANCE. SINGLE COPIES THREE CENTS

AN HONEST SOUL.

"Thar's Mis' Bliss' pieces in that brown caliker bag, an' thar's Mis' Bennet's pieces in the bed tickin' bag," said she, surveying the two bags leaning against her kitchen wall complacently. "I'll get a dollar for both of them quilts, an' thar'll be two dollars. I've got a dollar an' sixty-three cents on hand now, an' merlasses, an' some salt fish an' portaters in the house. I'll get along middlin' well, I reckon. Thar ain't no call for me to worry. I'll red up the house a leetle now, and then I'll begin on Mis' Bliss' pieces."

The house was an infinitesimal affair, containing only two rooms besides the tiny leanto which served as wood-shed. It stood far enough back from the road for a pretentious mansion, and there was one curious feature about it—not a door or window was there in front, only a blank, unbroken wall. Strangers passing by used to stare wonderingly at it sometimes, but it was explained easily enough. Old Simeon Patch, years ago, when the longing for a home of his own had grown strong in his heart, and he had only a few hundred dollars saved from his hard earnings to invest in one, had wisely done the best he could with what he had.

Not much remained to spend on the house after the spacious lot was paid for, so he resolved to build as much house as he could with his money, and complete it when better days should come.

This tiny edifice was in reality simply the L of a goodly two-story house, which had existed only in the fond and faithful fancies of Simeon Patch and his wife. That blank front wall was designed to be joined to the projected main building; so of course there was no need of doors or windows. Simeon Patch came of a hard-working, honest race, whose pride it had been to keep out of debt, and he was a true child of his ancestors. Not a dollar would he spend that was not in his hand; a mortgaged house was his horror. So he paid cash for every blade of grass on his lot of land, and every nail in his bit of a house, and settled down patiently in it until he should grub together enough more to buy a few additional boards and shingles.

That time never came; he died in the course of a few years, after a lingering illness, and only had enough saved to pay his doctor's bill and funeral expenses, and leave his daughter entirely without debt in their little fragment of a house on the big sorry lot of land.

There they had lived, mother and daughter, earning and saving in various little petty ways, keeping their heads sturdily above water, and holding the dreaded mortgage resolutely off the house for many years. Then the mother died, and the daughter, Martha Patch, took up the little homely struggle alone. She was over seventy now, a small, slender old woman, as straight as a rail, with sharp black eyes, with the quick toss of her head when she spoke. She did housewifely jobs for the neighbors, wove rag carpets, pieced bed quilts, braided rugs, etc., and contrived to supply all her simple wants.

This evening, after she had finished putting her house to rights, she fell to investigating the contents of the bags which two of the neighbors had brought in the night before with orders for quilts much to her delight.

"Miss Bliss has got proper harnsome pieces," said she—"proper harnsome; they'll make a good-lookin quilt. Miss Bennet's good too, but they ain't quite ekal to Miss Bliss. I reckon some of 'em's old."

She began spreading some of the largest, prettiest pieces on her white scoured table. "Thar," said she, gazing at one admiringly, "that jest takes my eye, them leetle pink roses is pretty, an, no mistake. I reckon that's French caliker. That's some big pieces, too, Lor, what bag did I take 'em out on! It must hev been Miss Bliss.' I musn't got em mixed.

She cut out some squares, and sat down by the window in a low wooden rocking-chair to sew. This window did not have a very pleasant outlook. The house was situated so far back from the road that it commanded only a rear view of the adjoining one. It was a great cross to Martha Patch. She was one of those women who like to see everything that is going on outside, and who often have excuse enough in the fact that so little is going on with them.

"It's a great divarsion," she used to say, in her snapping way, which was more nervous than ill-natured, bobbing her head violently at the same time—"a very great divarsion to see Mr. Peters' cows goin' in an' out of the barn day arter day; an' that's about all I do see—never git a sight of the folks going to meetin' nor nothin'."

The lack of a front window was a continual source of grief to her.

"When the minister's praying for the widders and orphans, he'd better make mention of one more," said she, once, "an' that's women without front winders."

She and her mother had planned to save money enough to have one some day, but they had never been able to bring it about. A window commanding a view of the street and the passers-by would have been a great source of comfort to the poor old woman sitting and sewing as she did day in and day out. As it was, the few objects of interest which did come within her vision she seized upon eagerly, and made much of. There were some children who, on their way from school, could make a short cut through her yard, and reach home quicker. She watched for them every day, and if they did not appear quite as early as usual she would grow uneasy, [illegible] the clock, and mutter to herself, "[illegible] where them Mosley children [illegible]." [illegible] window escaped her notice. This innocent old gossip fed her mind upon their small domestic affairs in lieu of larger ones. To-day she often paused between her stiches to gaze absorbedly at a yellow bird vibrating nervously round the branches of a young tree opposite. It was early spring, and the branches were all of a light green foliage.

"That's the same yaller bird I saw yesterday, I do b'lieve," said she. I reckon he's goin' to build a nest in that ellum."

Lately she had been watching the progress of the grass gradually springing up all over the yard. One spot where it grew much greener than elsewhere her mind dwelt upon curiously.

"I can't make out," she said to a neighbor, "whether that 'ere spot is greener than the rest because the sun shines brightly thar or because somethin's buried thar."

She toiled steadily on the patch-work quilts. At the end of a fortnight they were nearly completed. She hurried on the last one one forenoon, thinking she would carry them both to their owners that afternoon and get her pay. She did not stop for any dinner.

Spreading them out for one last look before rolling them up in bundles she caught her breath hastily.

"What hev I done?" said she. "Massy sakes! I hevn't gone an' put Mis' Bliss' caliker with the little pink rose on't in Mis' Bennet's quilt! I hev, jest as sure as preachin'! What shell I do?"

The poor old soul stood staring at the quilts in pitiful dismay. "A hull fortnights work," she muttered. "What shell I do? Them pink roses is the prettiest caliker in the hull lot. Mis' Bliss will be mad if they air in Mis' Bennet's quilt. She won't say nothin', an' she'll feel it inside, and it won't be doin' the squar' thing by her. No; if I'm goin' to airn money I'll airn it."

Martha Patch gave her head a jerk. The spirit which animated her father when he went to housekeeping in a piece of a house without any front window, blazed up within her. She made herself a cup of tea, than sat deliberately down by the window to rip the quilt to pieces. It had to be done pretty thoroughly on account of her admiration for the pink calico, and the quantity of it—it figured in nearly every square. "I wish I hed a front winder to set to while I'm doin' on't," said she; but she patiently plied her scissors till dusk, only stopping for a short survey of the Mosely children. After days of steady work the pieces were put together again, this time the pink rose calico in Mrs. Bliss' quilt. Martha Patch rolled the quilts up with a sigh of relief and a sense of virtuous triumph.

"I'll sort over the pieces that's left in the bags," said she, "then I'll take them over an' git my pay. I'm gettin' pretty short of vittles."

She began pulling the pieces out of the bedticking bag, laying them on her lap, and smoothing them out preparatory to doing them up in a neat tight roll to take home—she was very methodical about everything she did. Suddenly she turned pale, and stared wildly at a tiny scrap of calico which she had just fished out of the bag.

"Massy sakes!" she cried; "it ain't, is it?" She clutched Mrs. Bliss' quilt from the table, and laid the bit of calico beside the pink rose squares.

"It's jest the same thing," she groaned, "ain't it came out on Mis' Bennet's bag. Dear me suz! Dear me suz!"

She dropped helplessly into her chair by the window, still holding the quilt and the telltale scrap of calico, and gazed out in a bewildered sort of way. Her poor old eyes looked dim and weak with tears.

"Thar's the Mosley children comin," she said—"happy little gals, laughin' an' hollerin', goin' home th their mother to git a good dinner. Me a-setting here's a lesson they aint larned in their books yit; hope to goodness they never will; hope they wont ever have to piece quilts fur a livin, without any front winder to set to. Thars a dandelion blown out on that grass spot. Reckon there is something buried thar. Lordy marsy! hev I got to rip them two quilts to pieces agin an sew em over?

Finally she resolved to carry a bit of the pink rose calico over to Mrs. Bennets, and find out, without betraying the dilemma she was in, if it was really hers.

Her poor old knees fairly shook under her when she entered Mrs. Bennets sitting-room.

"Why, yes, Miss Patch, it's mine," said Mrs. Bennet in response to her agitated question. "Hattie had a dress like it, don't you remember? There was a lot of new pieces left, and I thought they would work into a quilt nice. But, for pity's sake, Martha, what is the matter? You look just as white as a sheet. You aint sick are you?"

"No," said Martha, with a feeble toss of her head, to keep up the deception; "I aint sick, only kinder all gone with the warm weather. I reckon I'll hev to fix up some thoroughwort tea. Thoroughworts a great strengthener."

"I would," said Mrs. Bennet, sympathizingly, "and dont you work too hard on that quilt; I aint in a bit of a hurry for it. I shant want it before next winter anyway. I only thought I'd like to have it pieced and ready."

"I reckon I cant get it done afore another fortnight, said Martha, trembling.

"I dont care if you dont get it done for the next three months. Dont go yet, Martha; you aint rested a minute, and its a pretty long walk. Dont you want a bite of something before you go? Have a piece of cake? You look real faint."

"No, thanky," said Martha, and departed in spite of all friendly entreaties to tarry. Mrs. Bennet watched her [illegible] Bennet. "She looks real bent over today.

The little wire springiness was, indeed gone from her gait as she crept slowly along the sweet country road, and there was a helpless droop in her thin narrow shoulders. It was a beautiful spring day; the fruit trees were all in blossom. There were more orchards than houses on the way, and more blooming trees to pass than people.

Martha looked up at the white branches as she passed under them. "I kin smell the apple-blows," said she, "but somehow the goodness is all gone out on em. I'd jest as soon smell cabbage. O, dear me suz kin I ever do them quilts over agin?"

When she got home, however, she rallied a little. There was a nervous force about this old woman which was not easily overcome even by an accumulation of misfortunes. She might bend a good deal, but she was almost sure to spring back again. She took off her hood and shawl, and straightened herself up. "Thar's no use putting it off; it's got to be done. I'll have them quilts right ef it kills me!"

She tied on a purple calico apron and sat down to the window again, with the quilt and the scissors. Out came the pink roses. There she sat through the long afternoon cutting the stitches which she had so laboriously put in—a little, defiant old figure, its head, with a flat lace cap on it, bobbing up and down in time with its hands. There were some purple bows on the cap, and they fluttered; quite a little wind blew in at the window.

The eight-day clock on the mantle ticked peacefully. It was a queer old time-piece, which had belonged to her grandmother Patch. A painting of a quaint female with puffed hair and a bunch of roses adorned the front of it under the dial plate. It was flanked on either side by tall green vases.

There was a dull-colored rag carpet of Martha's own manufacture on the floor of the room. Some wooden chairs stood around stiffly; an old yellow map of Massachusetts and a portrait of George Washington hung on the walls. There was not a speck of dust anywhere, nor any disorder. Neatness was one of the chiefest comforts of Martha's life.

Putting and keeping things in order was one of the interests which enlivened her dullness and made the world attractive to her.

The poor soul sat at the window, bending over the quilt till dusk many a day after.

It is a hard question to decide whether there was any real merit in such strained honesty, or whether it was merely a case of morbid conscientiousness. Perhaps the old woman, inheriting very likely her father's scruples, had them so intensefied by age and childishness that they had become a little off the bias of reason.

Be that as it may, she thought it was the right course for her to make the quilts over, and thinking so, it was all that she could do. She could never have been satisfied otherwise. It took her a considerable time longer to finish the quilts again, and this time she began to suffer from other causes than mere fatigue. Her stock of provisions began to run low, and her money was gone. At last she had nothing but a few potatoes in the house to eat. She contrived to dig some dandelion greens once or twice; these, with the potatoes, were all her diet. There was really no necessity for such a state of things; she was surrounded by frendly, well-to-do people, who would have gone without themselves rather than have let her suffer. But she had always been very reticent about her needs, and felt great pride about accepting anything she did not pay for.

But she struggled along until the quilts were done, and no one knew. She set the last stitch quite late one evening; then she spread the quilts out and surveyed them. "Thar they are won, all right," said she; "the pink roses in Mis' Bennet's' an' I ain't cheated no body on their caliker, an' I've airned my money. I'll take 'em hum in the mornin', an' then I'll buy somethin' to eat. I begin to feel a dreadful sinkin' at my stummuck."

She locked up the house carefully—she always felt a great responsibility when she had peoples work on hand—and went to bed.

Next morning she woke up so faint and dizzy that she hardly knew herself. She crawled out into the kitchen, and sank down on the floor. She could not move another step.

"Lor sakes!" she moaned, "I reckon I'm 'bout done to!"

The quilts lay near her on the table, she stared up at them with feeble complacency. "Ef I'm goin' to die, I'm glad I got them quilts done fust. Massy how sinkin' I do feel! I wish I had a cup of tea."

There she lay, and the beautiful spring morning wore on. The sun shown in at the window, and moved nearer and nearer, till finally she lay in a sunbeam, a poor, shrivelled, little old woman, whose resolute spirit had nearly been her death, in her scant night gown and ruffled cap, a little shawl falling from her shoulders. She did not feel ill, only absolutely too weak and helpless to move. Her mind was just as active as ever, and her black eyes peered sharply out of her pinched face. She kept making efforts to rise, but she could not stir.

"Lor sakes!" she snapped out at length, "how long hev I got to lay here! I'm mad."

She saw some dust on the black paint of a chair which stood in the sun, and she eyed it disdainfully. [illegible]

"I wonder ef I ain't goin' to die," she gasped. "I wonder ef I'm prepaired. I never took nothin that shouldn't belong to me that I knows on. Oh, dear me suz, I wish somebody would come.

When her strained ears did catch the sound of footsteps outside, a sudden resolve sprang up in her heart.

"I won't let on to nobody how I've made them quilts over, an' how I hevn't had enough to eat—I won't.

When the door was tried she called out feebly, "who is thar?"

The voice of Mrs. Peters her next-door neighbor, came back in response "It's me. What's the matter, Marthy?"

"I'm kinder used up; don't know how you'll git in: I can't git to the door to unlock it to save my life."

"Can't I get in at the window?"

"Mebbe you kin."

Mrs. Peters was a long-limbed spare woman, and she got in through the window with considerable ease, it being quite low from the ground.

She turned pale when she saw Martha lying on the floor. "Why, Marthy, what is the matter?" How long have you been lying there!"

"Ever s'nce I got up. I was kinder dizzy, an' hed a dreadful sinkin' feelin'. It ain't much, I reckon. Ef I had a cup of tea it would set me right up. Thar's a spoonful left in the pantry. Ef you just put a few kindlin's in the stove. Mis' Peters, an' set in the kettle an' make me a cup, I could git up, I know. I've got to go an' carry them quilts hum to Mis' Bliss an' Mis' Bennet."

"I don't believe but what you've got all tired out over the quilts. You've bhen working too hard."

"No I ain't, Mis' Peters; its nothin' but play piecin' quilts. All I mind is not hvin' a front winder to set to while I'm doin' on't."

Mrs. Peters was a quiet, sensible woman of few words; she insisted on carrying Martha into the bed-rooom and putting her comfortably to bed. It was easily done, she was muscular, and the old woman a very light weight. Then she went into the pantry. She was begining to suspect the state of affairs and her suspicions were strengthened when she saw the bare shelves. She started the fire, put on the tea-kettle, and then slipped across the yard to her own house for further re-enforcements.

Pretty soon Martha was drinking her cup of tea, and eating her toast and dropped egg. She had taken the food with some reluctance, half starved as she was. Finally she gave in—the sight was too much for her. "Well, I will borry it, Mis' Peters," said she; an' I'll pay you jest as soon as I kin git up.'

After she had eaten she felt stronger. Mrs. Peters had hard word to keep her quiet till afternoon; then she would get up and carry the quilts home. The two ladies were profuse in praises. Martha, proud and smiling. Mrs. Bennet noticed the pink roses at once. "How pretty that calico did work in." she remarked.

'Yes," assented Martha, between an inclination to chuckle and to cry.

"Ef I ain't thankful I did them quilts over," thought she, creeping slowly home-ward, her hard-earned two dollars knotted into a corner of her handkerchief for security.

About sunset Mrs. Peters came in again. "Marthy," she said, after a while, "Sam says he's out of work just now, and he'll cut through a front window for you. He's got some old sash and glass that's been lying around the barn ever since I can remember. It'll be a real charity for you to take it off his hands, and he'll like to do it. Sam's as uneasy as a fish out of water when he hasn't got any work."

Martha eyed her suspiciously. "Thanky; but I don't want nothin' done that I con't pay for," said she, with a stiff toss of her head.

"It would be pay enough letting Sam do it, Martha; but if you really feel set about it. I have got some sheets that need turning. You can do them some this summer, and that will pay us for all its worth.

The black eyes looked at her sharpely. "Air you sure?

"Yes; It is as much as it is worth, said Mrs. Peters. I am most afraid it's more. There is four sheets, and putting in a window is nothing more than putting in a patch—the old stuff ain't worth anything.

When Martha fully realized that she was going to have a front window, and that her pride might suffer it to be given her and yet receive no insult, she was as delighted as a child.

"Lor sakes! said she, jest to think that I should have a front winder to set to. I wish mother could ha' lived to see it. Mebbe you kinder wonder at it, Mis' Peters—you ve allers hed front winders; but you haven't any idea what a great thing it seems to me. Thar is the Mosley children; they're about all I have ever seen pass this winder, Mis Peters. Jest see that green spot out thar; its been greener than the rest of the yard all the spring an now thar is lots of dandelions blowed out on it, an some clover. I b'lieve the sun shines more on it, somehow. Lor me, to think I am going to hev a front winder

Sarah was in this afternoon, said Mrs. Peters, further (Sarah was her married daughter,) and she says she wants some braided rugs right away. She will send the rags over by Willie to-morrow.

You don't say so! Well I will be glad to do it; an thar is one thing 'bout it. Mis Peters—mebbe you will think it queer for me to say so, but I am kinder thankful it is rags she wants. I am kinder sick of bed-quilts somehow.

Another Case of Kidney Disease Cured by Rheumatic Syrup.

FURNACE VILLAGE, Wayne Co., N. Y.,
March 3, 1882.

Gents—Fifteen years ago I had a very severe attack of rheumatism, which settled in my back and hips, and much of the time for the last five years I have been unable to attend to my business; for weeks and weeks at a time I have been unable to turn in my bed or to feed myself. I have tried many remedies, and two years ago I consulted one of the most celebrated physicians in the State, who pronounced it kidney disease, but I grew worse all of the time during his treatment. I heard your Rheumatic Syrup highly recommended, and I tried it, and before I had used two bottles all pain had left me, and to-day I can get about and am able to attend to my business, and am improving rapidly every day. I am confident that the Rheumatic Syrup, if taken as directed, will cure any case of rheumatism or kidney disease. I am most respectfully yours,

The Rowells.

Any one who was at the Bridgewater station, Friday morning might have seen a man drive up with a carriage and assist a neatly dressed young lady, with a bunch of golden-rod at the waist, to alight. The gentleman bade the lady good-bye and drove away. The lady entered the waiting room and bought a ticket to Clayville. The man was Edward Newton Rowell of Batavia, who shot and killed Johnson L. Friday Hugh McGrain, in searching the effects of Mrs. Katherine McGrain, the miserly woman who died in Oswego lately, found in the bed tick a draft on New York for $400, dated over thirty years ago. It had been sent by a son who is now dead. It is now probably worthless.

Hops.

Speaking of the hop prospect the Oneida Union says: "The outlook thro' the greater portion of the hop producing districts of this state is very unpromising for anything like an average yield. In Oswego county the prospect is exceedingly poor, the vines being very feeble and void of arms. Reports from Wisconsin and most other hop producing sections are of about the same import, and it is generally conceded that the product of this year must, under the most favorable circumstances, fall far short of that of last year. From England come conflicting reports, but on the whole it is quite apparent that the yield will be light, and that the product in most districts will be of inferior quality."

YOU CAN HAVE IT.

"My dear, what would I give to have your hair" is often said by middle aged ladies to young girls. [illegible]

There was a [illegible] decline [illegible] ed to [illegible] early in the afternoon. But advices from New York announced an advance in cable to 53s. 6d., and altho' the market was dull in that city, it was deemed safe after all to pay last week's prices here. Truth is, there has all along this season been an active competition for the fancy lots of cheese, and this helps to sustain the more ordinary line of stock. So there is very little difference between this week's market and that of last week, and cheese may be quoted as firm at prevailing prices. Sales of to-day will take cheese off in some cases to July 17, and from that up to the 23d or 24th. Even next week's sales will hardly clear off the July make. This shows that cheese is being cured more thoro'ly and going forward in better condition. In fact we near very little complaint made against the make of last month. News that comes to hand from the outside develops the fact that that central New York is the only region of country that has been visited by drouth this season. All the western part of the State has been plenty of rain, and is in good growing condition. The unusual shrinkage of milk is therefore local and confined to a few counties in the central and northern part of the State.

Transactions of the day are as follows: 799 boxes at 9⅜c, in 9 lots; 8 lots, 670 boxes, at 7½c.; 78 lots, 7,280 boxes, at 9¾c; 4 lots, 325 boxes, at 9⅞c; 4 lots, 398 boxes, at 10⅛c; 200 boxes, at 10¼c; 3 lots, 400 boxes, at p. t. Sales, 11,574 boxes, commissions, 751; total 12,325 boxes. Ruling price 9¾c. Transactions of corresponding day last year were 12,515 boxes; ruling price 9c; of year before, 8,910 boxes, ruling price 11⅛c.

AT LITTLE FALLS.

LITTLE FALLS, Aug. 11, 1884.

CHEESE—The market was dull to-day and rather slow, salesmen believing that prices ought to range a little higher, especially in view of the heavy shrinkage in milk which, after careful inquiry, we estimate at about forty per cent. of the yield in the flush of the season. Prices paid are just about the same as last week, the bulk going at 9¾c. It is a matter of congratulation to dairymen that prices to-day are fully ¾c. higher than for the corresponding week last year. Following are the transactions:

Lots	Boxes	Price
1	68	9
7	605	9¼
4	300	9½

AT FULTON.

The market Monday evening was rather brisk. There was 24 factories represented with 2,142 boxes which sold at 9 to 9½cts. One or two lots were sold at Utica ruling which was 9¾cts. The buyers were Hoose and Baker, of Mexico and Osborn of Fulton. The price one year ago was 8½cts. two years ago 11cts, three years ago 10½cts.

Mr. Janvrin, of the United States Hotel, Saratoga, gives the following figures illustrating a day's consumption: Beef, 1,500 pounds; mutton, 500 pounds; lamb, 200 pounds; ham and bacon, 300 pounds; corned beef, veal and tongue, 200 pounds; chickens, 1,000 pounds; fresh fish, 300 pounds. There are also used 350 dozen eggs. 800 quarts of milk, 100 quarts of cream, 200 pounds of butter, 5 barrels of flour, 2 barrels of sugar. The cost per day of fruit is $150, of vegetables, $100, and of groceries $200.

[illegible] Brundage Brought to Fulton as a Witness—Private Examination.

Since our last issue further developments have come to light in regard to the Poole case. It seems that Brundage who was employed in the same store as Poole, but in Bristol's department, and who was recently arrested for stealing a horse at Fair Haven, is connected with the robbery.

While here Brundage had made Fred Taylor a present of two bottles of liquor and when Taylor learned that Brundage had been arrested for stealing a horse, and that Williams had missed goods from his store, as Brundage had access to Williams' store, he jumped to the conclusion that Brandage might have been the thief. He accordingly went to Mead & Stranahan, Poole's attorneys, and stated his suspicions, and upon Taylor's affidavit a search warrant was issued, and Poole and officer Hulett started for Sterling, where Brundage had been stopping for some time since leaving Bristols. At one of the haunts of Brundage was found the two stolen watches, cigar boxes, bottles of liquor, etc., belonging to Williams, as well as a lot of property belonging to Bristol, some of which he had never missed. They brought back the property with them. The officers who arrested Brundage were indiscreet enough to inform Brundage that they had received information from Taylor upon which he in turn declared that Taylor was also concerned in the theft. An officer went from Fulton to Auburn and obtained an affidavit implicating Taylor and on his return he was arrested and arraigned. He pleaded not guilty and gave bail in the sum of $250 for his appearance on Monday.

Poole and Taylor appeared Monday and the examination was postponed until yesterday morning at 9 o'clock. Brandage was brought here from Auburn Monday afternoon on a writ of habeas corpus as a witness in the case, in charge of Sheriff Mead of Cayuga county. The examination of Poole and Taylor was commenced yesterday morning in the private office of Justice VanWagenen, and strictly private. Therefore we are unable to give the evidence. The defendants demanded a public examination but the other side insisted on its being conducted with closed doors. The defendants' counsel entered a protest against such action. The examination was continued during the evening. Brundage's testimony was concluded yesterday and he was taken back to Auburn. The examination of Taylor and Poole will continue to-morrow. The case is creating considerable interest.

Probably a Fatal Fall.

J. R. Calkins, a mechanic living just east of the village, met with a distressing accident Thursday morning. Soon after going on his house roof to remove the old shingles, preparatory to reshingling, he was found on the ground unconcious. It is supposed he lost his balance, falling to the ground and breaking the bones of his neck. He still lives, yet has no knowledge or use of his body. His mind is alive and he can converse somewhat and is in a singular condition. His life is despaired of. A few years ago he met with a similar accident while working on a mill frame. It made him a cripple and nearly cost him his life. Some time before this he fell at Volney Centre, breaking his leg, the bone projecting through the boot leg, and the first time he fell in Granby. Drs. Lake are attending him.

The Jury's Verdict.

It was announced in THE TIMES of last week that a post mortem examination was being held over the body of Mrs. Isadore Scouten who died under circumstances which aroused suspicion. The inquest was held at engine house No. 2 on Wednesday evening where the jury heard several testimonies on the case and at about midnight they came in with a verdict that deceased came to her death by blood poisoning caused by an abortion and subsequent criminal malpractice on the part of Dr. S. R. Miller of Fulton. A warrant was issued for Miller's arrest and placed in the hands of an officer but he has not yet been found. It is probable that nothing more will be done in the matter.

Dr. Wells Run Into.

Last Friday evening about six o'clock as Dr. W. Wells was out riding with his wife and little child he was run into on the corner of First street and Broadway by a farmer named John Welch, who lives in South Granby. Mrs. Wells and child were thrown from the carriage and received several severe bruises but fortunately no bones were broken. The doctor's buggy was completely wrecked. It seems that Welch was given all the road but was intoxicated and reckless. A warrant was issued for Welch's arrest and officer Jones went after him but he could not be found. Monday Welsh's father came to Fulton and tried to settle. Dr. Wells offered to settle for $150. Welch offered him but $25 which the doctor refused. Young Welch will probably be arrested as soon as he is found.

Standing advertisements in a paper inspire confidence. The man who for a year resides in a community and lives a reputable life, even though he be of moderate ability, will grow in the confidence and esteem of his fellow. On the same principle a newspaper advertisement becomes familiar, and its presence in the columns of a paper inspires confidence in the stability of the advertiser.—[Ex.

[illegible] Dear Sir:—I noticed an article in the last week's [illegible] relative to a matter between Mr. Willard and myself which is entirely wrong, and I hope you will be kind enough to publish the following in justification of myself. I enclose a copy of the article mentioned. This is almost entirely false from beginning to end and the party who wrote the article is either entirely ignorant of the facts or he is an unmitigated liar. If I am rightly informed the party who wrote it understands fully the facts and this is a direct and unjustified attempt to injure me. The facts of the case are as as follows:—Mr. Willard sent one of his neighbors to me accusing me of the act and asking me to give him $15 00 to settle it, which I peremptorily refused to do. This being a charge I was entirely innocent of and believing it an attempt to extort money I did not feel called upon to comply. I afterwards met Mr. Willard's son-in-law and he advised me to settle. He may possibly have had a promise of a share of the proceeds. From my refusal to settle Willard issued a warrant under false pretence for my arrest. When we came to try the case, he saw that he was wrong and was going to make nothing out of it and withdrew the charges, paid all the costs, and signed papers exhonerating me from the offense. This paper I have in my possession and can produce it at any time. I however have no desire to have any controversy with him directly or indirectly, or through the newspapers but feel that I should vindicate myself in this matter.

Yours Truly
T. R. PRATT.

Noted Singer in Fulton.

The advent in Fulton of Miss Eva Mills the brilliant vocalist, and daughter of the noted sculptor, Clark Mills, served to enliven musical circles somewhat last week. Miss Mills, who at present is a member of the quartette choir in All Souls church, Washington, D. C., is a soprano of rare capacity and most excellent method. As a church singer she has achieved a high reputation in Washington and other cities. It is generally understood that Miss Mills and her mother, are sojourning some weeks in the lovely village by the river and that occasionally she lends the charm of her voice. On Tuesday evening Mr. and Mrs. Davids gave a musical in honor of her brother, Rev. W. C. Hubbard, and among the invited guests was Miss Mills. It was a very enjoyable affair and included a number of musical people among whom was an old choir quartette led by N. H. Gilbert. Miss Mills sang several selections in a charming manner, Mrs David, Miss Gertie Stephens and Messrs Hubbard and Gilbert assisted Miss Mills and contributed greatly to the pleasure of the evening. Last Sabbath morning Miss Mills sang an opening piece at the Presbyterian church.—"Nearer my God to Thee."

Hardened Liver.

Five years ago I broke down with kidney and liver complaint and rheumatism.

Since then I have been unable to be about at all. My liver became hard like wood; my limbs were puffed up and filled with water.

All the best physicians agreed that nothing could cure me. I resolved to try Hop Bitters: I have used seven bottles; the hardness has all gone from my liver, the swelling from my limbs, and it has worked a miracle in my case: otherwise I would have been now in my grave. J. W. MOREY, Buffalo, Oct. 1 1881.

Poverty and Suffering.

I was dragged down with debt, poverty and suffering for years, caused by a sick family and large bills for doctoring.

I was completely discouraged, until one year ago, by advice of my pastor, I commenced using Hop Bitters, and in one month we were all well, and none of us have seen a sick day since, and I want to say to all poor men, you can keep your families well a year with Hop Bitters for less than one doctor's visit will cost. I know it.—A WORKINGMAN.

PORT YOUR HELM.

Among the Marine Stores a Ship Chandler Spins a Yarn about a Storm.

At the foot of Main St., Buffalo, is the main house of McBean Edge Co. a ship chandlers' establishment. Stepping out of a down town car, I entered. High on every side, on shelves and off, were piled an array of wares—a grand medley of everything, from the pewter spoon upon which little Jack cut his gums, to the big oil stoves that warm the daily mess. In the office stood Mr. J. C. McBean, the picture of life and energy, discussing the relative merits of various kinds of starboard and port lights, with a Michigan pilot and an Erie canal man.

"This constant quibbling and argument are as fretful as Salt Rheum," he said, after they went out; "I've had that enough. For several Springs past there has appeared all over my face and arms a fine scarlet rash. "I've been billious all my life, but I don't know what to make of this. I felt so sleepy and miserable that I knew my system needed renovating and toning up. I took a great deal of medicine in two weeks, to hit this billiousness, The fine rash remained however, I was all broken out. One day, over at the shipyard, one of the sailors began talking to me about what was used a great deal on shipboard by the lake sailors for billious disorders. 'Try Dr. Kennedy's FAVORITE REMEDY, he said 'we get it at the drug store down at the foot of Main street.' I went and got a bottle, and it is the best medicine I ever took for cleansing my blood. The rash disappeared and I never felt better in my life than I did this spring."

THE SUN.

NEW YORK, 1884.

About sixty million copies of THE SUN have gone out of our establishment the past twelve months.

If you were to paste end to end all the columns of The Suns printed and sold last year you would get a continuous strip of interesting information, common sense wisdom, sound doctrine, and sane wit long enough to reach from Printing House Square to the top of Mount Copernicus in the Moon then back to Printing House Square, and then, three-quarters of the way back to the Moon again.

But The Sun is written for the inhabitants of the earth, this same strip of intelligence would girdle the globe twenty-seven or twenty-eight times.

If every buyer of a copy of The Sun during the past year has spent only one hour over it, and if his wife or grandfather has spent another hour this newspaper in 1883 has afforded the human race thirteen thousand years of steady reading, night and day.

It is only by little calculations like these that you can form any idea of the circulation of the most popular of American newspapers, or of its influence on the opinions and actions of American men and women.

The Sun is and will continue to be, a newspaper which tells the truth without fear of consequences, which gets at the facts no matter how much the process costs, which presents the news of all the world without waste of words and in the most readable shape, which is working with all its heart for the cause of honest government, and which therefore believes that the Republican party must go in the coming year of our Lord, 1884.

If you know The Sun, you like it already, and you will read it with accustomed diligence and profit during what is sure to be the most interesting year in its history. If you do not yet know the Sun it is high time to get into the sunshine.

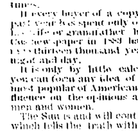
THE WORLD CHALLENGED



This liniment has been manufactured and used for twenty five years and our innumerable certificates of cure prove it to be an unparalleled success. We do not offer it as an internal remedy, positively asserting that any liniment that can be taken into the stomach without injury can have little efficacy as a specific when externally applied. This being compounded of Oils, is readily absorbed into the system, giving prompt relief even in cases of acute pain caused by Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Sciatica, Lumbago, Sprains, Bruises, Chilblains, or from any cause where a liniment is demanded. The oils are so penetrating that a thorough use of the Liniment will remove all stiffness of joints, lameness of muscles, or pain arising from inflammation or any cause. Even in chronic Spinal Disease, and Paralysis, frequent use of Oil Liniment will effect many cures. Finally for pain in any part of the body, use freely, with rubbing and warmth and we guarantee relief. You will find a trial of it the best certificate of its value. It is the only Liniment made entirely of Oils, and we challenge the world for its equal. Price 25 and 50 cents per bottle. Sold by dealers.

How Watch Cases are Made.

Imitation always follows a successful article, and imitation is one of the best proofs of real honest merit; and thus it is that the James Boss' Gold Watch Case has its imitators. Buyers can always tell the genuine by the trade-mark of a crown, from which is suspended a pair of TRADE MARK scales. Be sure BOTH crown and scales are stamped in the cap of the watch case. Jewelers are very cautious about endorsing an article unless they not only know that it is good, but that the character of the manufacturers is such that the quality of the goods will be kept fully up to standard.

WILLIAMSPORT, PA., Feb. 13, 1883.

The James Boss' Gold Watch Cases go like hot cakes. Each one I sell sells another. Don't need to recommend them; they sell themselves. One of my customers has had a James Boss' Gold Watch Case in use for 20 years, and it is as good as ever. With this case I do not hesitate to give my own guarantee, especially with the new and improved cases, which seem to be everlasting. JESSE T. LITTLE, Jeweler.

NEW BRUNSWICK, N.J., Jan. 8, 1883.

This gold case, No. 6666, known as the James Boss' Gold Watch Case, came into my possession about 1858, has been in use since that time, and is still in good condition. The movement is the one which was in the case when I bought it, and its condition shows that the case has really out-worn the movement, which is played out. MARTIN A. HOWELL, Of Board of Directors N. J. R. R. & Trans. Co.

Unmade Hay.

We knew by the clouds in the eastward
It was going to rain that day,
And there was the whole of the meadow lot
All spread with the fragrant hay,
And the clouds grew larger and larger
And the wind the tree top tossed,
And hard though I was working,
It seemed that the hay was lost.

My farm was a small and poor one,
And the hay crop was all I had,
And I could not afford to hire a man,
For the times were dull and bad.
And matters were looking dreamy
For me that summer day,
When I heard a sweet voice behind me:
"I will help you get in the hay!"

'Twas my neighbor's daughter Molly,
Who lived just across the road,
And soft was the light in her downcast eyes,
And the blush on her cheek that glowed.
I gladly accepted the service
She offered in friendly way,
And there by my side that afternoon
She helped me gather the hay.

She was no fine lady feeble,
Though her arms were plump and white,
And she raked all day with me row for row,
Till the fall of the summer night.
And then when we ceased our labors,
And the hay was stored away,
From the depth of my heart I thanked her
For her kindness to me that day.

And I took her home to her cottage,
But I didn't pause to woo,
And I asked not her hand in marriage,
Which I know she thought I'd do.
Beneath the branches brown,
And from her looks I knew she was
The maddest girl in town.

FASHION NOTES.

Alligators teeth set as pins are used for holding the corsage bouquet this season.

A black satin basque waist has a muslin front of black and yellow striped satin, and yellow lace sleeves.

The ecru muslin and net embroideries, which come for covering the fronts of dresses, have become quite popular.

Valenciennes lace flannels are much worn, and piece net of the same design is sold with them, making very pretty evening dresses.

The newest bonnet is called the Sequin, and in shape is not unlike the small Princess, which was worn for several years.

Scarlet crepe sunbonnets trimmed with green corn, or with bearded wheat and green velvet frogs, are worn at French watering places.

Tucked sleeves, fitted very closely to the arms, the tucks an inch and a half wide at the shoulder and decreasing in size as they reach the elbow, are very fashionable.

The new tennis hats for ladies are rough and ready styles with a band of velvet or twist of silk, and a spray of white chestnut blossoms, cowslips, corn flowers, or hops.

The newest Jersey is called the Vermicelli. It is stitched all over in an irregular corded pattern, and its roughened surface is considered more becoming than that of the plain Jersey.

There has never been such a large assortment of beadings and embroideries for the fronts of dresses as at present. Some of the twine-colored nets have sets of three flounces, all a mass of embroidery flat in relief.

Dinner dresses of black Chantilly lace are still the fashion, the skirts fully puffed and arranged in panniers over petticoats of merveilleux, surah and shot silk, the lace caught up with velvet ribbons and facetted tassels of beads.

Necklaces of florentine and cloissone beads showing a surface of pale mauve, rose and green, shot with gold, are growing in popularity. Some of the most expensive kinds are encrusted with very small dots and stars which sparkle like diamonds.

An original morning dress is made of crepe-de chine of the vert-de-gris tone—a soft greyish green, as its name implies. The material itself is thin, transparent, and lends itself admirably to drapery. The bodice is made up over satin merveilleux; the skirt opens one side to show handsome gold embroidery on net, and gold trimming throughout accentuates the dress. On bands of satin are also introduced detached motifs of bead embroidery in the same shade as the material, which drapes to perfection, falling in soft folds on the skirt.

Coughs, Colds, Catarrh, Consumption. All Throat, Breast, and Lung Affections coured by the old-established "Swaynes Wild Cherry," the first dose gives relief, and a cure speedily follows. 25 cts., or $1.00, at Druggists. 26y1

The physical comfort of a man who, of his own accord, is industrious, the Builder and Woodworker says, is in every way a matter which has an actual money value. Those who are disinclined to keep steady at work should be allowed no pretense of an excuse of unsuitable surroundings. The inference it adds, is plain: Do justice to your workmen, and, as a rule, they will do justice to you; at any rate, an injustice done them, will serely, sooner or later, be returned with interest.

JUST AS GOOD.

Many unscrupuleus dealers may tell you they have remedies for Coughs and Colds equal in merit and in every respect just as good as the old reliable Dr. Bosanko's Cough and Lung Syrup, unless ynu insist upon this remedy and will take no other, you are liable to be greatly deceived. Prices, 50 cents and $1.00. Sold by M. M. Williams.

For several Springs past there has appeared all over my face and arms a fine scarlet rash. "I've been billious all my life, but I don't know what to make of this. I felt so sleepy and miserable that I knew my system needed renovating and toning up. I took a great deal of medicine in two weeks, to hit this billiousness. The fine rash remained however. I was all broken out. One day, over at the shipyard, one of the sailors began talking to me about what was used a great deal on shipboard by the lake sailors for billious disorders. 'Try Dr. Kennedy's FAVORITE REMEDY,' he said 'we get it at the drug store down at the foot of Main street.' I went and got a bottle, and it is the best medicine I ever took for cleansing my blood. The rash disappeared and I never felt better in my life than I did this spring."

Heroism at Home.

How useless our lives seem to us sometimes! How we long for an oppurnity to perform some great action! We become tired of the routine of home life, and imagine we would be far happier in other scenes. We think of life's great battle-field and wish to be heroes. We think of the good we might do if our lot had been cast in other scenes.

We forght that the world bestows no such titles as noble as father, mother, sister or brother. In the sacred precincts of home we have many chances of heroism. The daily acts of self-denial for the good of a loved one, the gentle word of soothing for another's trouble, the care for sick, may all seem as nothing; yet who can tell the good they may accomplish? Our slightest word may have an influence over another for good or evil. We are daily sowing the seed which will bring forth some sort of harvest. Well will it be for us if the harvest will be one we will be proud to garner. If some one in that dear home can look back in after years and, as he tenderly utters our name say: "Her words and example prepaired for me a life of usefulness; to her I owe my present happiness, we may well say: I havr not lived in vain.—National Presbyterian.

Five years ago I broke down with kidney and liver complaint and rheumatism.

Since then I have been unable to be about at all. My liver became hard like wood; my limbs were puffed up and filled with water.

All the best physicians agreed that nothing could cure me. I resolved to try Hop Bitters; I have used seven bottles; the hardness has all gone from my liver, the swelling from my limbs, and it has workep a miracle in my case; otherwise I would have been now in my grave. I was dragged down with debt, poverty and suffering tor years, caused by a sick family and large bills for doctoring.

History of the Hardest Struggle of His Life—Of Deep Interest to all Professions.

WORCHESTER, MASS., March 23d 1881.

Dr. David Kennedy, Rondout, N. Y.:

DEAR SIR: My son, a lad of fifteen, editor of the "Go-Ahead," amateur journal, of this city, has been at different times most severely and apparently hopelessly, afflicted with Salt Rheum. When a very small child his body was almost entirely covered with this loathsome eruption. It mostly passed away, however, after the teething period, and he was not seriously troubled with it again until about one year ago, when the salt rheum first appeared on his hands between his fingers, then on his limbs, then on his face and head in one solid mass. His condition was terrible. The rash resembled ivy poisoning and we at first fancied it might be something not so bad as his old troubles, but the physicians pronounced it salt rheum and made every effort without avail, to cure it. We tried a preparation widely advertised as a specific for skin diseases, but it made about as much of an impression as so much cold water might have done. You can understand the situation when I say we were in despair of obtaining real help from any source.

At this point, through the advice of Mr. J. W. Bacon, whose daughter had been cured by it, I tried KENNEDY'S FAVORITE REMEDY. This was the right and only thing at last! The skin began to heal at once, and to-day the evidences of the disease have wholly disappeared. How thankful we are Dear Doctor, I leave you to imagine.

Yours,
No. 17 Terril Street J. W. BATCHELDER.

The experience of years, and the testimony of thousands demonstrate DR. DAVID KENNEDY'S FAVORITE REMEDY to be the most successful medicine for organic and blood diseases ever discovered. Prepared solely by Dr. David Kennedy, Physician and Surgeon, Rondout, N. Y.

SEVENTEENTH YEAR. FULTON, OSWEGO COUNTY, N. Y., WEDNESDAY AUGUST 20, 1884. VOLUME 17—NUMBER 14

TERM[illegible].25 A YEAR IN ADVANCE. SINGLE COPIES THREE CENTS.

NO TRESPASSING.

It was painted in very black letters on a very white board. He who ran could read, and Ruth Bennett was only walking very fast when she came on it. But she knew it by heart already. For the last month she had read it every day, and every day meekly turned into the dusty road and made the long detour needed to get past Mr. Hale's grounds and into his next neighbor's. Five minutes' walk through that beautiful park would have brought her to Mrs. Alexander's hedge, and saved a modicum of strength and temper sorely needed for her trials as day governess to the three little Alexanders. But she had never ventured on the liberty, though she had wanted to every day, and the impulse had grown greater since she had asked Mrs. Alexander if it was quite impossible.

"There's never a soul about, and it's an eighth of a mile certainly to the house. I don't believe any one would ever see me, and if they did, I could tell them I was your governess." For it seemed to the young girl a sufficient distinction to be that to Mrs. Rufus Alexander, leading lady of the pretty town where her summer home was located.

"I would not venture it if I were you,' Mrs. Alexander answered, kindly. She was always kind to her governesses, despite her wealth and her Mayflower blood, and she had a special liking for this brightfaced, eager girl. "Mr. Hale is very particular. He is a newcomer here, and disposed to make every one respect his rights." It had been on the lady's lips to call him parvenu, but she would not throw scorn at her neighbor before her governess.

"Why, Miss Bennett," Harry Alexander had added, as she turned away, "do you know that last summer his gardner ordered my mother off the grounds? Of course Mr. Hale excused it afterward—said the man had his orders to make no discrimination; but fancy—my mother!" and Harry's accent was more than the words.

Little Miss Bennett bowed her head before the rights of a good Democrat who had made all his money in the last twenty years, and was therefore more aristocratic and exclusive than an English nobleman would have been with respect to his possessions. Half the village would have been grateful had Mr. Hale allowed a foot-path to traverse his splendid park; but of course an American cannot make concessions to the lower classes, and he stood on his rights and dignities. But to-day Ruth paused. She was late for her lessons; she had lingered to put the last touches to a pretty new dress she wore, and there was a thunder storm coming. Should she run the risk of offending Mrs. Alexander and spoiling her dress, or should she trespass? No one was in sight as she looked [illegible] and a nearer roll of thunder helped her to a decision. She stepped through the little gate which all these days had mocked her with its invitation to forbidden ground, and hurried across the lawn. In the distance she could see the stately house, the leaping fountains and bright flowers. She kept her eye on that, fearing some servant on the watch. She never looked the other way, and so, when a step suddenly came beside her, she started in conscience-smitten guilt.

"Are you aware, madam," a clear-cut voice said, "that you are on private grounds?"

She looked up. A stout, bald man stood beside her, a man whom her prophetic soul assured her was Mr. Hale. He had deigned to touch his hat, but not out of respect for her, she was sure. He saluted rather his own dignity and sense of the proprieties. He had a pompous air, as of one who feared his simple personality not impressive enough, and the neat perfection of his costume made more prominent his commonplace features.

"Yes, sir," she answered meekly; but I'm doing my best to get out of them."

"You came in by the lower gate. You saw the sign of course?" he went on, in the same magisterial tones.

"Yes; but I was in a hurry, and I—I was afraid it was going to rain. I'm Mrs. Alexander's governess." She ventured a glance at him as she said this, but it evidently made no impression. "I—I beg you pardon; and I can go back, I suppose. I thought that for once—and I didn't want to spoil my dress," she finished, impetuously, as a great drop of rain fell on her hand.

She looked up with eyes whose appeal might have softened him. It seemed to her a very ample excuse, but there was no relenting in his face. In his own mind, indeed, he was making a concession. As she was his neighbor's governess, he would not carry the matter farther, and so he stiffly said, as he stood back to let her retrace her steps.

"I am sure I—or Mrs. Alexander—will be much obliged for your—your unexpected consideration," Miss Bennett answered, as she took up her skirts and prepared to beat a dignified retreat.

There was no use in hurrying: she was sure to be caught in the storm now, and so she turned and swept Mr. Hale a profound reverance, whose disdain he could not understand. But there was a dimness in her eyes as she raised them to his.

After all she was only a child, and so far the world had smiled into her pretty face and treated her indulgently. That was not Mr. Hale's attitude; but as she walked away something—perhaps the pride of self-assertion over this intruding governess, perhaps the thought of those eyes—made him relent. In five minutes it would be pouring, and he was not quite a brute. He stepped forward and called, "Madam!"

Miss Bennett heard, hurried her steps an instant and then stopped. She would [illegible] to the bitter end, and, [illegible] she could not go back till she [illegible]

[illegible] to say, "As it is raining, Miss, if it will shorten your walk, I have no objection for this once."

"Oh, I shall not do it again," Ruth cried; "I'd sooner go through a wilderness."

"But that is not the shortest way," he went on; "It is much nearer by the coach-house. Here, let me show you."

"Oh, I couldn't think of troubling you. Thank you, but you'll get wet yourself."

"Since I have undertaken it," answered Mr. Hale, as if apologizing to himself for his concession; and with the words he spread his neat umbrella and walked with her. It was only two minutes. The path he took was shorter, and Miss Bennett hurried all she could. She spoke no word till she reached the Alexander hedge; then she said, as hastily. "I am very much obliged—and—I shall not trespass again."

"A pretty girl," Mr. Hale said to himself as he watched her flying to the shelter of the porch. "Mrs. Alexander's governess! Hum!" But what the last word meant in his thought he could hardly have told. Perhaps it only reminded him that his three motherless children would soon be needing one.

"Miss Bennett," Mrs. Alexander said a week later, "where did you meet Mr. Hale? He seems to know you; and last night at the garden party he deigned to say that if it would save you time and fatigue, you might go through the park. He has noticed you, perhaps coming up from the village." And when Ruth had told her story she lifted her eyebrows a little. "It's a concession—a great concession from him." she said.

"But I don't want it," cried Ruth. "I'd rather go miles around now. You can't think how his manner humiliated me. I felt as though I'd committed the unpardonable sin."

Mrs. Alexander smiled at her vehemence, but she had her own reasons for not encouraging it. "It's quite on another footing now, since he permits it," she said, "and really I wish you would. Since the hot weather came I notice you are sometimes very tired with the walk. Anything that will save your strength for your work, you know." And to that Ruth yielded.

She need not have been so fierce about it, she said to herself after a week. She had the park all to herself, and it was certainly pleasanter than the dusty road. At first she hurried through as if a dragon haunted every bush; but gradually she moderated her pace, and at last she made it a gentle saunter, and even stopped on the brink of the little stream which crossed one end of the park to cool her hot head in its breath of freshness and soothe her eyes in the soft green depths of the wood beyond. Once or twice she saw Mr. Hale's children with their French nurse in the distance: once Mr. Hale himself met her, touched his hat stiffly, and stood aside to let her pass. She wondered afterward if he expected her to thank him for his great concession. But the burden of gratitude was not overwhelming to her proud little heart.

But a few days later she met him again, and this time repented enough to give him a very frank smile and greeting. She felt like smiling on all the world that day, this poor little governess who had youth and hope as her portion, and was content therewith. Perhaps a letter which she had thrust into her pocket at sight of him—a letter she had herself taken from the office and lingered under the trees to read—had something to do with her radiant face just then.

"You find this way much pleasanter than the road, Miss Bennett?" Mr. Hale said, made affable by that smile.

"Very much pleasanter, thank you," Ruth answered demurely.

"I might perhaps allow others to go through," he went on, "if I could be sure they would not abuse the liberty. But it is always dangerous to give people an inch; they take an ell instead."

"Oh, I've no doubt you are quite in the right—from your side of the matter," Ruth answered, and if there was the faintest touch of irony in her limitation, Mr. Hale did not see it.

"Certainly I am in the right," he declared in his most magisterial manner; but having thus, so to speak, asserted his dignity, he sought to unbend and be properly gracious to so discreet a peason as she had proved herself. Ruth answered all his remarks with proper modesty, deepening the good impression she had already made, and forgot all about him when she had crossed the hedge.

But the next day, as she sauntered along the path, a sudden sharp cry startled her—a child's cry for help. It came from the river bank, and as she ran toward it she understood its meaning. The youngest of the children, the little heir of the house, had slipped and fallen into the stream. The nurse was running up and down wringing her hands, and the two children were screaming for help. The water was not deep, but a child can drown in very little, and when she reached the bank he had gone under for the second time.

"Run to the house for help," she cried to the children; but even as she spoke she had seized the readiest means of aid, and was climbing down the bank. It would ruin her dress—even then she thought of that—but she waded in bravely, half supporting herself by clinging to a vine that curtained the slope. It might give way—it certainly would if the boy struggled and she lost her balance; but it was the best she could do. She was not conscious of any special heroism. Other people would doubtless come to pull them, both out later, but the moments were precious, and the child—and here he came up again, just out of her reach. She dropped the vine, took the step needed to catch him, and fell with him to the muddy bottom.

Ruth Bennett was chiefly conscious of her ruined dress and [illegible]

[illegible] dener and coachman were there; Mr. Hale was there too; but he let the others help her up, and his paternal raptures did not extend to taking his dripping son and heir in his arms.

"Carry him up to the house, Bates," he said, after a glance had assured him that the child was unhurt, "and put him in a bath-tub at once. And you, Miss Bennett——"

"I need to go into one, too," she gasped, trying to wring the water from her skirts. Her ears were roaring with the water in them; she felt as if she had been drowned and come to life again; but it was the comedy of the situation which chiefly occupied her even then, and Mr. Hale's divided mind between his wish to be properly grateful and his disgusted sense of her dripping condition. And then, woman-like, as she tried to pick up her dress with some light remark on its state, she cried instead.

"I—I hope you havn't hurt yourself," Mr. Hale said, evidently not knowing what to say. "—I am deeply grateful, Miss Bennett—more than I can express—and I should be sorry—for any consequences to yourself."

"Oh, it's nothing," Ruth answered as soon as she could speak. "The only consequences to myself are a ruined dress, and that's a proper revenge of fate. It was to save this dress—it was so new then and so pretty," she added pathetically—"that I trespassed on your grounds six weeks ago. I hope you appreciate the fact of the Nemesis." And therewith she held up the torn and streaming silk to his astonished eyes. "You won't exaggerate my heroism," she went on, "if I tell you that I thought more of this than anything else when I went into the river. I knew there was no real danger if I kept a steady head. But I hope the little boy won't take cold; and as that is my own danger just now—" And before Mr. Hale could recover himself to find speech she had swept him a mocking courtesy and was flying toward the Alexander house much as he had seen her speed six weeks before.

* * * * *

"Miss Bennett," Mrs. Alexander said a few days later, coming into the library after the children had gone, "I have a commission to discharge. It's rather a peculiar one, but I hope you won't mind such a thing coming through a third person. Of course the situation is peculiar and rather delicate for Mr. Hale. He thought he would rather put it into my hands; that is, rather let me find first your—your feeling about it."

Miss Bennett looked up bewildered. "I don't understand, Mrs. Alexander. Is it about the little boy? Does Mr. Hale want to reward me"—a deep blush suffused her fairness—"for what I did? I couldn't take his money, of course."

"I don't know that he would look at it quite in that light," Mrs. Alexander answered. "It probably helped to bring matters to a climax with him. Indeed, he intimated as much. And perhaps it is a reward of virtue. Certainly it is quite after the story-book style; but you are pretty enough and bright enough as I told him, for almost any position. He is a self-made man himself: it isn't such a wonderful condescension when one remembers that. He couldn't expect to marry into the Mayflower, for all his wealth."

Miss Bennett felt as if her senses were playing her false. "You don't mean—you can't mean," she cried, "that he wants to marry me?"

Mrs. Alexander put her arm about her soothingly. "I suppose it is rather overwhelming my dear, It was to me at first. But, after all, why should he not? There are the three children, of course, and he's twenty years older, and he hasn't much besides his money to recommend him; but it would be a splendid home for you, dear. It seems he has watched you ever since that time you trespassed. And he has made inquiries of me. He began making them some time ago, but I didn't notice. I thought perhaps he wanted a governess. Of course I gave you the highest recommendations," she added, laughing, though I didn't know the position he wanted you to fill. He seems quite sure of his own feeling, and it is certainly a great triumph for you, my dear."

Miss Bennett sank back into the chair from which she had half risen. Her mind plainly could not take in the new situation; but she came to herself when Mrs. Alexander went on: "Of course you may want time to think it over, but he would like to see you this evening, and—he hopes for an answer then."

"Oh! oh!" Miss Bennett cried, springing to her feet. There's no use. I couldn't if my life depended on it, for I'm engaged to some one else. And I never knew—indeed, I never knew, Mrs. Alexander, until a few days ago that Philip was his nephew. You see," she went on breathlessly, "his sister was with me at school, and that was the way I learned to know him. And Mr. Hale was very angry at his engaging himself to a 'down-East school ma'am' as he called me. He had promised to help him before, but—but they quarreled over me, and Phil went West and I came here. And it was only a fortnight ago that I wrote him—because I hadn't much else to write—all about my trespassing, and what had come of it. And he answered—I had his letter last week: 'That's my old dragon of an uncle, and if you've won one concession from him, perhaps you could do more. If he learned to know you, he might think differently about our engagement, and though I don't need any of his help now, still he's my nearest relative, and I should like to be on good terms with him.' And I had been hoping—but now—now, you see how impossible it is. And if [illegible] has his own way to make, and we may have to wait a long time, and [illegible] always be poor, I [illegible]

[illegible] was touched. It was the philosophy of the Babes in the Wood, indeed. She could have overturned it with a touch of worldly common sense; but she only bent nearer her, and then suddenly Ruth felt a kiss on her forehead, a kiss of a mother's comprehending love.

But when she had cooled a little from this unexpected touch of enthusiasm, Mrs. Alexander had her plans. She met Mr. Hale herself that evening. She confounded him with the news that the schoolma'am despised for his nephew was his own elect; and she followed up her advantage till he consented to express his gratitude to Miss Bennett by the gift of a home—of which he should not be master. And since young Philip was doing well at the West, and needed no more of his uncle's help, the new home was hardly ready before he could claim its mistress. Only one touch of romance Mr. Hale allowed himself—the wedding gown which replaced Ruth's unlucky dress.—[Harper's Bazar.

FASHION NOTES.

Very tight sleeves are going out of fashion.

The latest shade of yellow is a bright brass color, called button gold.

The latest styles of satins are in small checks and look like summer silks.

Tucks in all widths and designs still continue to hold favor in the eyes of ladies.

White lawn Mother Hubbards with belted waist and tucked skirts are exceedingly popular.

One of the stylish kinds of stationary is that with a word or two printed in the corner, such as "Entre Nous."

The new woolen jerseys are made with many seams and all have darts. Those without darts are not salable.

A very pretty pleated Mother Hubbard is of pale pink nun's veiling, with cuffs, collar and bows of garnet velvet.

Walking boots of black or bronze kid are made with from seventeen to twenty-four very small buttons for dressy toilets.

Linen cuffs, three inches in depth, and straight, high English collars with square corners, often embroidered, are all the rage.

Beautiful clasps, which fasten like an ordinary hook and eye, are now used to take the place of buttons on dresses and cloaks.

The prettiest lawn tennis dresses are made of striped flannel skirts and overdress of white flannel. Upon the collar and cuffs are embroidered the emblems of the game.

The newest thing in the way of a sofa pillow is a huge egg of pale blue satin, cut in five gores, and on one side a hand-painted decoration appears in the form of a scene of "Sinbad the Sailor."

Black stockings are still commended with dresses of all colors and on all occasions. Those of silk or brilliant lisle thread with a slight clocking at the sides are chosen in preference to those elaborately decorated.

Garnets, which have lain unnoticed for some time in jewelers' trays, have now appeared in the front rank of fashionable gems. Buckles made of small garnets in clusters are used for dress fastenings, and are very pretty, although somewhat expensive.

DON'T LOOK LIKE A WRECK.

"When a man is going down hil everybody is ready to give him a kick.'l Yes, that is so. It is sad, but natural. Why, many a man and woman, seeking employment, would have got it if their hair hadnt been so thin and gray. One bottle of Parkers Hair Balsam is then the best investment. It stops falling hair, promotes new growth and restores color. Clean, highly perfumed, not a dye. A great improvement over any similar preparation, and sold at the low price of 50c. 14t4

A GREAT SUCCESS

☞ The best family pill made—Hawley's Stomach and Liver Pills. 25c. Pleasant in action and easy to take.

WELLS, RICHARDSON & CO.'S IMPROVED BUTTER COLOR

A NEW DISCOVERY.

☞For several years we have furnished the Dairymen of America with an excellent artificial color for butter; so meritorious that it met with great success everywhere receiving the highest and only prizes at both International Dairy Fairs.

☞But by patient and scientific chemical research we have improved in several points, and now offer this new color as the best in the world.

It Will Not Color the Buttermilk. It Will Not Turn Rancid. It is the Strongest, Brightest and Cheapest Color Made.

☞And, while prepared in oil, is so compounded that it is impossible for it to become rancid.

☞BEWARE of all imitations, and of all other oil colors, for they are liable to become rancid and spoil the butter.

☞If you cannot get the "improved" write us to know where and how to get it without extra expense. (45)

THE condition of the cotton and woolen trade in Canada is causing great anxiety in commercial circles. The production of cotton and woolen goods has been more than equal to the demand, while the large stocks held a year ago have not been decreased, but are, if anything, larger than at that time.

MR. BUTLER'S reasons for declaring himself the open enemy of the Democratic party will no doubt be interesting to some people. The Democrats of Massachusetts, who have been favoring him for several years with their support and encouragement, will probably conclude now that they have been nourishing a viper.—[New York World.

THE Duke of Wellington dropped dead at Brighton last Wednesday as he was about to take the train for London. The Duke died of heart disease. He went to Brighton for the benefit of his health, but fearing an attack of illness, decided to return home. When his valet left him to purchase the tickets he appeared to be well. He was seventy-seven years old.

THE total population of the United States in 1880 was 50,155,783, of which 43,402,070 were white, 6,753,813 not white. The total voting population now is about 12,500,030. In only three States, South Carolina, Mississippi and Lousiana is the colored population equal to or greater than the white population. In 1880 there were cast for President 9,210,970 votes.

IT is asserted that the investigation of frauds in the navy department has established the fact that frauds involving about $100,000 were perpetrated in the bureau medicine and surgery, long before surgeon Gen. Wales' time, and were continued under him, and that there were no frauds or irregularities in any other bureau or department. Several Washington merchants are said to be implicated in the frauds.

THE document in which General Benjamin F. Butler declares his candidacy for the presidency, was given to the press yesterday. Butler was so full of the English language that he could not wait for Cleveland's letter as he stated he would do, but grinds out an inordinate amount of matter which however, will be read with interest by many. He deals out heavy blows right and left striking both parties with equal force and making himself out to be the only fit man for President. In one part of his address he attributed the present business depression to the Democratic onslaught upon the tariff last winter. In another he declares the Republican party responsible for it. He argues that the Republican party is to blame if there is a single workingman out of employment to-day, and so on through his letter expressing throughout dissatisfaction. But then Ben is getting old.

THE Greenback Party seems to be in the market this year. In West Virginia it has fused with the Republicans for certain considerations connected with the distribution of spoils. In Iowa it has fused with the Democrats, and the two committees have agreed upon a joint Electoral ticket bearing the names of six Greenbackers and seven Democrats. A part of the bargain appears to be a corresponding division of Congressional nominations. What will be done with the Electoral votes in case the fusion ticket should be elected does not [illegible]

A Jury [illegible] the Late Sculptor's Testament [illegible]

Washington National Republican.

The suit of Theodore A. Mills, Theophilus F. Mills, James S. Mills and Clark Mills, jr., son of the late Clark Mills, against Jesse B. Wilson, executor, Susan F. Mills, widow, and Eva S. Mills Howell was tried in the circuit court yesterday afternoon. The cause of action is in the nature of issues from the probate court. The plaintiffs attack the will of the late Clark Mills, and the questions to be submitted to the jury are whether or not the deceased was of sound mind at the time of the execution of the will and codicils, or whether undue influence was used by Mrs. Mills and Miss Eva Mills Howell to have the testator leave his property as he did. The issues as to undue influence were withdrawn, and the jury found that the will and codicil were together the last will and testament of Clark Mills which is a verdict in favor of the defendants.

Clark Mills, over whose will and codicils this contest was made, was the well known sculptor who achieved a national reputation. His equestrian statues of Washington and Jackson, occupying two of the most prominent parks in this city, and that of the Goddess of Liberty, surmounting the dome of the Capitol, are monuments to his memory that will endure for all time. He owned several acres of land some four miles out of the city on the Baltimore & Ohio railroad, on a portion of which was a foundry where the statues were cast in bronze, and his experimental effort of the rearing horse, well balanced, still stands on the pedestal on the lawn in front of the country residence. Mr. Mills also owned a fine residence on I street, and was thought to be a man of considerable means at the time of his death. The contest over the will grew out of the disposition the testator made of his property, some of the codicils being prepared and executed during the closing hours of his life. It was subsequently asserted that an unfair division had been made of the property, and that influence was brought to bear on the deceased to bequeathe the estate as he did. The sons filed a caveat to the will. The verdict yesterday sustained the will and great codicil, and exonerates the three defendants from any impropriety on their part in connection with the making of the will or codicils.

The barns of Joseph Phillips at Central Square, were burned to the ground by an incendiary the other night. In addition to farming implements, grain, etc., a valuable two-year-old colt was burned. Mr. Winters, in his effort to save the horses, was overpowered by the heat, and several men were badly burned. The loss is estimated at $2,000 or more, and is only partially covered by insurance.

A dispatch from Phœnix to the Syracuse Standard states that last Friday, Arthur Chappel, a lad of about eight or ten years old, a son of Calvin Chappel, was found nearly dead lying on the ground in the barn-yard of E. Merry, in the afternoon. He died before a physician arrived. It is not known how the accident happened, but it is supposed he was crushed while riding out of the stable on the back of a horse, and possibly stepped on. Mr. Merry winters a large number of horses and has quite a number there all the time. The boys are all in the habit of going down there to ride them around the yard and it is thought that while riding the horse ran out of the stable and crushed the lad between his back and the top of the doorway. The boy's father is a hand on the steamer VanDoren.

A Pulaski correspondent of the Syracuse Standard writes: The old settlers of Oswego county held their ninth annual reunion and picnic at the Congregational church in Pulaski, Friday. The Rev. James Douglas preached a sermon, and addresses and remarks were made by several venerable gentlemen from this and adjoining towns. An elegant dinner was served in the basement of the church, provided by the ladies, many of whom graced the occasion by their presence. This was the largest gathering the association has ever had, numbering nearly 350 of the oldest people in the county. About fifty of those present were more than 80 years old, quite a number over 85, and a few over 90. Altogether it was a very remarkable gathering of people.

A lady expects company for tea. She orders, for instance, biscuits, and they are brought to the table heavy and indigestible. How many housekeepers can testify to mortification, as well as disappointment under such circumstances! It may not, however, have occurred to them that is not always the "cook's fault." Your biscuit, cakes, pot-pies, puddings, etc., etc., cannot be raised with earth or worthless substitutes, and it becomes your own fault when you permit any Baking Powder to come into your kitchen about which you know absolutely nothing as to purity or healthfulness.

The market is flooded with low priced baking powders, gotten up by unscrupulous manufacturers or dealers, and it is worthy the attention of all house keepers to note that there is one brand of baking powder sold distinctly on its merits, and which can be relied upon for uniform strength and purity. The Royal Baking Powder, now known almost the world over as a standard article has stood the test of nearly a quarter of a century, and its friends among the ladies are legion.

CHEESE MARKETS.

UTICA, N. Y., Aug. 18, 1884.

Factorymen looked blue to-day at the decline in prices, with the prospect staring them in the face of a further decline at no distant date, unless the receipts at shipping points shall materially decrease. But we are aware that comparison will be made with the Little Falls market, and dairymen will wonder how it is that the Falls can afford to pay ⅜c. more than Utica. Perhaps it may be well to wait a week, however, before forming a judgment on that point. It is understood that both buyers and salesmen at the Falls received information from Utica in the afternoon which, while true in a certain sense, misled them as to the general course of things in our market; and when buyers there come to learn how matters actually stand, they may take a different view of prices they ought to pay. As a general thing it was believed here that the prices paid were fully high enough, considering the state of the New York market. We were favored with the sight of a cable dispatch from England, the tone of which was very much depressed. The sender predicted lower markets abroad, and said that he wanted no more of our cheese at present prices. The harvest is finished unusually early in England, and the demand for cheese has largely diminished in consequence. There are already heavy stocks there to be disposed of and no more hot weather cheese will be taken unless it can be had at lower prices. Such was the tenor of the dispatch, and it agrees with what we learn from other sources.

Transactions of the day comprise 5 lot, 600 boxes at 9¼c, 52 lots 5,108 boxes, at 9⅜c., 8 lots, 704 boxes at 9½c., 4 lots, 461 boxes at 9⅝c. 6 lots, 790 boxes at 9¾c., 4 lots, 383 boxes at 9⅞c., and 6 lots, 808 boxes at 10c. Sales 8,854 boxes; commissions 2,033; total 10,887 boxes; Ruling price 9⅜c.; One year ago transactions were 11,743 boxes, ruling price 0c.: two years ago they were 4,833 boxes, ruling 10¼c. It will be seen that the transactions are not quite a thousand boxes less than last year, notwithstanding the heavy shrinkage of milk.

AT LITTLE FALLS.

LITTLE FALLS, Aug. 18, 1884.

At the commencement of the week both buyers and salesmen anticipated in advance in prices for to-day's deliveries, but the report from the New York market later in the week and the continued hot dry weather caused a reaction in these anticipations and it is a matter of congratulation under these circumstances that the prices of last Monday are substantially retained. A comparison with the prices of the corresponding day of last year shows that we have now fully ½c. better prices than at that time. Salesmen report that the shrinkage is constantly increasing.

The transactions of the day are as follows:

Lots	Boxes	Price
2	171	9
1	51	9¼
10	640	9½
57	4,432	9⅝
2	311	9⅞
2	1,567	10
1	83	10¼
1	116	p. t.
9	749	Com
105	8,111
Farm Dairy	1,085
Total	9,196

Farm Dairy.—There were sales of 1,085: farm dairy cheese at 9 to 10¼c.; bulk at 9½c.

BUTTER.—Forty packages were sold at 21 to 22c. for dairy and 22 for creamery.

AT FULTON.

The market Monday evening was rather quiet. Osborn had it all his own way, he being the only buyer on the market. There were 23 factories represented with 1,996 boxes, which sold at 9a9¼ cents. Utica ruling was 9¾.

TO FACTORYMEN.

The attention of the secretary of the board has been called to a number of factorymen who are selling their cheese on the Fulton market but have not paid their membership dues. According to a rule of the board, the names of those who ought to but do not pay their dues are to be published in the TIMES. The secretary already has quite a list of such names, and will be obliged to comply with the rules if the parties do not pay their membership fees.

For several Springs past there has appeared all over my face and arms a fine scarlet rash. I've been billious all my life, but I don't know what to make of this. I felt so sleepy and miserable that I knew my system needed renovating and toning up. I took a great deal of medicine in two weeks, to hit this billiousness. The fine rash remained however. I was all broken out. One day, over at the shipyard, one of the sailors began talking to me about what was used a great deal on shipboard by the lake sailors for bilious disorders. 'Try Dr. Kennedy's FAVORITE REMEDY,' he said 'we get it at the drug store down at the foot of Main street.' I went and got a bottle, and it is the best medicine I ever took for cleansing my blood. The rash disappeared and I never felt better in my life than I did this spring."

The Poole-Taylor Examination Concluded.

The examination of Willard Poole and Fred Taylor each charged with grand larceny, was a long and tedious one, and created no small degree of interest. The case was commenced Tuesday morning and was submitted Friday evening and decided Saturday at 2 p. m. Messrs Mead and Stranahan appeared for the defendants and S. N. Dada and H. E. Nichols for the people.

Brundage the Cayuga Co. horse thief who was in the employ of Bristol when the robberies were committed and who was discharged by Bristol for stealing, was brought here by writ of habeas corpus and swore that Taylor and he entered the store on three different occasions and carried off a quantity of cigars perfumery &c., &c. He fixed the dates of these entries from the first to the middle of July and the time in each case at 12 o'clock at night or after. Mrs. Taylor swears that Taylor since the 26th of June has not been out of the house after half past eleven. Brundage was hotly contradicted in a number of instances by good witnesses and it is quite probable that his entire story was a fabrication of lies concocted for the purpose of implicating Taylor and Poole. There was no evidence that corroborated Brundage's testimony and he was contradicted in every particular by Taylor. Nearly all the stolen property was found in Brundage's possession, or where he had disposed of it, and no part of it was traced either to Taylor or to Poole.

Justice VanWagenen after a careful review of the case decided that the evidence against Poole was not sufficient to hold him for trial, whereupon he was discharged to the satisfaction of a host of friends, and that the evidence against Taylor was sufficient to hold him and he was held for grand larceny under $500 bail to appear before the grand jury, Willard Johnson going his bail. The fact that Mr. Poole was discharged on a preliminary examination goes to show that there was no grounds to warrant the action taken and it is earnestly hoped and believed that Mr. Poole will be fully justified in this nefarious detriment.

THE DEMOCRATS AWAKE.

The Pole Raising--To Organize a Cleveland and Hendricks Club To-night.

A fair sized crowd gathered on First street near the Clark House on Saturday afternoon to witness the raising of the Democratic pole. The crowd was not quite as large or as enthusiastic as was expected. The reason probably was that there was no speach made. Mr. Bulger of Oswego being unable to attend. The fitting up of the pole and the raising which was perfected so successfully is entirely due to the efficient management of Capt. S. D. Becker. The pole is of hickory and about a hundred and twenty-five feet in height. A beautiful thirty foot banner of bunting, bearing the names of the Democratic candidates, was flung to the breeze, a gift of Hon. Willard Johnson which he purchased in New York.

At the conclusion of the pole raising the crowd gathered in the Opera House hall where a meeting was held for the purpose of organizing a Cleveland and Hendricks club. James Caldwell was appointed chairman and M. C. Highriter secretary. About one hundred names were enrolled, among which was a number of Republicans. The meeting then adjourned until to-night to meet at the same place for the purpose of organizing a club and electing officers.

The Rev. Warren C. Hubbard will officiate at Zion church next Sunday. It is indeed a very generous act on the part of Mr. Hubbard who is spending his vacation in town, to kindly consent to donate his services to that church, and the large congregations are convincing evidence that is appreciated.

There will be no preaching at the Baptist Church next Sunday. The Sunday school will be held at 12 m. and prayer meeting at 6:30 in the evening.

Oswego Times: It is probable that the Weedsport skirt and dress company will remove their factory, now on West First between Cayuga and Seneca streets, to Weedsport this fall. A larger building is being erected in Weedsport for their accommodation. The factory here employs a large number of persons, mostly women, and its removal will be a severe loss to the city. Wages are lower here than at Weedsport but other expenses, the company find, more than counterbalance this advantage.

Another Arrival of

WALL PAPER, BORDERS, AND FANCY WINDOW SHADES,

JUST RECEIVED. DON'T FAIL TO SEE THEM AT [illegible]

[illegible]

James E. [illegible], a farmer living east of Fulton, says that twenty years ago he had spells when he was faint and dizzy and at times would bloat after eating a few mouthfuls of some kinds of food, and about fourteen years ago had run down and was so weak that he was just able to be around for nearly a year, several doctors pronouncing his case heart disease and liver complaint, for which he was treated and got better until about five years since he began to have chills and grew weak, then he had dumb ague, bloating very much, he sometimes felt a little better than at others, apetite variable, most especially souring in stomach. Last February he had got so weak he could hardly drag himself around, was troubled with strangulation often having to sit up in bed and get some warm drink before he retired. Being driven to despair at the failure of the different medicines taken to give relief he decided to try some of his own make which he had given to horses with good success. Procuring the necessary bark he made a strong decoction and took a couple of gills at one dose. After a few minutes he experienced a queer tremor with great lassitude. He kept on taking the medicine one-half hour before breakfast for several days when he accidentally found he was passing pieces of tape worm, a dose of Ayer's pills finishing the fracas, revealing the fact that he had been inhabited by a monster at least seventy feet long, which had all these years been sapping his life, taking to itself the nourshment which he should have received. He is now feeling like a new man, and feels so grateful for his deliverance that he is anxious to help others who are suffering from the same cause. His address is Fulton, N. Y.

A number of our citizens have been frequently desturbed of late by loud talking upon the streets at unreasonable hours. We have been asked by no less than four different families to call the attention of the authorities to the matter. Persons residing in the vicinity of Third and Rochester streets were annoyed several evenings last week by a party of young ladies and gentlemen, at least we will call them such, who walked back and fourth in front of their residences talking and shouting and winding up with a social "hop" the circus continuing for at least two hours. It is not right that people seeking rest at reasonable hours should be disturbed by a number of lawless boys and girls and it is the duty of our village officers to see that it is stopped. First street especially, has become a regular promenade and respectable people are repeatedly subjected to insults. It is not the first time we have been obliged to call attention to this breaking of the village ordinance.

Hardened Liver.

Five years ago I broke down with kikney and liver complaint and rheumatism.

Since then I have been unable to be about at all. My liver became hard like wood: my limbs were puffed up and filled with water.

All the best physicians agreed that nothing could cure me. I resolved to try Hop Bitters! I have used seven bottles; the hardness has all gone from my liver, the swelling from my limbs, and it has workep a miracle in my case; otherwise I would have been now in my grave. J. W. MOREY, Buffalo, Oct. 1 1881.

Poverty and Suffering.

I was dragged down with debt, poverty and suffering for years, caused by a sick family and large bills for doctoring.

I was completely discouraged, until one year ago, by advice of my pastor, I commenced using Hop Bitters, and in one month we were all well, and none of us have seen a sick day since, and I want to say to all poor men, you can keep your families well a year with Hop Bitters for less than one doctor's visit will cost. I know it.—A WORKINGMAN.

THE SUN.

NEW YORK, 1884.

About sixty million copies of THE SUN have gone out of our establishment the past twelve months.

If you were to paste end to end all the columns of The Sun printed and sold last year you would get a continuous strip of interesting information, common sense wisdom, sound doctrine and sane wit long enough to reach from Printing House Square to the top of Mount Copernicus in the Moon then back to Printing House Square, and then, three-quarters of the way back to the Moon again.

But The Sun is written for the inhabitants of this earth; this same strip of intelligence would girdle the globe twenty-seven or twenty-eight times.

If every buyer of a copy of The Sun during the past year has spent only one hour over it, and if his wife or grandfather has spent another hour this newspaper in 1883 has afforded the human race thirteen thousand years of steady reading, night and day.

It is only by little calculations like these that you can form any idea of the circulation of the most popular of American newspapers, or of its influence on the opinions and actions of American men and women.

The Sun is and will continue to be, a newspaper which tells the truth without fear of consequences, which gets at the facts no matter how much the process costs, which presents the news of all the world without waste of words and in the most readable shape, which is working with all its heart for the cause of honest government, and which therefore believes that the Republican party must go in the coming year of our Lord, 1884.

If you know The Sun, you like it already, and you will read it with accustomed diligence and profit during what is sure to be the most interesting year in its history. If you do not yet know The Sun it is high time to get into the sunshine.

TERMS TO MAIL SUBSCRIBERS.

The several editions of The Sun are sent by mail postpaid as follows:

DAILY—50 cents a month, $6 a year; with Sunday edition $7.

We Pass.

"This railroad passes through a fine country," I remarked to a fellow passenger in front of me, who sat looking out of the window, wrapped in the scene and a long linen duster.

"It does, eh?" he replied, with an unmistakable sneer.

"Yes, indeed," I said, in a tone intended to impart some of my own enthusiasm to him.

It is said that the elder James Gordon Bennett once sat down very heavily on his chief editor. The occasion was something like this: The editor came to Bennett and said that a man named Smith had brought in many 'big points." The editor was half in favor of employing Smith on the regular staff; "but," said he, "Mr. Bennett, the man can't write grammar." The man was sent for. He came into the awful presence. Mr. Bennett questioned him. The young man knew every politician, banker, merchant and public man in the city. He knew every steamship, every exchange and every public office. Bennett was impressed. After questioning the young man for a while he told the editor to employ him. "And his grammar?" said the editor. Then Bennett showed his greatness. "Damn grammar! Give us facts!"

ALL IN THE LINE OF NATURE.

There is nothing in the line of magic or mystery about that wonderful and popular medicine, Parker's Tonic. It is simply the best and most scientific combination possible of the essential principles of those vegetable curatives which act powerfully and directly on the stomach, liver, kidneys and blood. But there neither is, nor will be, any successful imitation of it. It is all the time curing those who had despaired of ever getting well. For yourself, your wife and children. 14w4

Hay Fever.

I have been a Hay Fever sufferer for three years; have often heard Ely's Cream Balm spoken of in the highest terms; did not take much stock in it because of the many quack medicines. SOUTH BUTLER, N. Y., March 20, 188?,
Rheumatic Syrup Co.:

Gentlemen—This is to certify that I have used your Syrup for rheumatism. Have been troubled with that terrible disease for twenty years; some of the time could not go out of doors. My limbs began to get out of shape. I have doctored with different physicians, but could get no relief. One of my limbs began to wither, and I made up my mind I would be a cripple for life, and for several week could not turn over in bed without help. I was finally persuaded to try Rheumatic Syrup, and had taken it out a short time when it began to help me, and in less than two months I was out of doors, and am now so I can walk as well as ever. In short, I am well. ITHIMER SOUTHWICK.

Summer Feed—When pasturage runs low is the time to measure the great value of corn or other soiling crops. Cows take most kindly to succulent food, and with three or four quarts of meal daily, will increase the milk yield greatly, both as to quantity and quality.

In feeding oats to horses during the season of hard labor remember that the best are not always those which look bright and are free from mustiness or other oder indicating previous dampness or heat; weight of oats determines value, if their condition is good. In summer fallow plowing and harrowing the same piece at three or four days apart would not help the land so much as at the same number of weeks apart. Dr. Henry M. Isn't there just a suspicion of the "barrels of tears" style of exaggeration in these broad assertions? Hardened Liv.r.

Five years ago I broke down with kidney and liver complaint and rheumatism.

Since then I have been unable to be about at all. My liver became hard like wood: my limbs were puffed up and filled with water.

I have used seven bottles; the hardness has all gone from my liver, the swelling from my limbs, and it has workep a miracle in my case; otherwise I would have been now in my grave. J. W. History of the Hardest Struggle of His Life—Of Deep Interest to all Professions.

WORCHESTER, MASS., March 23d 1884.

Dr. David Kennedy, Rondout, N. Y.:

DEAR SIR: My son, a lad of fifteen, editor of the "Go-Ahead," amateur journal, of this city, has been at different times most severely and apparently hopelessly, afflicted with Salt Rheum. When a very small child his body was almost entirely covered with this loathsome eruption. It mostly passed away, however, after the teething period, and he was not seriously troubled with it again until about one year ago, when the salt rheum first appeared on his hands between his fingers, then on his limbs, then on his face and head in one solid mass. His condition was terrible. The rash resembled ivy poisoning and we at first fancied it might be something not so bad as his old troubles, but the physicians pronounced it salt rheum and made every effort without avail, to cure it. We tried a preparation widely advertised as a specific for skin diseases, but it made about as much of an impression as so much cold water might have done. You can understand the situation when I say we were in despair of obtaining real help from any source.

At this point, through the advice of Mr. J. W. Bacon, whose daughter had been cured by it, I tried KENNEDY'S FAVORITE REMEDY. This was the right and only thing at last: The skin began to heal at once, and to-day the evidences of the disease have wholly disappeared. How thankful we are Leat Doctor, I leave you to imagine. Yours,

No. 17 Terril Street J. W. BATCHELDER.

The experience of years, and the testimony of thousands demonstrate DR. DAVID KENNEDY'S FAVORITE REMEDY to be the most successful medicine for organic and blood diseases ever discovered. Prepared solely by Dr. David Kennedy, Physician and Surgeon, Rondout, N. Y.

How Watch Cases are Made.

The many great improvements introduced in the manufacture of the Jas. Boss' Gold Watch Case, have led to similar improvements in the making of silver cases. Under the old methods, each part of a silver case was made of several pieces of metal soldered together, requiring a great amount of cutting and soldering, which softened the metal and gave it the pliability of lead rather than the elasticity of silver. Under the improved methods, each part of the Keystone Silver Watch Case is made of one solid piece of metal hammered into shape. The advantages are readily apparent, for every one knows that hammering hardens the metal while soldering softens it. To test the superiority of the Keystone Silver Watch Case, take one of 3 oz. weight, press it squarely in the center when closed, and it will not give, while a case of same weight of any other make will give enough to break the crystal. The Keystone Silver Watch Case is made only with silver cap and gold joints.

HER TEST.

She was the embodiment of beauty. None could have thought otherwise, seeing her as she sat there alone on the piazza, her lovely form slightly inclined, her hands clasped on her lap, and one small and shapely foot lightly tapping the floor; the long, sweeping lashes drooping languidly over her dreamy, lustrous eyes, and a sweet smile playing about her scarlet mouth, which was open just enough to exhibit the even tips of her pearly teeth.

The restless, crimson tide coursing beneath the pure, transparent skin would occasionally suffuse her cheeks and then pass gradually away, only to surge back again and mantle face and neck with a burning blush.

Yes, Minerva Lambert was beautiful, and never did she look more so than now, as, flushed with apparent excitement, and totally unconscious of the charming picture she formed, she sat there where the long, trailing vines swayed to and fro on one side, casting fantastic shadows on the floor, and on the other motly flowers nodding lazily in the gentle breeze that lifted sweet fragrance from their coroform crests, while the slanting beams of the evening sun rested like a halo on her bowed head.

Minerva had two lovers—that is, two, only one of whom she could think of accepting as her companion through life.

Literally, she had at least a dozen, but only two dared hope for her hand.

Those were Leroy Beaumont and Mark Spencer.

Leroy was the son of wealthy parents; Mark was comparatively poor. Leroy was very handsome, with dark, flashing eyes, black, glossy hair and fierce looking mustache; Mark was not, though his bright and ever smiling countenance wore anything but a disagreeable aspect.

They were not friends, but it was not because of their rivalry. They had never been personally acquainted. Leroy, thinking that features such as his were essential to any one who would win the hand of that beauty, was, consequently, confident of his ability to win the victory, and, perhaps, was unprejudiced.

Mark's opinion was different. Although not nearly so confident of success as his competitor, he was too noble a nature to allow hatred or even jealousy to be excited within him, and he believed that Minerva Lambert would not judge by personal appearance which was most deserving of the much-coveted hand.

But Minerva, it must be said, had a few romantic notions in her head.

Her father, knowing the reputation of Mark Spencer, advised her to accept him in preference to the other, but she hesitated.

Mr. Beaumont was handsome, so tall and graceful, and he had such bright and flashing eyes, and then that captivating mustache was an adornment that Mr. Spencer could not boast of.

Did she love Leroy Beaumont? She thought she did, though when in the society of Mark Spencer she was in doubt. She was not capable of reading her own heart.

"Now, they had both proposed. This very day they had both been at her feet, pouring forth the story of their love, and begging for hers in return.

Of course, they did not do this at the same time, but at different hours of the day, and neither knew of the other's proposal.

She did not give them their answer, but dismissed them both with the information that they must wait till to-morrow, and thus give her time to decide. Then she set her wits to work.

Which should she accept? She was in a dilemma. She was a little partial to Beaumont, but then she knew so little of his character. Spencer she knew to be a true gentleman, but then he lacked that attractiveness of feature which, she thought, would have made him look so much more noble and manly.

She hit upon a plan which pleased her, and she immediately began the execution of it.

She wrote two notes exactly alike, and sent one of them to each of her lovers.

They ran thus;

"Meet me at 8 o'clock this evening at the old elm tree on the river bank, near my father's house."

It was all she wrote. She knew they would both be at the appointed spot at the appointed time, each thinking himself the favored suitor.

She was thinking of this as she sat alone on the piazza, where the long evening shadows were creeping across the floor, and the rays of the setting sun were struggling through the network of vines to kiss her blushing cheek.

She could think of no better way of finding out whether Leroy Beaumont was a true gentleman or not.

It was to see how he would act on finding his rival at the place of meeting that she had concluded to make this appointment with both.

If her plan failed, she would contrive [illegible], for she had resolved that no [illegible] should become her husband unless he was in every respect worthy of her.

casual observer would be struck with the gentlemanly appearance of the young man.

Just now the countenance was bright with hope. Would not Minerva Lambert soon be in his arms telling him how much she loved him?

This, he thought, was the reason why he had been requested to meet her there, preferring that romantic spot in which to tell him of her love.

He heard a footstep behind him. Turning hastily, he beheld the handsome Apollo, Leroy Beaumont, walking briskly along toward him.

He was much surprised to see him approaching, and so was Leroy to find Mark there, for he stopped short and held up both hands, exclaiming:

"Mark Spencer!"

"Mr. Beaumont," returned the other, with a slight nod.

"Why are you here?" cried Beaumont.

"What right have you to ask?" calmly retorted the young man.

His rival colored.

"Sir, you are impudent," said he, angrily.

"I deny the charge, Mr. Beaumont, and you have no cause to speak thus."

"Again I ask you why you are here?"

"Again I tell you that it does not concern you, and you have no right to ask."

"Then, sir, will you please leave this place, as it is here that I am to meet a certain person?"

And with a haughty look the ostentatious fellow consulted his heavy gold watch.

"Minerva should have been here ere this," he muttered, as if to himself, but with a furtive glance at Mark Spencer to see what effect his words produced on him.

Mark was surprised; but, pretending that he did not hear the words, he said:

"No, sir; I will not leave this place, I, too, am waiting for a friend."

"You mean Miss Lambert!"

"I do."

"Then, sir, you speak falsely!" cried Leroy, fiercely. "She did not ask you to meet her here."

"I beg your pardon, but——"

"Cease! Hold your tongue!" thundered the handsome man. "Audacious scoundrel! know you not that Minerva Lambert is soon to become my wife? She cares naught for you. Your jealousy prompted you to come here and witness our meeting, eh?"

"Tis false!" replied Mark, quietly. "I knew not that such a meeting was in contemplation. But, sir, I have no desire to bandy words with you; therefore I wish you good evening."

He bowed and was about to withdraw from the spot when Leroy produced a pistol and pointed it at him.

Mark was no coward. He folded his arms and looked calmly into the dark muzzle of the weapon.

"Shoot," said he, shoot, Leroy Beaumont. I am unarmed."

"Peace, gentlemen!" cried a silvery voice.

They looked simultaneously and beheld Minerva Lambert standing there in the moonlight, her tall, queenly form clad in spotless white.

Mark lifted his hat politely, while his rival stood stock-still, staring at her.

Minerva stepped proudly forward.

"Mr. Beaumont," said she, confronting that gentleman, "I have witnessed your proceedings since you came here, and have overheard the conversation carried on between you and Mr. Spencer, Sir, you have proved yourself a villain and a coward. You reviled Mr. Spencer without cause. You were going to shoot him even after he told you that he was unarmed. And, besides, you told him that I was your promised wife, which you know is false.

"You asked me this day for my heart and hand, as also did Mr. Spencer. I gave neither of you an answer, because I wished to carry out a little plan. I knew nothing of your past life, sir, nor whether you at present had the reputation of being good or bad. I could not think of joining my life to that of one who, comparatively speaking, is unknown to me.

"I planned this meeting with the hope that it might give me an insight into your true character, and I hoped not in vain. I desired to see your actions on confronting your rival here. I have seen. I am satisfied. Go, sir! never speak to me again nor allow your footsteps to wander toward my home, which you have so often visited as a wolf in sheep's clothing."

Pale and trembling, Leroy Beaumont listened to this speech, cowering before the accusing gaze of those flashing eyes like a criminal receiving his sentence.

When she had finished he stood erect, and for a moment a bitter retort seemed to tremble on his lips. It remained unspoken.

He said not a word, but turned abruptly on his heel, with a contemptuous toss of his head, and walked proudly away.

When he was lost to view in the darkness, Minerva turned to Mark, who had been a silent spectator of the little drama that had just been performed, and said, in a trembling voice:

"Mr. Spencer, I hope you will forgive my making a tool of you for the execution of my stratagem, and subjecting you to the insults of that man."

"As to that, Miss Lambert," he replied with a respectful bow, "there is nothing to forgive."

"Thank you, sir. But I cannot stay longer. My sole purpose for requesting you to meet me here is accomplished. Good evening, sir."

"[illegible] Miss Lambert. Shall I call to-[illegible] your answer, to-[illegible]

[illegible] if you will [illegible]

... murmured words of endearment, Minerva Lambert felt a sweet feeling of rest coming over her, and she laid her head on his breast, wondering how she ever could have thought that she loved Leroy Beaumont more than she did this noble-hearted man.

FASHION NOTES.

Bonnets grow smaller and hats larger.

Transparent lace parasols are used with lace dresses.

Colored muslin and lawn toilets rival white for August wear.

Lace veils in red, garnet, green, white and black are imported.

Velvet will be largely used the coming season for dresses and wraps.

Velvet cut from the piece will be used on cloth and poplin dresses.

Borders of marabout feathers are imported as a garniture for velvet wraps.

The baby waist is worn by nine-tenths of the young ladies at Saratoga this summer.

Velvet ribbons of unusual width are introduced for bordering dress skirts, for belts and sashes.

Jerseys will not be discarded for winter wear, but will be made of silk webbing with fleecy lining.

Spanish laces retain their popularity notwithstanding the revival of the lighter French laces.

It is prophesied that green of brighter shades than those lately worn will be used for winter dresses.

New sets of black lace, powdered with fine jet beads, consist of a vest for basque, with collar and cuffs similarly beaded.

Dust cloaks of gray alapaca or mohair may be cut either to fit the figure or like a raglan or a long round cloak with a cape.

Mantles of Spanish lace in a graceful shape, rounded instead of pointed behind, are to be used either for the head or shoulders.

Woolen stuffs will remain in favor for street dresses, during the autumn and winter, in plain self colors, small figures and stripes.

White corduroy and white cheviot dresses are much worn at the seaside and mountain resorts this season on account of the unusually cool weather.

For cloaks are extremely large figures of velvet or plush on uncut velvet grounds, and stripes both lengthwise and across the goods are seen in the richest cloakings.

A novelty in wool goods is an Astrakhan Jersey cloth, which is a webbing for the foundation that is elastic, and on this is knotted and looped wool that gives the effect of Astrakhan furs. It is used for trimmings, and also for entire jackets.

How Perkins' Story Was Spoiled.

"I tell you what," airily exclaimed Perkins, as he sat down to the supper table, "I was in a tight place this afternoon."

"Yes, I know you were," interrupted his wife in clear cold utterance that cut like a knife; "I saw you coming out of it."

And then it flashed across Perkins' mind that he had incidentally stepped into a saloon with a friend for the purpose of examining a doubtful political statement with the aid of a magnifying glass, and his contemplated antidote slipped from his grasp like money at a summer resort, while the supper was finished amid a silence so profound that he could plainly hear a napkin ring. —[Rockland Courier.

Nature's great remedy, Kidney-Wort, has cured many obstinate cases of piles. This most distressing malady generally arises from constipation and a bad condition of the bowels. Kidney-Wort acts at the same time as a cathartic and a healing tonic, removes the cause, cures the disease and promotes a healthy state of the affected organs. James F. Moyer, carriage Man'fr. of Myerstown, Pa., testifies to the great healing powers of Kidney-Wort, having been cured by it of a very bad case of piles which for years had refused to yield to any other remedy.

EXCITEMENT is high at Albion N. Y. over the flight of A. S. Warner, president of the First National bank. The case is a mysterious one as it involves a large estate of which Warner was an heir to and had the management of. He has gone where all ex-bankers go—to Canada.

REV. DR. BALL of Buffalo. has begun a suit for $25,000 damages against the New York Post and its weekly issue, the Nation, for libel. The suit is Mr. Ball's response to the charges made against him by those journals by way of answer to his part in exposing the Cleveland-Halpin business.

A CABLE dispatch from Paris to the New York Herald states that the Foochow arsenal was destroyed Saturday after a three hours' bombardment by Admiral Courbet's squadron. The firing began at two o'clock in the afternoon and ceased at eight P. M. Seven Chinese gunboats were sunk and two escaped. Only one Chinese battery replied to the French fire. It was at first reported at Shanghai that two French vessels were sunk during the engagement, but it was subsequently ascertained that the Chinese battery did no damage to the French. The European settlement was undisturbed.

THE bill to prohibit the importation of foreign contract labor was smothered in the Senate before Congress adjourned. The same demagogues who aided to smother it there are now posing as the champions and special friends of the workingmen. They should be known by their records rather than by their professions. The people demand a law to prevent the importation of hordes of semi-civilized Hungarians and other half starved laborers, but they cannot trust those who have played them false as law makers while pretending to favor such a law.—American Machinist.

SINCE the arrival of the Greely relief fleet at the Brooklyn navy yard Commander Schley has been very courteous in allowing visitors to inspect the Thetis and Bear without having to go thro' the formality of obtaining a pass. Commander Schley said Friday that two walrus tusks, a kyack (or esquimaux boat) and a number of other curiosities which he prized highly from the fact that he had gathered them himself, had been stolen. Captain Coffin lost two Norwhal horns and a dog harness and Dr. Ames, Lieutenant Colville and other officers also met with losses.

GENERAL BUTLER will speak every day (Sundays excepted) after the campaign opens. There will be a change of performance on every occasion. Every one will have a complimentary ticket on this finest of shows. The Governor will turn a hand-spring from the Democratic to the Republican platform. With a balancing pole he will walk the tight rope from inflation to resumption. But the crowning act will be when this Hercules will put his head in the mouth of the lion monopoly and go peacefully asleep with one eye open.—[Titusville, Pa., Herald.

PRESIDENT ARTHUR arrived at West Island Sunday afternoon from New London, where he remained during Saturday night. He came on the Despatch and was accompanied by Secretary Chandler. Both gentlemen landed on the island, where the President will angle for bass. During the coming week President Arthur and Secretary Chandler will come to Newport to witness the naval review of the North Atlantic squadron and the rams and monitors. Senators Hawley Miller, Aldrich, Morgan and Butler and Representatives Randall, Hiscock and other members of the special committee on ordnance and war ships will be there to witness the review.

THE Executive Committee of the National Labor Party repudiates all connection with the Greenback and Anti-Monopoly organizations, and recommends workingmen to cast their votes for the candidates of "the regular party that in their opinion best represents their interests." How far the committee represents the workingmen of the country we cannot say, but there is common sense in the recommendation. The workingmen of the country make up the mass of its citizens, and they have intelligence and character enough to divide in their political opinions like other citizens. They can make their power more effective in the regular parties by helping to decide issues between [illegible] by trying to figure in politics as a party by themselves.

Some time ago James McDonald fell down the high steps leading to a saloon kept by John Brennan in the Neal block, Oswego, and received injuries from which he died shortly after. The coroner's jury rendered a verdict of death by accident, and censured the saloon keeper. No autopsy was made at the time, but later the body was exhumed and an examination made. The result has not been disclosed, but Saturday papers in a $10,000 suit for damages were served upon M. P. Neal, proprietor of the block, and John Brennan the saloon keeper.

A man bearing the name of Ransom Dean, about 42 years of age, hailing from South Bend, Ind., arrived in Richland, Oswego county, Wednesday in search of his father, whom he does not remember to have seen. Shortly after he was born his father and mother separated, the former, it was supposed, going to California, and the latter dying when he was about two years old. During the years that have passed since that time he has made frequent endeavors to find some trace of his father, but without success. Recently a gang of men from Oswego county employed in building a telegraph line across the state of Indiana stopped near Dean's house at South Bend, and one of the [illegible] the eastern part of the county [illegible] conversation with him. The St. Louis express on the New York Central road, was crowded one evening recently, when at one of the way stations an elderly gentleman, accompanied by a young lady, entered the cars and finally secured a seat. As the conductor approached the pair, the young lady arose, and in a pleading voice said:

"Please, sir, don't let him carry me to the asylum. I am not crazy; I am a little tired, but not mad. Oh! no indeed. Won't you please have papa take me back home?"

The conductor, accustomed though he was to all phases of humanity, looked with astonishment at the pair as did the other passengers in their vicinity. A few words from the father, however, sufficed, and the conductor passed on while the young lady turned her face to the window. The writer chanced to be seated just behind the old gentleman and could not forego the desire to speak to him. With a sad face and a trembling voice the father said:

"My daughter has been attending the seminary in a distant town and was succeeding remarkably. Her natural qualities, together with a great ambition, placed her in the front ranks of the school, but she studied too closely, was not careful of her health, and her poor brain has been turned. I am taking her to a private asylum where we hope she will soon be better."

At the next station the old man and his daughter left the cars, but the incident, so suggestive of Shakespeare's Ophelia, awakened strange thoughts in the mind of the writer. It is an absolute fact that while the population of America increased thirty per cent. during the decade between 1870 and 1880 the insanity increase was over one hundred and thirty-five per cent. for the same period. Travelers by rail, by boat, or in carriages in any part of the land see large and elaborate buildings, and inquire what they are?

Insane asylums!

Who builds them?

Each State; every county; hundreds of private individuals, and in all cases their capacity is taxed to the utmost.

Why?

Because men, in business and the professions, women, at home or in society, and children at school overtax their mental and nervous forces by work, worry and care. This brings about nervous disorders, indigestion and eventually mania.

It is not always trouble with the head that causes insanity. It far oftener arises from evils in other parts of the body. The nervous system determines the status of the brain. Any one who has periodic headaches; occasional dizziness; a dimness of vision; a ringing in the ears; a feverish head; frequent nausea or a sinking at the pit of the stomach, should take warning at once. The stomach and head are in direct sympathy and if one be impaired the other can never be in order. Acute dyspepsia causes more insane suicides than any other known agency and the man, woman or child whose stomach is deranged is not and cannot be safe from the coming on at any moment of mania in some one of its many terrible forms.

The value of moderation and the imperative necessity of care in keeping the stomach right must therefore be clear to all. The least appearance of indigestion, or mal-assimilation of food should be watched as carfully as the first approach of an invading army. Many means have been advocated for meeting such attacks, but all have heretofore been more or less defective. There can be little doubt, however, that for the purpose of regulating the stomach, toning it up to proper action, keeping its nerves in a normal condition and purifying the blood, Warner's Tippecanoe The Best, excels all ancient or recent discoveries. It is absolutely pure and vegetable; it is certain to add vigor to adults, while it cannot by any possibility injure even a child. The fact that it was used in the days of the famous Harrison family is proof positive of its merit as it has so thoroughly withstood the test of time. As a tonic and revivifier it is simply wonderful. It has relieved the agony of the stomach in thousands of cases; sothed the tired nerves; produced peaceful sleep and averted the coming on of a mania more to be dreaded than death itself.

WOLCOTT, N. Y., Aug. 20, 1882.

Gentlemen—I have been a great sufferer with rheumatism and constipation: have been almost helpless and unable to dress myself alone. I, like thousands of others, tried many remedies I had seen largely advertised, in the hope that I might find some relief, but never until I used the Rheumatic Syrup did I find anything that seemed to hit my case in the least, and I confess that when I did finally consent to try your remedy I had no faith at all in its merits, but I was very happily disappointed. To-day I am entirely free from pain, and can dress myself alone, and can get around better than I have for a long time, and I have used the medicine less than four weeks, and can truthfully say that it will do all and more than you claim for it. I am, yours truly, JAMES WRIGHT.

PORT YOUR HELM.

Among the Marine Stores a Ship Chandler Spins a Yarn about a Storm.

At the foot of Main St., Buffalo, is the main house of McKean Edge Co., a ship chandlers' establishment. Stepping out of a down town car, I entered. High on every side, on shelves and off, were piled an array of wares—a grand medley of everything, from the pewter spoon upon which little Jack cut his gums, to the big oil stoves that warm the daily mess. In the office stood Mr. J. C. McBean, the picture of life and energy, discussing the relative merits of various kinds of starboard and port lights, with a Michigan pilot and an Erie canal man.

[illegible]

[illegible] would be [illegible] Others said [illegible] six day's make, taking off the Julys and about four days of August. But unfortunately the hot weather cheese of this month has yet to be sold, and it is doubtful if much improvement can be looked for until that is out of the way. Buyers who have traveled thro' the country claim that there is but an exceeding small amount of fancy cheese now on the shelves, the hot weather having affected it all, or nearly all. In the northern part of the state the factories are said to be holding yet a large part of their July cheese. In this condition of things. It will be lucky if prices do not go any lower. The second week in August last year cheese fell from 9¼ to 9c. and remained at that point for two weeks when it again recovered to 9¼c., and the next week to 10¼c. But we did not have the oppressive weather of the past two weeks last year, and the make of August was almost as good as that of September. Many curing rooms during this time have ranged up to 90 and 91 degrees for lack of sufficient protection from the burning rays of the sun. Such heat must needs tell upon the quality of the cheese. But altho' there is no immediate prospect of any marked improvement, it is hoped that the market has reached the lowest point it is destined to touch. If it is fed slowly, so that it may consume and digest the stock without having a load left on its stomach, the patient will probably gradually recover.

Transactions of the day were as follows: 7 lots, 700 boxes, at 9c; 59 lots 5,496 boxes, at 9⅛c; 10 lots, 930 boxes, at 9⅛c; 2 lots, 364 boxes, at 9⅝c; 9 lots, 940 boxes, at 9¼c; 2 lots, 300 boxes, at private terms. Sales, 8,730 boxes; commissions, 1,005; total, 9,735 boxes. Ruling price, 9⅛c. Transactions of corresponding day last year 12,203 boxes ruling price 9½ c; of two years ago 6,043 boxes, ruling price 10½c. With the holding back our marketings are about 1,200 boxes less than last week, and 2,500 less than last year.

AT LITTLE FALLS.

LITTLE FALLS, Aug. 25,—Cheese.—We have had a rather tame market today, with a decline in prices of about one-half cent on the average. It is believed that the late hot weather has an extremely depressing effect on trade, and now that it is so much cooler factorymen are quite generally holding back stocks in the belief that an improvement in the market will soon be magifest, altho' the sale to-day is considerably larger than most operators believed it would be. The bulk of July cheese has now gone forward from this section and factories are in good shape to hold back moderate amounts. The cry is still for rain, some parts of this section having entirely failed in receiving the nice showers that visited other parts. The transactions to-day are:

Lots	Boxes	Price
2	135	9
43	2,061	9¼
34	2,804	9½
1	104	9¾
8	639	Com
88	6,643
Farm Dairy	740
Total	7,383

Farm Dairies.—There were 740 boxes farm cheese sold at 9a9¾c. The bulk sold at 9½c.

Butter.—There were 28 packages of creamery butter sold at 22a23c. and only a few tubs of farm dairy at 21a22c.

AT FULTON.

There were 2,610 boxes of cheese represented from 23 factories, of which about 1,500 boxes were sold at Utica ruling which was 9⅛ the principal buyer being Edwin B. Naish of New York city who was buying for the Montreal market. The new buyer made the market, which at first promised to be dull, unusually lively. The weather continues to be dry, and milk has shrunk one-half. The price one year ago was 9¼c., two years ago no sales, three years ago 11¼c.

Hardened Liver.

Five years ago I broke down with kidney and liver complaint and rheumatism.

Since then I have been unable to be about at all. My liver became hard like wood: my limbs were puffed up and filled with water.

All the best physicians agreed that nothing could cure me. I resolved to try Hop Bitters: I have used seven bottles; the hardness has all gone from my liver, the swelling from my limbs, and it has worked a miracle in my case; otherwise I would have been now in my grave. Poverty and Suffering.

I was dragged down with debt, poverty and suffering for years, caused by a sick family and large bills for doctoring.

I was completely discouraged, until one year ago, by advice of my pastor, I commenced using Hop Bitters, and in one month we were all well, and none of us have seen a sick day since, and I want to say to all poor men, you can keep your families well a year with Hop Bitters for less than one doctor's visit will cost. The Syracuse Standard's Fulton correspondent says: In a conversation with C. T. Brockway, Courtney's manager, at his home in Mexico this week, he said Courtney would row a race on the Onondaga lake the present fall with a champion oarsman for a nice purse, and that doubtless the best time ever yet made in a genuine race would be the result. He says if it comes off this community can depend upon a rare exhibition of skill, as Courtney is determined to regain public confidence.

A number of boys, after drinking a quantity of beer at the Rock Spring brewery near Syracuse, Sunday afternoon, amused themselves by throwing stones at the building. Another Arrival of

WALL PAPER, [illegible] AND FANCY

[illegible] herald, spread a mellow light around and the world was bathed in a sweet calm. Such a night fills one's mind with reflections and as I walked slowly about and passed couples, close armed, sweet-tongued, with [illegible] drooping heads and aimless air, the brief past came to me like a welcome visitor and I remembered that when I was very young I often wondered if the coming years would find me a proud knight bearing charming ladies home to their rosy bowers. The years did come and we lived just as other youth have lived since the beginning of the human family, through that period of soft, low whistlings, sweet song hummings, moonlight walks and rides, and sentimental talks, rare confidences and towering imaginations: that love time of life. Grey hairs and added years have since come, but though age and life work be ours, yet the sight of a loving couple on a night like this makes us all young again. We too often err in thinking mankind a mass of diversities. It is nearer the truth to say that the parts of the whole are alike and that it is a bundle of similarities. Does not one's childhood in its material part bear an almost exact resemblance to every other person's childhood? The same is true of youth, manhood and old age. These times of life have their special characteristics. But have not these same peculiarities existed since life began? I begin to wonder why we all mistake ourselves. We begin our active life with a determination that our life shall be exceptional: we shall live thus and so; do this and that. This strange fatuity follows us through life, but if we reflect at any time do we not find that we are living and in fact are just like other men: the same resolutions to branch out into an unknown path, the same sliding back into old roads?

THE SUN.

NEW YORK, 1884.

About sixty million copies of THE SUN have gone out of our establishment the past twelve months.

If you were to paste end to end all the columns of The Suns printed and sold last year you would get a continuous strip of interesting information, common sense wisdom, sound doctrine, and sane wit long enough to reach from Printing House Square to the top of Mount Copernicus in the Moon then back to Printing House Square, and then, three-quarters of the way back to the Moon again.

But The Sun is written for the inhabitants of this earth; this same strip of intelligence would girdle the globe twenty-seven or twenty-eight times.

If every buyer of a copy of The Sun during the past year has spent only one hour over it, and if his wife or grandfather has spent another hour this newspaper in 1883 has afforded the human race thirteen thousand years of steady reading, night and day.

It is only by little calculations like these that you can form any idea of the circulation of the most popular of American newspapers, or of its influence on the opinions and actions of American men and women.

The Sun is and will continue to be, a newspaper which tells the truth without fear of consequences, which gets at the facts no matter how much the process costs, which presents the news of all the world without waste of words and in the most readable shape, which is working with all its heart for the cause of honest government, and which therefore believes that the Republican party must go in the coming year of our Lord, 1884.

If you know The Sun, you like it already, and you will read it with accustomed diligence and profit during what is sure to be the most interesting year in its history. If you do not yet know the Sun it is high time to get into the sunshine.

TERMS TO MAIL SUBSCRIBERS.

The several editions of The Sun are sent by mail postpaid as follows:

DAILY—50 cents a month, $6 a year; with Sunday edition $7.

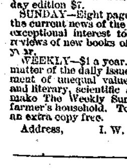
THE WORLD CHALLENGED



This liniment has been manufactured and used for twenty five years and our innumerable certificates of cure prove it to be an unparalleled success. We do not offer it as an internal remedy, positively asserting that any liniment that can be taken into the stomach without injury can have little efficacy as a specific when externally applied. This being composed of Oils, is readily absorbed into the system, giving prompt relief even in cases of acute pain caused by Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Sciatica, Lumbago, Sprains, Bruises, Chilblains, or from any cause where a liniment is demanded. The oils are so penetrating that a thorough use of the Liniment will remove all stiffness of joints, lameness of muscles, or pain arising from inflammation or any cause. Even in chronic Spinal Disease, and Paralysis, frequent use of Oil Liniment will effect many cures. Finally for pain in any part of the body, use freely, with rubbing and warmth and we guarantee relief. You will find a trial of it the best certificate of its value. It is the only Liniment made entirely of Oils, and we challenge the world for its equal. Price 25 and 50 cents per bottle. Sold by dealers.

THE BLOOD CLEANSER.

BILIOUSNESS.

Bilious symptoms invariably arise from indigestion, such as furred tongue, vomiting of bile, giddiness, sick headache, irregular bowels. The liver secretes the bile and acts like a filter or sieve, to cleanse impurities of the blood. By irregularity in its action or suspensions of its functions, the bile is liable to overflow into the blood, causing jaundice, sallow complexion, yellow eyes, bilious diarrhœa, a languid, weary feeling and many other distressing symptoms. Biliousness may be properly termed an affection of the liver, and can be thoroughly cured by the grand regulator of the liver and biliary organs, BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS. Act upon the stomach, bowels and liver, making healthy bile and pure blood, and opens the culverts and sluiceways for the outlet of disease. Sold everywhere and guaranteed to cure.

Promised to be thy bride;

That thou hadst forgotten that cherished past.

Oh, it is cruel to know
That the tender blossoms of love's young dream

RELIGIOUS READING.

A correspondent of the Observer writes in behalf of the 2,500,000 inhabitants of Chili, thousands of whom, he says, are hungry for the bread of life. He thinks this a critical period in the nation's history, and that earnest efforts should be made to send them the gospel.

The Rev. Dr. Pressense, of Paris, the wellknown evangelical preacher, does not hesitate to ascribe the wild panic that seized upon the people of Toulon at the outbreak of the cholera to the recent progress of materialism and the decay of faith in God.

Rev. James White was recently installed minister of the Presbyterian church, Stonebridge, Monaghan, Ireland, in succession to his father, who presided over the congregation for fifty-four years. The church was founded nearly two hundred years ago by Patrick Dunlop, from Kirkcowan, Scotland.

We are glad to see that some of the Presbyterian missionary churches are able to rejoice over an unusually large ingathering of souls during the past year. In the Presbytery of Chefoo, China, one church received 348 persons on profession of their faith, and another 260. The number received in the first of these churches exceeds that added to any other Presbyterian church during the year, at home or abroad. The nearest approach to it is in the case of the Tabernacle church in Brooklyn (Rev. Dr. Talmage's) which reports an addition of 224 new members. This, The Presbyterian says, is a novelty in the statistics of that denomination. We hope it will no longer be so.

HOUSEHOLD HELPS.

Stains on wood can be removed with strong vinegar or salts of lemon.

Spots are easily cleaned from varnished furniture, by rubbing with spirit of camphor.

Stains on ivory may be taken out by washing with soap and water and placing it, whilst wet, in the air to bleach.

Pencil drawing may be made indelible by passing through a solution of equal parts milk and water, wetting the paper but not allowing the fluid to run over the drawing.

Piano polish may be made of very pale shellac, five pounds; mastic, seven ounces; alcohol (90 per cent,) five or six pints; dissolve in the cold with frequent stirrings. This is regarded as the best polish for pianos made.

To clean marble, brush the dust off with a piece of chamois, then apply with a brush a good coat of gum arabic about the consistency of thick mucilage, expose it to the sun or wind to dry.

Mildew may be removed from awnings, etc., with the following preparation: Mix well together two tablespoonfuls of soft soap, one of salt, two of powdered starch, and the juice of a lemon. Lay this mixture on both sides of the stain with a painter's brush and then lay the article on the grass day and night until the stain disappears.

Dr. BOSANKO.

This name has become so familiar with most of the people throughout the United States that it is hardly necessary to state that he is the originator of the great Dr. Bosanko Cough and Lung Syrup, the people's favorite remedy wherever known, for Coughs, Colds, Consumption and all other affections of the Throat and Lungs. Taking a Vacation.

I often wonder how many people get back after the vacation really rested and refreshed. Most of the men and women one meets at a summer resort seem to be on the go nearly all the time. They come to the hotel, stay a day or two, then rush to the lakes for a few days' fishing, go somewhere else for a day or two more and finally reach home leaving it very much an open question whether they have profited either in body or mind by being perpetually on the tramp. Really many people make their holidays very fatiguing affairs, and in place of returning home rested, refreshed, and ready for work, they come back to a sick bed, and a dreary recovery from overwork and exposure. It is a great mistake to make a toil of pleasure, work of your holiday. Often better remain at home and take country walks, with home as your center, than spend half your holidays in a railway car, and the remainder in all the fatigues of sight-seeing and the insanity of prolonged and unwonted demands on your physical strength, and fretting the brain with the bother and anxiety of getting to this, that, or the other place. A very important matter is to select a place for your vacation; and in this selection you must consult your health, inclination, pocket, and so forth, as well as the nature of your ordinary work. Decide that you will leave all business at home, and not have it to [illegible]

The Massachusetts Ploughman says: "When a tree becomes coverd with moss it should be scraped off, because, if left to any extent, it sucks the life of the tree, and thus checks its growth. After the tree that has the moss on it is scraped, it should be well washed with a solution of soap and water strong enough to kill the moss."

Tar may be safely applied to old trees, with hard, thick bark, but it is hazardous at best for young trees, the bark of which is fresh and tender. Much, however, depends on several circumstances. If the tar is quite liquid it will penetrate the pores and destroy the young bark; if made thick by boiling or otherwise, the danger is diminished.

An extremely poor horse is usually a miserable one, but it is questionable whether it is any more so than an extremely fat one. Especially is this true where the animal is required to perform any amount of hard labor. While horses need good, wholesome food, it should not be all of the fat-producing kinds. The matter of feeding horses by the majority of horse owners never receives the attention it should. The supply of food and the different kinds should be varied as often as the amount and kinds of work are changed.—New England Farmer.

A writer says that a year's experience with broad wagon wheels is conclusive as to their value. A four-inch tire will carry two tons over soft ground with greater ease to the team than a two and a half inch tire will carry one ton. The wheels are not so much strained by stone and rough tracks on the road, and the road is not cut up, but, on the contrary, is packed down and keeps smooth. The prevalent idea that the draught is increased by widening the tire is altogether baseless; on the contrary, a wide tire reduces the draught. The extra cost of the tire is repaid many times over every year in the extra work that can be done by a team.—[Chicago Journal.

History of the Hardest Struggle of His Life—Of Deep Interest to all Professions.

WORCESTER, MASS., March 24th 1884.

Dr. David Kennedy, Rondout, N. Y.:

DEAR SIR: My son, a lad of fifteen, editor of the "Go-Ahead," amateur journal, of this city, has been at different times most severely and apparently hopelessly, afflicted with [illegible]. When a very small child his body was almost entirely covered with this loathsome eruption. It mostly passed away, however, after the teething period, and he was not seriously troubled with it again until about one year ago, when the salt rheum first appeared on his hands between his fingers, then on his limbs, then on his face and head in one solid mass. His condition was terrible. The rash resembled ivy poisoning and we we fancied it might be something not so bad as his old troubles, but the physicians pronounced it salt rheum and made every effort without avail, to cure it. We tried a preparation widely advertised as a specific for skin diseases, but it made about as much of an impression as so much cold water might have done. You can understand the situation when I say we were in despair of obtaining real help from any source.

At this point, through the advice of Mr. J. W. Bacon, whose daughter had been cured by it, I tried KENNEDY'S FAVORITE REMEDY. This was the right and only thing at first! The skin began to heal at once, and to-day the evidences of the disease have wholly disappeared. How thankful we are Dear Doctor, I leave you to imagine. Yours,

No. 17 Terrill Street   J. W. BATCHELDER.

The experience of years, and the testimony of thousands demonstrate DR. DAVID KENNEDY'S FAVORITE REMEDY to be the most successful medicine for organic and blood diseases ever discovered. Prepared solely by Dr. David Kennedy, Physician and Surgeon, Rondout, N. Y.

How Watch Cases are Made.

In buying a silver watch case great care should be taken to secure one that is solid silver throughout. The cap of most cheap silver cases is made of a composition known as albata, which is a very poor substitute for silver, as it turns black in a short time. The backs of such cases are made much thinner than those of an all silver case, being robbed in order to make the cap thicker and get in as much as possible of the cheap metal. Another important point in a silver case is the joints or hinges, which should be made of gold. Those of most cheap cases are made of silver, which is not a suitable metal for that purpose. In a brief period it warps, bends and spreads apart, allowing the backs to become loose upon the case and admitting the dust and dirt that accumulates in the pocket. The Keystone Silver Watch Cases are only made with silver caps and gold joints.

[illegible] was something positively alarm[illegible] united comment and prom[illegible] the tones in which it was uttered [illegible]pressively earnest, and the man[illegible] the speaker was very far from [illegible] and they fell upon the startled [illegible] worse half in a way that Mr. Benton to quail a little, for [illegible] enough of the temperament of [illegible]red woman who spoke to feel [illegible] was no idle threat.

[illegible] Benton and his wife Mary had [illegible] married nearly a quarter of a cen[illegible] at the time of this violent outbreak, [illegible] had hitherto been active and talka[illegible] matrimonial partners. They lived [illegible] country upon their own little [illegible] and though they had not always [illegible] the most absolute harmony of opin[illegible] their devotion to each other and [illegible] unity upon all the essential mat[illegible] of life were undisputed. It was [illegible] the infinitesimal objects of life that [illegible] clashed. They had, together, met [illegible] surmounted great obstacles in their [illegible] path, but they removed rocks [illegible] to stumble over a pebble. They [illegible] united, hewn their way through an [illegible]most interminable forest of difficulties, [illegible] stopped in their onward career by the insignificant bramble of conten[illegible]. They had safely weathered the [illegible] of adversity, yet were occasional[illegible] almost overcome by some petty stream [illegible] wrangling that flowed from the lips [illegible] either. An ultimately too contemptible [illegible] rivulets that had been constantly [illegible]kling for so many years in so many [illegible]rent ways had seemingly met to [illegible] a great vortex in which they were [illegible]med to be swallowed up. Those [illegible]erto active and voluble tongues [illegible] about to rust in idleness, at least at [illegible]. They were resolved to become [illegible]forth Silent Partners.

John Benton accepted the situation [illegible]out replying, for what was there to [illegible] said? Had he not been commanded [illegible] refrain from speaking to his wife? [illegible] gallantry forbids us to cast any great [illegible] of the odium of this scene upon [illegible] Benton. Besides, had not John, [illegible] before the last volcanic eruption of [illegible] upon the part of his wife, insin[illegible] that her "unruly member was as [illegible] as a fence rail?" Could female [illegible] and blood endure such a base [illegible] as this when applied to herself? [illegible] had he not asserted that her words [illegible] legion, and that her tones were [illegible]der? Should a wife pass over such [illegible]ting personal metaphors as these? [illegible] Benton, either wisely or unwisely, [illegible]ded in the negative.

[illegible] first night of the self enforced si[illegible] in the Benton cottage was awk[illegible]. The usual curtain lecture was [illegible]ted, and such a deathlike, desolate [illegible] prevailed that sleep was out of [illegible] question. About midnight the aw[illegible] silence had so worked upon the [illegible] of John Benton that, unable to [illegible] longer, he arose, and going [illegible] stairs soon returned with the old [illegible] which was not only a loud ticker [illegible] also a cheerful striker. He must [illegible] something for company that would [illegible] to his sense of hearing, or perish [illegible] loneliness. John started and stop[illegible] he was about to place this new [illegible]panion upon the bureau; he thought [illegible] a sound proceed from under [illegible] coverings not unlike a smoth[illegible]augh. But his imagination had to [illegible] the place of his senses, as no ex[illegible]tion could be asked. The clock, [illegible] a feeble and imperfect substitute [illegible] human voice, was better by far [illegible] absence of all sounds, and he [illegible]sleep. The morrow brought its [illegible]ations, following one another in [illegible] and annoying succession. Mrs. [illegible], finding the situation too irk[illegible] be borne without some new ex[illegible] to replace the lost art of speech [illegible]ned upon a revolution of the [illegible] household—the grand safety-[illegible] the pent-up feelings of a house[illegible] one of the best-known reme[illegible] the disease of hypochondria or [illegible]. She went about this herculean [illegible] though life and death hung in [illegible]ance, or as though upon its com[illegible] depended the casting out of the [illegible] devils that had taken up their [illegible] here.

[illegible] Benton, coming in about noon [illegible] the field, saw at once that some[illegible] unusual was under way. He [illegible] that his wife was just then out at [illegible], so he crept upstairs to ascer[illegible] nature of the operations. There [illegible] scene of chaos indeed. It would [illegible] though this energetic woman [illegible]ided, contrary to her usual wis[illegible] begin at every room in the [illegible] once.

[illegible] certainly looked as though [illegible] not be restored to even one [illegible] wrecked apartments by sunset. [illegible] was always a kind hearted [illegible] noticing the carpets rolled up, [illegible] to him that here was a clear [illegible] which he could anticipate the [illegible] of his poor, tired, tongue-tied [illegible] him to think was to act, [illegible] the carpets upon the lawn; [illegible] had he finished his task be[illegible] his wife tugging and pant[illegible] stairs, trying to get the car[illegible] house again, and back into [illegible] rooms. He had evident[illegible] taken, and he hastened to [illegible] by restoring the carpets [illegible] places; then, from fear of [illegible] harm than good, he stood [illegible] allowed destiny to take its [illegible] of the day pressed [illegible] Mrs. Benton, and toward [illegible] the dumb language [illegible] from her hus[illegible] getting a room ready [illegible] before bedtime. [illegible] with astonishment. She at last wound up with a look of disgust so full of meaning that the poor fellow thought he read in it plainly enough, "I should think any fool could understand that." But John was not the fool to comprehend it, so pantomime had to be given up.

Many ludicrous blunders were the inevitable consequence of this abandonment of the customary mode of conveying thoughts; the double orders given to the grocerymen and the butcher, the duplicate purchases of all sorts of odds and ends, led to much confusion and vexation in the Benton household.

One morning John Benton thought he detected unusual preparations going on in the culinary department, a grand overhauling and dusting of the best china set and sundry other indications of some unusual event. Mrs. Benton tried in her dumb-show manner to refresh his memory in regard to an expected visit of which he had been previously made aware, but which had slipped from his somewhat defective memory. But she could not tell whether or not she had succeeded in her efforts to enlighten him. About noon John came in, as usual, to find a roomful of city visitors, friends of Mrs. Benton. Now John, although not a vain man, would rather have had some notification of the event, so that he need not have appeared in their presence in his working garments; but as there was now no help for it, he tried to make the best of the situation, and greeted the visitors in rather an awkward fashion. The latter, no doubt, attributed Mrs. Benton's silence toward her husband to mortification at his personal appearance. "But, after all, this affair passed without the exposure so much dreaded by both parties.

John Benton had promised his wife, previous to the unhappy occurrence that had placed the gulf of silence between them, money to purchase a new dress for herself. One day he laid a roll of bills upon the table, and called her attention to it. She nodded assent, and John was satisfied that her memory was good for anything that related to her personal adornment. But what was his surprise and disgust when she returned from town and gave him the grocer's receipted bill!

One morning, upon John's return from the city, he astonished his wife by bringing with him a lad, whom he ushered into the kitchen with the remark:

"Now, Teddy, this is your home, and that is your mistress, Mrs. Benton, and whatever she requires of you, you are to do, of course."

John Benton, in the utter loneliness of his heart, and fearing less his unused tongue should become paralyzed by this prolonged inactivity, or that he should lose his voice for want of practice, had, like Robinson Crusoe, brought home a little man Friday to talk to, and also to use as a mouthpiece for himself and wife. Things now went on with less blundering and uncertainty, for Teddy was made the medium for conveying the thoughts or wishes alternately from one to the other. But John monopolized so much of the boy's companionship in his new found delight at giving vent to speech, that Mrs. Benton still led a rather lonely life.

"But," thought she, "what is sauce for the goose is sauce for the gander, and I will have a girl Friday before the week is out, in order to strengthen and improve my vocal powers."

And so she did. Never was there a more astonished man than was John Benton on the evening that he came chattering with Teddy into the kitchen and stopped upon the threshold to listen to the irrepressible flood of female conversation that was being poured forth within. Indeed, so intent was Mrs. Benton on unburdening her long pentup feelings that she did not notice the transfixed figure of her husband standing there till her startled ear caught the remark:

"Well, Teddy, this is a surprise party, isn't it?"

"Those, Maggie," said Mrs. Benton, "are the other half of this family."

The Benton household was no longer at "sixes and sevens" for want of interpreters between the two heads, but it was a prolonged Quaker meeting as far as mingling of the sexes were concerned. Each of the heads of the house had a victim upon which he or she could inflict unending volubility.

It was about this time that John communicated to his wife the mistake in regard to the dress money, and refunded to her the amount. She in turn, thro' her mouthpiece, intimated to him that his company and services in driving the family horse would be acceptable to take her to the city to purchase her gown.

To this he readily assented, as he also had business in the city. They had agreed upon a plan of communication before leaving home, through a small slate such as dumb people use among those who do not understand their language.

On arriving at the gorgeous store they manifested an awkward uneasiness, and paused a few minutes before entering. This mute business in public was evidently not relished by either of the parties. But finally they entered. Mrs. Benton was greeted by a polite salesman. She made known her wishes, and soon a great mass of various fabrics of all colors was spread out for her inspection. She asked the price of a piece of a particular shade that she fancied, she priced another piece of a different color, and during all this time she was vainly trying in some indirect way to get an expression of opinion from her husband as to his preference. But she ignominiously failed. Her face grew hot and [illegible]. She was not on speaking terms with her husband, and yet, she loved him well enough to [illegible] of her vow, she produced it and asked him the simple question upon which her heart was set. For answer he simply put his hand on the piece of her choice, and she smiled pleasantly as she turned to the spruce and accommodating salesman. The latter, taking in the situation at a glance, with the keen eye of an expert in humanity, and supposing it was of course a question of dollars and cents she was propounding to her unfortunate deaf and dumb husband, rapidly wrote upon a piece of paper, "Splendid goods; wear like iron? never fade; very cheap; fifty per cent. below cost price; never get another chance like it," which paper he placed in the hands of the astonished Mr. John Benton.

"What's this?" he exclaimed, looking alternately from the clerk to his wife. "'Pears to me you're in a hurry with your bill, young man."

Never was there a more astonished salesman behind a counter than this. And his chagrin equaled his surprise. With a confused apology, which seemed to include something about "deaf mute," he tried to make amends by renewed courtesies and attentions to Mrs. Benton, who was plunged in misery. It is hard to conceive of a woman so wretched who had just come into possession of a new and handsome outfit.

John Benton's special business in town was to pay an insurance premium, and he and his wife called together at the palatial office of the company. While waiting their turn to be accommodated, John and his wife stood near the door. As he was looking over a city directory to pass away the time, his wife, being seized with a new idea, wrote it out and handed him the fatal slate. John, for convenience in reading the sentence on the slate, put the directory under his arm, whereupon, just at this moment, the pompous secretary of the insurance company came in from the street, and taking in the situation with the keenness of sight and astuteness characterize the discerning city man, from a dry-goods salesman up to a high official in an insurance company, he touched the fated John upon the arm and pointed to a card upon the wall on which the legend ran thus: "No beggars, pedlars, or book agents allowed to pursue their avocations here." It was some time before John or his wife could comprehend the connecting link between themselves and that card; but when, with the mild assistance of the official dignity, it dawned upon them that John was taken for a book agent, Mrs. Benton turned purple with rage, and in explaining their business there did not spare the feelings of the wretch who had given another sting to her wounded pride. But John was disposed to laugh it off, and still further added to the confusion of those present by transacting his business in good and audible English.

It remains to this day a mystery to the unfortunate dry goods clerk as well as to the nonplused secretary what could induce a couple to converse together on a slate who could use such forcible and intellible language to others.

After their unfortunate experience in the city the unhappy pair began to weaken a little in their resolution. Not only were their mutual interests suffering in various ways by reason of this very imperfect means of communication, but as their love for one another was strong and genuine, in spite of the foolish embargo they had put upon their speech, they chafed under the irksome restraint of a protracted silence. While they were both revolving in their minds plans that might lead to a way out of the difficulty, fate came to their rescue, and saved them from themselves, though in an unexpected and painful way.

Upon the anniversary of their silence John Benton and Teddy were busy in the hay field, and as a storm was threatening, Mrs. Benton and Maggie came to the rescue with their rakes. A large load was on the wagon, and Mrs. Benton and Maggie volunteered to arrange the hay upon the cart as John threw it up to them. John had just started to lead the horses to another part of the field, when, on looking up at the load, he saw his wife still standing. He motioned to her to sit down, but she failed to notice his signal, and the horses started; at the same time John saw her lunge backward and slide, head-foremost, from the load. Before he could stop the team and get to her, she had struck the ground, upon her head. With a faint gasp, and with a semi-conscious but dazed cry, she said, "Don't you ever speak——"

"Hush!" said the scared man; "for God's sake, mary, don't talk that way now!"

In another moment she lay unconscious in his trembling arms, pale and still as death.

"Oh!" exclaimed the unhappy man, "if I had only screamed to her to sit down instead of trusting to that confounded pantomine, perhaps it would not have happened."

Taking her up tenderly in his strong arms he carried her to the house, and all the way into her now deaf ears he poured out his love and lamentations; his tounge was loosened and seemed to be trying to make up for lost time. And as he bathed her head, and chafed her hands, and tried to kiss back her color and to coax into action that long-silent voice, he moaned, "what would I not give now to hear her talk to me again! It would be bliss to hear her scold even. Perhaps—perhaps," and he shuddered as he said it, "she may never speak again!"

The new-mown hay threatened by the coming storm was nothing to him now. He knew neither nor cared whether the sky was black or blue. All was black about him, and there was only one object that he could see. Even Teddy, who had shared his confidence and Maggie, who had been the [illegible] only the go-betweens that served to keep up this odious silence.

"If I had never brought Teddy here, perhaps we should have spoken long ago," he muttered; "for it was getting to be pretty hard to keep still any longer about that time."

He was just thinking seriously about sending for a doctor, when he felt a pressure upon the hand that had all of this time clasped one of his wife's, and, looking into her face, he saw with delight that her eyes were wide open and bent upon him.

"My dear Mary! thank God!" he said as he bent down and kissed her pale face, while the tears dropped down from his cheeks upon hers. "Speak to me Mary!"

She gazed around her upon the scene of masculine havoc for a few moments; the wet cloths, the blankets, the camphor and arnica bottles, the flooded floor and then at the face of the man beside her. In the latter she saw only intense misery and unfeigned contrition, but she could not resist the impulse, in spite of the accident, in spite of the surroundings, in spite of John's sufferings of mind, to test him still farther. She slowly raised her limp hands, and with the forefinger of the right she began to trace upon the palm of the left, at the same time directing a questioning look at her husband. "Good heavens?" thought he, "can it be possible that she has been paralyzed by her fall, and is now truly and in earnest dumb?" But a glance at her face dispelled that horrible thought. She was smiling, but she still continued to write with her finger. Simple, honest John Benton caught her meaning then, and exclaimed, almost petulantly. "The slate, Mary? Confound the slate! No more deaf and dumb language for me. One word from you now is worth more to me now than a year's chatter of these young ones! beside, it will do you good, my dear."

"John, I really believe you are speaking to me," said his wife, while tears of joy came to her eyes.

John Benton bent close to her face, and kissing her again and again, said, "Yes, Mary, I am going to keep it up, too, from this time on, for——" and here he put his mouth to her ear, and whispered a few words that, in spite of her tears and pain, made her laugh outright. He whispered, "No beggars, peddlers or book agents allowed in the Benton Cottage hereafter.' —Harper's Bazar.

HEALTH HINTS.

A salt-water bath, even if taken in the bath-tub at home, will prove beneficial to the health. For home use rock salt is purchased and about three pounds of it put to one tub of water.

A little sun-burn is good for the skin. When the skin has become thoroughly red, vaseline, cold cream or milk should be put on the face and hands before retiring, and rubbed well into the pores. In the morning, wash in warm water and a very little white castile soap.

Americans drink too much ice-water, the settlement from the ice being what makes it unhealthy. The best way to cool water is to fill three or four bottles from the faucet and place them in the ice box, next to the ice. The water soon becomes deliciously cool and it is far more healthy to drink.

Two teaspoonfuls of powdered charcoal in half a tumbler of water generally gives instant relief for sick headache. Another remedy is, when the first symptoms of a headache appear take a clear teaspoonful of lemon juice fifteen minutes before each meal and the same dose at bedtime, follow this up until all symptoms have passed, taking no other remedies, and you will soon be free from your unwelcome pain.

The teeth should be well cleaned just before retiring, if at no other time. If this is not done regularly particles of food will lodge in them and thus help them to decay, and the breath will not be sweet. The tongue should be well washed both morning and evening with a little soft sponge and castile soap. Those who have not tried washing the tongue should do so. It gives a sweet, clean feeling to the mouth that washing the teeth does not.

Go To Work.

An exchange hits the nail squairly on the head when it says; 'There are more young American men in the penitentiaries in this country learning trades than there are outside of them. The principal cause of this is that we are educating our young men for gentlemen—trying to make lawyers, preachers, doctors, and clerks out of material that nature intended for blacksmiths, carpenters, tailors, and other honest "hewers of wood and drawers of water." It is a mistake, and a big one, to teach the boys and girls to believe that to labor is disgraceful, and to do nothing for a living is more becoming the society in which they expect to move and have respect. Hang such society! It is rotten to the core to-day, and there are many men's sons and daughters who are now being educated to play the parts of 'leading lady' and 'walking gentleman' in the great drama of life who will light out for the poorhouse or a penitentiary before they have played their parts and and the curtain drops. Go to work!"

Wholesome Advice.

Sensible folks do not like to see young people, especially young ladies, walking the streets simply to see and be seen. Young ladies be on the streets as little as possible, and be sure that the shades of night do not overtake you there except for better reasons than those mentioned, and then only with suitable escort. Flirtations avoid and fortify character and reputation by sensible conduct rather than weaken the same by questionable practices. Be judicious in your choice of company, or so conduct yourself that none but the worthy will dare choose yours.

DON'T LOOK LIKE A WRECK.

"When a man is going down hill everybody is ready to give him a kick." Yes, that is so. It is sad, but natural. Why, many a man and woman, seeking employment, would have got it if their hair hadnt been so thin and gray. One bottle of Parkers Hair Balsam is then the best investment. It stops falling hair, promotes new growth and restores color. Clean, highly perfumed, not a dye. A great improvement over any similar preparation, and sold at the low price of 50c. 14t4

THERE were 169 failures in the United States last week.

GOVERNOR CLEVELAND has returned from the North Woods.

THE Democratic county convention will be held at Mexico next Wednesday.

IT is admitted by the Republican State Committee that St. John will poll 50,000 votes in New York State.

DANIEL GILBERT of Granby is talked of as the Democratic candidate for Superintendant of the poor. Mr. Gilbert now hold the office of town overseer.

HENRY WARD BEECHER after due consideration of the Halpin scandal has decided to support Cleveland, while his brother Thomas K. Beecher of Elmira has received a Sun stroke and is out for Butler.

THE fifty-third annual session of the British Association for the advancement of science was held in Montreal last week and was the most notable meeting of scientific men ever held in America.

THE executive committee of the prohibition party resolved to place a number of speakers in the field this week. The committee believe that with Sufficient funds to pay the speakers, 100,000 votes can be secured.

IT is to be hoped that Blaine will not withdraw his libel suit with the Indianoplis Sentinal as it will be the means of bringing to light the truth of the story if there is any truth in it. The quicker such things are sifted down and done away with the better for all.

POSTMASTER GENERAL Gresham will shortly resign from the Cabinet to become Judge Drummond's successor in the Seventh United States Circuit. First Assistant Hatton will be appointed Postmaster General. It is said that Chief Clerk Walker will succeed Hatton.

THE latest great fact assigned as a reason why the people should vote for General Butler is that on Evacuation Day in the famous centennial celebration he stood the pelting of the storm while others on the reviewing stand sought shelter. But who wants to vote for a man who doesn't know enough to come in when it rains?—[New York Herald.

THE New York Independant has withdrawn from the support of Cleveland, on account of the Buffalo scandal, but does not, as we understand, change its views as to the unfitness of Blaine to be President. It is stated that the change was made by Mr. Bowen, the publisher while the two doctors of divinity who are the editors, still favor Cleveland.

THE cholera is still spreading in Europe. One case was reported in London yesterday. Acting Secretary of the Treasury Coon. to guard against it, has ordered the Collectors of Customs to refuse to permit the landing of any rags in this country for three months, beginning Sept. 1, no matter where they came from or in what manner they were shipped. This will advance the price of paper.

"THE Sun sees nothing but Democratic defeat as the result of nominating Cleveland. It sums up the situation by declaring that had the Democratic Convention nominated Thomas F. Bayard, Samuel J. Randall, or Allen G. Thurman—notwithstanding the objection of taking a candidate from an October State—all would now be plain sailing for the Democracy and victory would already be assured," The Sun has ommitted the name of Benjiman F Butler.

THE New York Sun severely criticises the act of appropriating the United States steamer Dispatch to the personal use of President Arthur. It says: The President has no more right to take the Dispatch, or any other ship of the navy, for his gratification, than he has to put his hands in the Treasury and to abstract the money required for the running expenses of the vessel. The form of this malfeasance in no way diminishes the degree of the offence.

JUDGING from the enthusiasm manifested at the Republican county convention held at Oswego last Thursday, and the warm canvass, and hot fight made by the candidates at the various caucuses together with the excitement of the presidential campaign it is evident that county politics this fall will be unusually lively. The candidates for election for the different offices are as follows: For sheriff, A. N. Beadle, of Pulaski; for district attorney, S. B. Mead, of Granby; for superintendent of poor, H. V. Spencer of Velney; (the present incumbent) George Goodier, (the present incumbent) for county treasurer; I. W. Fenton, special county judge; W. W. Harmon, special surrogate.

Each candidate can now take his coat off and go to work in good earnest, for as the old saying is nothing is worth having that is not worth working for.

S. B. Mead Esq., the candidate for district attorney is a native of the village of Fulton, thirty-five years of age, and is an attorney of rare mark and ability. His opponents at the convention were N. B. Smith, of Pulaski, the present district attorney and Merrick Stowell of Oswego. Mr. Mead was nominated on the 4th ballot by a vote of 100 to 77. Mr. Mead has always been an active [illegible]

Two additional mail carriers have been appointed for Oswego.

R. D. Box of Pulaski, had seven fine sheep killed by dogs last week.

Mr. J. B. Cole has been renominated for School Commissioner in the 3d district.

Oswego county prohibitionists meet in convention at Mexico to-day.

Threshing is done mostly by steam power in the eastern part of the county.

A new M. E. Church is in process of erection at the junction of the towns of Oswego, Hannibal and Granby.

W. C. Clark of Cleveland, was named for presidential elector by the anti-monopoly state convention at New York Saturday.

New Haven has been connected with Oswego by telephone and Fair Haven, Wayne county, is to be shortly.

Miss Edith Oats of Phoenix, on Wednesday last nailed 100 cigar boxes in eighteen minutes and thirty seconds. James Anderson or Phoenix has gone to Ireland and Scotland to introduce the machine.

Judge Avery of Phoenix is talked of as the Democratic candidate for district attorney.—[Oswego Palladium. We doubt very much if Judge Avery would accept the nomination.

E. G. Blackman was nominated at Central Square by the Republicans for School Commissioner in the 2d district. J. E. Clapp received 16 out of the thirty-five votes.

A South Scriba correspondent writes as follows: Some of the delegates who attended the school commissioners' convention yesterday are not pleased with the way Mr. Metcalf got his nomination, and do not feel obliged to support him. If the Democrats look well to nominate a good man for commissioner Mr. Metcalf will have to look for some other job.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

Phillips & Clark's stove foundry business, is to be moved from Troy to Geneva.

In Havana there were 18 deaths from yellow fever last week.

The State fair was commenced at Elmira yesterday and will continue one week.

Work is exceedingly dull in Hamilton, Ontario. All branches complain of the slackness.

It is estimated that there are about 20,000 strangers in Saratoga and that they disburse about $40,000 daily.

A Central engine ran off the track at Newark, Wayne county, Saturday, and John Casey of Rochester, the fireman was killed.

A boy named James R. White, fell from a cherry tree at Newburg the other day, and his head coming in contact with a stone, he was killed.

Potatoes are rotting so badly on Long Island that not half a crop is expected. The frequent rains and sudden warm weather is the supposed causes.

A singular and fatal disease, resembling blind staggers, has broken out among swine in the vicinity of Monticello, Sullivan county. Over 40 have been attacked.

The peppermint crop in Wayne county is slightly less than the average this year. All the distillers are now running and dealers are buying large quantities of the oil, for which there is an excellent demand in Europe.

A reduction of nine per cent. more has been made in the wages of the workers at the Wamsutta Mills, New Bedford, Mass.

Evan Evans, a photographer of Ithaca, was arrested in New York Thursday for being drunk, and was fined $10. He said he had been robbed of a diamond stud worth $150 and all his money.

As James L. Thornton was returning from Catskill the other day, having in his wagon, his wife, Mrs. Augustus McKenzie of Brooklyn, and the latter's two year old son, the wagon upset in a creek and the child was drowned.

The manufacturers of Rochester are to take action to prevent the canal authorities from taking more water from the Genesee river than the law allows. The business of many manufacturers is crippled through lack of water in the races.

John Stevens, aged 65, the millionaire president of the United New Jersey Railroad and Canal company, was found unconscious Thursday morning, in the apartments of a young dressmaker on Sixth avenue. The gas had been accidentally turned on. Stevens recussitated with difficulty. His family resides in Trenton.

A granger, named Clark, had the old acquaintance dodge played upon him at Syracuse Thursday. A third man came up while Clark and the old acquaintance were discussing family matters, and requested the loan of $1,500. He had a bill of double that amount to pay. No. 1 could not let him have the cash, but referred him to Clark who immediately went to the bank and drew out $1,500 and delivered it over to his new friend. The three parted to meet no more.

The town of Fonda, Montgomery county, was visited by a $40,000 fire last Friday. Only six weeks ago a considerable portion of the town was burned. The flames were first discovered issuing from the office of the Mohawk Valley Democrat. The fire is supposed to have been the work of an incendiary, but no motive can be imagined. The entire loss is estimated at $40,000 insurance $30,000.

Nearly all the business portion of Adams, Jefferson county was destroyed by fire last Thursday night. Adams college institute was burned. The total loss is estimated at $104,325. The Watertown fire department was called to their assistance. It is thought that the institute will be rebuilt.

Dr. Abram Babcock, of Syracuse, who [illegible]

[illegible] ed in that paper last Saturday which no doubt will be of interest to many of our readers:

In looking over the condition of the crops in Oswego county for the September report of the Agricultural bureau, certain towns in adjoining towns of Volney and Granby struck the writer as being worthy of special mention. East of Fulton, on the road from Volney Center to Phoenix, is a farm of 125 acres owned by L. B. Babcock. The soil is a rich black loam, easily tilled and peculiarly fitted for the cultivation of vegetables and small fruits. The farm is divided something as follows, with the year's products: 85 acres of grassland, furnishing pasturage for 22 cows and much young stock, and from the meadows cutting 75 tons of clover and timothy hay, all of which is fed out on the farm. The milk goes to a cheese factory near by, weighing at present from five to six hundred pounds each day, and amounting to some $85 per head or $525 in toto. In the spring $100 worth of fat calves were sold—and also from the factory comes much whey which helps to fat about two tons of pork, netting $275 more. Next is some 8 or 10 acres of tobacco, a large part of which is already cut, wilted and strung and placed where it will properly cure, remaining until December, when it will be stripped, packed, and sold to Baldwinsville dealers. The estimated weight is 5,000 pounds, which at 20 cents will amount to $1,000. His crop is one of the finest. Sufficient seed is being secured to plant 50 acres. Straw berries and raspberries have been a specialty. The early frost nearly destroyed both, his sales amounting to only some $600. He has two and one half acres of new plants set, looking remarkably thrifty; from 5 to 8 acres of cabbage, in number, 30,000, which at 3½ cents each will net over $1,000. A good number have already been sold at from 5 to 8 cents each. One and one-half acres of turnips, sown after the berries were gathered, one-half acre of beets, one-half acre of standard onions—a large bed of multiplyers already sold—cauliflower, radishes, an acre of celery, etc., all of which amount to at least $1,500. A large field of corn so stout and even will produce at least 100 bushels of ears to the acre; nearly two acres of potatoes, 23 varieties; seven acres of oats, two acres of wheat, eight acres of apple trees, with thousands of bushels in the present year, those which fall off being fed to the milch cows with good result. The finest varieties of stock are raised, as the large amounts received each year in premiums prove. The farm is run with but little outside help. Mr. Babcock is fortunate in having four sons who, when not at school, do men's work. The yearly income of the farm is between five and six thousand dollars. Mr. Babcock buys many hundred dollars worth of feed each year. Besides the large amount of first quality stable manure, he feeds his soil with plenty of Chittenden's fertilizers and high grade phosphates. "The secret of good farming," said he, "is in keeping the soil up; to restore each year those elements which a continued cropping would soon exhaust in the best land." From his garden 140 different varieties of roots and vegetables go forward the coming week to be exhibited at the State fair to be held at Elmira.

In Granby, but two miles from Fulton, west, is a farm of 211, overlooking that beautiful sheet of water, Lake Neahtawanta. The owner, H. H. Merriam, is President of the Oswego Falls Agricultural Society. He has some 40 acres in meadow and 75 acres in pasture; keeps 40 cows of the best Ayrshire grade. The milk goes to Bowen's Corner's cheese factory. When the feed was good in May and June he averaged 1,000 pounds of milk each day. The late protracted drouth has caused a shrinkage to six hundred pounds. The average income is $40 per head, or $1,600. Mr. Merriam ploughs about 50 acres and crops as follows: ten acres of wheat, twelve of corn, eight of barley, fifteen of oats, and ten of potatoes. The latter will yield 125 bushels per acre, much above the average for this year of drouth. He has three acres of cabbage—some 15,000—which will bring from 3 to 4 cents each. His oats are fine, yielding some 50 bushels to the acre. Barley, 40. Corn about 100. He feeds considerable of the best breeds of swine, his last 12 weighing 400 pounds each, selling at 7 cents. He likes starch feed to help fatten his pork, and has proved its utility. He also believes in feeding his soil, and uses phosphates together with stable manure; keeps two double teams and one single horse at work; hires one man by the year and one by day's work, paying $26 per month and $1.25 per day, and they board themselves. He believes the latter the better way, so as not, he said to "kill off his wife," and hopes others will do as he does. His farm lies rolling, is of sandy loam, easily tilled, has fine running water and some ten acres of young wood land. His home is a new and elegant farm house built at a cost of some $3,000, with a neat and commodious carriage house costing $1,500 more. The green lawn and shady walks are a delightful adjunct to the farm house.

A third farm just across the river from Fulton is what has long been known as the Schenck farm of some 125 acres, and is best adapted to grazing. Mr. Fred Schenck runs a creamery selling all his butter to one firm in Syracuse. A look through his rooms reveals the secret of making nice butter. He is very sure nothing can compare with the sour cream process. The butter is packed in small jars kept in an iced cellar and put down in the store in Syracuse in an hour and twenty minutes from the time of leaving the cellar. The farm is well stocked with grade Ayrshires, and the sleek looking yearlings and well fed calves give promise that the milch cows will never grow less. We were shown a lot of [illegible]

[illegible] this malady [illegible] pains about the [illegible] sometimes [illegible] and sleepy. The mouth has a bad taste, especially in the morning. A strange sticky slime collects about the teeth. The appetite is poor. There is a feeling like a heavy load upon the stomach; sometimes a faint all gone sensation is felt at the pit of the stomach, which food does not satisfy. The eyes grow sunken, the hands and feet feel clammy at one time and burn intensely at others. After a while a cough sets in, at first dry, but after a few months it is attended with a greyish colored expectoration. The afflicted one feels tired all the while, and sleep does not seem to afford any rest. He becomes nervous, irritable, and gloomy, and has evil forbodings. There is a giddiness, a peculiar whirling sensation in the head when rising up suddenly. The bowels become costive, and then, again, outflux intensely; the skin is dry and hot at times; the blood grows thick and stagnant; the whites of the eyes become tinged with yellow; the urine is scanty and high colored, depositing a sediment after standing. There is frequently a spitting up of the food, sometimes with a sour taste, and sometimes with a sweetish taste; this is often attended with palpitation of the heart. The vision becomes impaired, with spots before the eyes; there is a feeling of prostration and great weakness. Most of these symptoms are in turn present. It is thought that nearly one-third of our population have this disorder in some of its varied forms, while medical men have almost wholly mistaken its nature. Some have treated it for one complaint; some for another, but nearly all have failed to reach the seat of the disorder. Indeed, many physicians ase afflicted with it themselves. The experience of Dr. A. G. Richards, residing at No. 468 Tremont street, Boston, is thus described by himself: "I had all those peculiar and painful symptoms which I found afflicting so many of my patients, and which had so often baffled me. I knew all the commonly established remedies would be unavailing for I had tried them often in the past. I therefore determined to strike out in a new path. To my intense satisfaction I found that I was improving. The dull, stupid feeling departed and I began to enjoy life once more. My appetite returned My sleep was refreshing. The color of my face which had been a sickly yellow gradually assumed the pink tinge of health. In the course of three weeks I felt like a new man and know that it was entirely owing to the wonderful efficiency of Warner's Tippecanoe The Best, which was all the medicine I took."

Doctors and scientists often exhaust their skill and patent ideas. They try everything that has been used by, or is known to, the profession, and then fail. Even if they save the life it is often after great and prolonged agony. Where all this can be avoided by pre caution and care, how insane a thing it is to endure such suffering! With a pure and palatable preparation within reach, to neglect its use is simply inexcusable.

Obituary.

Mrs. Sophia Bennett died of consumption, at her home onl Sixth street ast Thursday evening, aged 76 years. The funeral occurred on Sunday at three o'clock from the M. E. church. Rev. Mr. Markham spoke words of comfort from the text "Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord." The last six years of her life were full of suffering but she trusted in the Saviour and never a murmuring word escaped her lips. Grace triumphed. She said again and again, "I am ready to go," and repeated over and over, the doxology "Praise God from whom all blessings flow." She passed away as quietly and calmly as the day passes away with out a struggle or groan.

So sinks the gale when storms are o'er
So gently shuts the eye of day
So dies a wave along the shore."

DO NOT BE DISCOURAGED

even if you have tried many remedies for your Kidney disease or Liver complaint without success it is no reason why you should think your disorder incurable. Bread without Yeast.

It is a well known fact that bread made with yeast, if eaten before it becomes stale, ferments again in the stomach producing indigestion and and numerous other complaints. Bread raised with Royal Baking Powder, instead of yeast, is entirely without this defect; but on the contrary, is one of the most effectual preventives of indigestion or dyspepsia. By the use of the Royal Baking Powder the saccharine properties of the flour, which are destroyed by fermentation with yeast, are preserved and the bread is made more nutritious. Ten per cent more bread is baked—because saving—from the same quantity of flour,

The Royal Baking Powder will also make sweet, white bread from an inferior quality of flour, a property possessed by no other leaving agent. Thus, much flour that is dark in color, or from other cause is considered below the finer grades, and therefore much cheaper, can be utilized and turned into a perfectly sweet and wholesome bread. Nor can bitter bread ever result from the use of too much, or more than the required quantity, of Royal Baking Powder; as, whether used in small or large quantities, its proportions are in such exact equivalents that they always neutralize each other. Bread made in this way does not require mixing over night, but may be prepaired ready for the oven in a few minutes; an advantage that will be readily appreciated by every house-keeper.

Gilbert was a fine selection and well adapted to his rich bass voice. A generous call was made and he sang "Good Night" doing himself great credit and he retired amid abundant applause. Next on the program was a recitation by Anna Randall Diehl, who entertained the large audience most delightfully with her readings and impersonations. It must have been gratifying to her to know that she was remembered at her "old camping ground" as she styled it,—for it was here where she first received public approval. The power she posses over her voice, her clearness of enunciation, her complete control over the feelings of her audience holding them in fixed attention, or convulsing them with laughter, sufficiently attests her elocutionary skill, and natural aptitude for her profession. The feature of the evening, and which proved a decided success was the rendering of the soprano solo "Polonoise from Mignon" by Miss Mills. All agreed it was most exquisitely performed, and she increased her reputation as a singer and showed power and skill in execution. This difficult piece called forth her great power of voice which seems thoroughly cultivated, and subjected to the most perfect control. Her pure style, free from affectation, and her excellent method made her singing most acceptable. The tenor solo by Mr. H. C. Wright was a triumph for that gentleman and won for him in Fulton fresh laurels. He received a hearty encore to which he responded.

Part second opened with a most delightful piano solo, Lullaby of the Fountain," which was loudly applauded, but did not respond. The duo by Miss Mills and Mrs. J. T. Pratt was one of the gems of the evening. Mrs. Pratt has a voice of wonderful sweetness and purity of tone, full, round, mellow, and which delights the listener. The closing piece, "Good Night," in which the alto, baratone, and brilliant soprano was conspicuous was simply grand. The accompanist is entitled to special commendation for the accurate yet delicate manner he did his part. The concert was a most thoroughly agreeable one from beginning to end and well deserved the warm reception it received.

"Clear Off."

A correspondent of the Jordan Times says this about our village: "Now there is Baldwinsville. Ten years ago it didn't amount to any more than Jordan, Weedsport, Fayetteville, Fulton and other like go-as-you-please towns. Now it shows those slow poke towns a clean pair of heels. Its merchants are kept busy, its manufactories and institutions are apace with the times, its back streets are growing up from obscurity to activity, its business portion is being added to and enlarged. Enterprise, backed by wealth, is pushing the town high up toward a city charter. What does it? Tobacco is the stuff."—[Baldwinsville Gazette.

If this all wise correspondent will visit Fulton (and by the way we doubt if he ever has) we can prove to him that Fulton is neither a "slow poke" or a "go-as-you-please" town. On the other hand it is one of the most wide awake and enterprising villages in central New York, and has better manufacturing facilities than any of the above named places. In fact its water power is second to none in the State. The mammoth Oswego Falls manufacturing establishment located opposite Fulton in the rapidly growing village of Oswego Falls, alone gives employment to at least one thousand people, and Fulton is a large receiver of the vast sums of money paid out by this company for help. It is to be hoped that some day the two villages will be one. This is but one instance of the many enterprising establishments in our midst. Saying nothing about the other towns mentioned we are convinced that Baldwinsville is a handsome, thriving village of promise, due mostly to its being centrally located in a tobacco country. But when this sycophantic correspondent compares Baldwinsville with Fulton as regards its amount of business and asserts that Fulton is dead, we can say to him that he is "clear off."

Mr. Comstock's Denial.

The Utica Herald's Ilion correspondent says this about Fulton's great traveler: Henry Comstock, the foreign agent of E. Remington & Son, has just returned to Ilion on a visit to his principals, to to confer with them with reference to certain matters connected with the manufacture of arms and ammunition for China. Mr. Comstock denies having been interviewed at San Francisco by a reporter of the San Francisco Chronicle, which represents him as saying that he had secured a certain large order for his firm. It is understood that Mr. Comstock has brought with him orders for quite a large amount of arms and cartridges. The amount is not definitely ascertainable, as some portions are contingent upon the success of further negotiations. The orders, however, that Mr. Comstock has secured will infuse a considerable amount of energy into the works at Ilion, and cause considerable revival of business there for some time to come.

An impression prevails, in some quarters, that the state has made provision for refunding money paid by men who furnished substitutes in the late civil war, and many letters are received by the several state departments making inquiries as to the time they will receive their money. There is no statute in this state authorizing such payment.

An exchange says: Between roller-skating and bicycle riding, the young generation is securing such a development of muscle that society will be in danger if the coming man should prove a kicker. It is already predicted that in fifty years there will be only one step where there are two in the flight of stairs of to-day, that the damsel will prefer to stand in the horse car, that the small boy will go on an errand and get back the same day, and that the dude's pantaloons will hopelessly outrival a pair of compasses.

A telegram received here Monday announced the sudden death of John A. Livingston of New York, who was many years ago a Fulton business man, but of late a sugar refiner at the above named city. He died in a fit at Waterville, N. Y. The deceased was a brother of the late Dr. Livingston of this place whose widow, accompanied by her son, and her daughter, Mrs. Frank Platt of New York, were sojourning at the Thousand Islands when the news was received here and were at once notified of his death. He was about 65 years of age.

Financial Troubles.

Much surprise was maifested last Saturday at the announcement of the failure of Supervisor Thomas R. Wright of Granby, who has for many years been an extensive lumber dealer as well as being interested in milling and other profitable investments. The liabilities are about $40,000. G. M. Case, president of the Citizens National bank, has the business in his hands, the bank having a claim of $15,000. The First National bank also puts in a claim of $6,500 and Orlando Howell of Oswego Falls for $3,000. It is understood that the Citizens bank's claim has been disposed of to the First National bank at fifty cents on the dollar. The milling firm of Perine & Wright was dissolved a few days since by the retirement of Mr. Wright, his interest going into the possesion of J. R. Smith. The firm will not be affected by the failure nor his son, J. J. Wright, hardware merchant. The cause of the failure is assigned to depression in real estate. Mr. Wright has the sympathy of the community with his troubles. He will no doubt continue his business.

[illegible] not [illegible] one who could live so long after the accident, retaining as he did to perfect consciousness.

First: That he fell on his head is evident, from the bruises on the head, the entire absence of knowledge as to how he fell or that he had fallen at all, and the fracture of the upper bone of the neck which being a ring was divided in four separate peices. There was also a partial dislocation of the neck between the second and third bones. The paralysis was due to the injury to the spinal cord at these two points particularly at the point of fracture, which injury as far as action through the cord was concerned caused complete paralysis, and were it not for the cranial nerves that have their origin in the brain and control the action of the lungs and heart no doubt death would have been instantaneous.

The most important of these cranial nerves is the pneumogastric, which has its origin near the fourth ventrical of the brain and emerges from the cranium at a distance from the spinal cord and therefore escaped injury. It passes down the neck and chest to the upper part of the abdomen and has a more extensive distribution than any of the other cranial nerves. It is composed of both motor and sensitive filaments. It supplies the organs of voice and respiration with motion and sensation; also the pharynx, œsophagus, heart and lungs with motor influence, by which the breathing which was mostly voluntary and labored was kept up for twenty-four days and five hours. With the five phsicians present at the post-mortem examination there was not the least difference of opinion as to the accident, the cause of paralysis or the principles of treatment.

Letters from "Fresh Air Children."

Mrs. E. French of this village received the following letters from the little "fresh air" girls she entertained for two weeks which have handed in for publication:

New York August 15 '84

Dear Miss French—I arrived in New York saftly and my mother was very glad to see me and I am getting along very well and all my family is very thankful to you and I would like to know how you's are getting along I send my best love to all my friends

Aug. 14th 1884

Dear Mis French—I had a pleasant journey and arrived safe at home the reason why my letter was not answered was because my sister was sick but she is getting better now. My mother is very much obliged for all the nice things you gave me and for all the favors you done for me, I am always crying and only wish I could see your, May, and all the Fulton folks again I am always thinking what a pleasant time I had I shall never forget you and your daughter. I am very sorry I could not kiss you before I went away because I was in a hurry. It is very hot here and I only wish I was in Fulton. This is all I have to say at the presant. I send my best regards to you and May and all the rest.

The Fair.

The Oswego Falls fair this year promises to be the best the society has ever yet brought about. Many beneficial improvements have been made upon the buildings and the grounds are in excellent condition. The most noticeable improvement is the new and commodious dining hall where refreshments will be served and which is in charge of the Oswego City hospital managers, the profits to go to that institution. The fact that this is a prosperous crop year will make the exhibits more numerous and attractive. The grounds alone are a picture of beauty, situated as they are on that delightful sheet of water,—Lake Como. The amusements too, are various and interesting. Most of the things needed for the balloon ascension which will be made by Carlotta, on the 25th, the last day, are already here. No liquor will be sold on the grounds. If the weather proves fine we predict for the society a large and profitable fair.

THE SUN.

NEW YORK, 1884.

About sixty million copies of THE SUN have gone out of our establishment the past twelve months.

If you were to paste end to end all the columns of The Sun printed and sold last year you would get a continuous strip of interesting information, common sense wisdom, sound doctrine, and sane wit long enough to reach from Printing House Square to the top of Mount Copernicus in the Moon then back to Printing House Square, and then, three-quarters of the way back to the Moon again.

But The Sun is written for the inhabitants of this earth; this same strip of intelligence would girdle the globe twenty-seven or twenty-eight times.

If every buyer of a copy of The Sun during the past year has spent only one hour over it, and if his wife or grandfather has spent another hour this newspaper in 1883 has afforded the human race thirteen thousand years of steady reading, night and day.

It is only by little calculations like these that you can form any idea of the circulation of the most popular of American newspapers, or of its influence on the opinions and actions of American men and women.

The Sun is and will continue to be, a newspaper which tells the truth without fear of consequences, which gets at the facts no matter how much the process costs, which presents the news of all the world without waste of words and in the most readable shape, which is working with all its heart for the cause of honest government, and which therefore believes that the Republican party must go in the coming year of our Lord, 1884.

If you know The Sun, you like it already, and you will read it with accustomed diligence and profit during what is sure to be the most interesting year in its history. If you do not yet know the Sun it is high time to get into the sunshine.

THE WORLD CHALLENGED

This liniment has been manufactured and used for twenty-five years and our innumerable certificates of cure prove it to be an unequalled success. We do not offer it as an internal remedy, positively asserting that any liniment that can be taken into the stomach without injury can have little efficacy as a specific when externally applied. This being compounded of Oils, is readily absorbed into the system, giving prompt relief even in cases of acute pain caused by Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Sciatica, Lumbago, Sprains, Bruises, Chilblains, or from any cause where a liniment is demanded. The oils are so penetrating that a thorough use of the Liniment will remove all stiffness of joints, lameness of muscles, or pain arising from inflammation or any cause. Even in chronic Spinal Disease, and Paralysis, frequent use of Oil Liniment will effect many cures. Finally for pain in any part of the body, use freely, with rubbing and warmth and we guarantee relief. You will find a trial of it the best certificate of its value. It is the only liniment made entirely of Oils, and we challenge the world for its equal. Price 25 and 50 cents per bottle, Sold by dealers.

COOK ACADEMY
Havana, N. Y.
[illegible]

[illegible]

Red [illegible] goes out of fashion.

Yellow flowers are very fashionable.

Felt will be revived for fall hats and bonnets.

Sleeves are to be worn lower on the shoulders.

Iron-rust browns are the rivals of gray and mushroom.

Round waists are to be worn again, with or without a belt.

The tendency is toward straighter draperies for winter costumes.

Fancy feathers will be more worn than ostrich tips on the first fall hats.

Woolen stuff will be used in preference to those of silk for street costumes.

A new shade of gray-blue is called Gordon blue, after the English hero.

When another material is used with wool goods, velvet should always be chosen.

Cockades of owl feathers sprinkled with gold dust appear among fall millinery goods.

Draperies for the front may be very long or very short, but are not stylish if of medium length.

Very large figures will be used for cloakings, consisting of detached flowers palms, rings etc.

Brown and pale pink is the favorite combination for millinery and accessories of the toilet at the moment.

Fur or feather borders mixed with lace will trim the velvet wraps that will be the dressy mantles next winter.

Plaids of subdued colors in new combinations are shown in twilled and ottoman wools for children's and misses' dresses.

For simple wear, nothing is prettier than the dotted Swiss muslin, covered over with large blush rose having simply a stem.

Repped woolens rival those with twilled ground. Stripes are very largely imported both in lengthwise stripes and also in crossbands and known as bayadere stripes.

Astrakhan cloth is to be used for the trimming of cloth dresses. It is put on as a border from six to ten inches deep at the foot of the skirt and on the jacket.

Extremely delicate evening toilets are seen at the seaside, composed of soft, fine striped nuns' veiling of tinted white, with draperies of silk to correspond, with quantities of lace.

Dark blue and red calicoes, with large anchors, bars of music and cards and dominoes, printed in white, black and colors, are the fanciful wear at seaside and watering places this fall.

To make dresses sufficiently bouffant bustles will remain rather large, and the old time bow drapery—a width of the material tied in two broad loops and two ends—will also be in use.

The sashes worn with autumn dresses by young girls at watering places are very broad, made of silk or surah, not ribbon, and arranged in pleats which pass around the waist, tying on one side, with the ends falling the full width almost to the bottom of the skirt. Red surah is the favorite stuff for these sashes.

FARM GOSSIP.

As melons approach maturity, turn to secure even ripening.

Late cabbage and cauliflowers need to be kept free from weeds.

Beets, carrots and other roots should be hoed until the tops prevent.

Keep strawberry beds free from weeds. Plant new beds with plants rooted in pots.

The hotter and dryer the weather, the faster the "pussley" grows. Hoe up and feed it to the pigs.

Young trees may have their shape controlled by pinching the ends of shoots that grow too vigorously.

The apple worm may be diminished by picking up and destroying fallen fruit or allowing the pigs to do it.

Onions are known to be ripe when a large share of the tops fall over. Pull, dry thoroughly, cut off the tops, and sell, or store in a dry, cool place, spreading thinly.

To procure a good coat on your horse use plenty of rubbing and brushing. Plenty of "elbow grease" opens the pores, softens the skin, and promotes the animal's general health.

Five hundred cubic feet of timothy hay a year in mow or stack, or 700 cubic feet newly stacked, make a ton; 900 cubic feet of clover, new, or 700 cubic feet stacked some time, weigh a ton.

Mr. Stewart, a member of Warsaw, Illinois, horticultural society, is said to have raised an annual crop of apples for fifteen consecutive years, a pleasing fact due in some measure, he thinks, to his management. He cultivates so as to make the tree grow as rapidly as possible until the bearing age. After which he cultivates but little, but keeps the sod down by mulching.

Sheep are the best stock to feed in an orchard. The most approved rule is to put in more sheep than the grass will keep, and supplement the feed by rations of grain. To prevent sheep from gnawing the bark of trees wash the latter with a mixture of carbolic soap in water together with the sheep droppings. This applied once a week as high up on the trees as the sheep will reach is effectual.

The old Holmes house in Cambridge, Mass., in which Dr. Oliver Wendell Holmes was born, has been practically demolished, the L which was of modern construction, having alone been removed to another lot. The house was sold to Harvard College about a dozen years ago, and has since then been occupied by Prof. William Everett and Prof. Thayer. In pulling it down a copper coin of 1741 was found under one of the floors. The cornices, mantles, doors, door knobs and hinges have been sold as relics.

I felt so sleepy and miserable that I knew my system needed renovating and toning up. I took a great deal of medicine in two weeks, to hit this billiousness. The fine rash remained however. I was all broken out. One day, over at the shipyard, one of the sailors began talking to me about what was used a great deal on shipboard by the lake sailors for bilious disorders. 'Try Dr. Kennedy's FAVORITE REMEDY,' he said 'we got it at the drug store down at the foot of Main street.' I went and got a bottle, and it is the best medicine I ever took for cleansing my blood. WORCESTER, Mass., March 23d 1884.

Dr. David Kennedy, Rondout, N. Y.:

DEAR SIR: My son, a lad of fifteen, editor of the "Go-Ahead," amateur journal of this city, has been at different times most severely and apparently hopelessly, afflicted with Salt Rheum. When a very small child his body was almost entirely covered with this loathsome eruption. It mostly passed away, however, after the teething period, and he was not seriously troubled with it again until about one year ago, when the salt rheum first appeared on his hands between the fingers, then on his limbs, then on his face and head in one solid mass. His condition was terrible. The rash resembled ivy poisoning. We at first fancied it might be something not so bad as his old troubles, but the physicians pronounced it salt rheum and made every effort without avail to cure it. We tried a preparation widely advertised as a specific for skin diseases, but it made about as much of an impression as so much cold water might have done. You can understand the situation when I say we were in despair of obtaining real help from any source.

At this point, through the advice of Mr. J. W. Bacon, whose daughter had been cured by it, I tried KENNEDY'S FAVORITE REMEDY. This was the right and only thing at last! The skin began to heal at once, and to-day the evidences of the disease have wholly disappeared. How thankful we are Leat Doctor, I leave you to imagine.

Yours,

The experience of years, and the testimony of thousands demonstrate DR. DAVID KENNEDY'S FAVORITE REMEDY to be the most successful medicine for organic and blood diseases ever discovered. Prepared solely by Dr. David Kennedy, Physician and Surgeon, Roundout, N. Y.

ESQUILLIOUS ROOTS' DREAM.

A Commonplace Story of Real Life.

(Written for THE TIMES.)

BY THE WANDERING JEW.

The boyhood days of Esquillious Roots were passed in a small village called Drigton, in Western New York.

He grew up with his mates in the ordinary boyish manner, enjoying the sports and sharing the sorrows of his comrades. And until he passed his sixteenth birthday he had no other desire, or ambitions, except to live and have fun.

But one morning when he awoke and looked at the world with his sixteen year old eyes, he concluded that there was something else, beside pleasure, to seek for in this life. "What shall I do for my life work?"

This question came up to him at all times, and he began to think out an answer. That day he happened to be reading a bad Chicago Journal, and that paper told about a young man who had a cash capital of seventy-five cents which he invested in a drug store.

He put up six prescriptions and then sold the store. With his earnings he bought a gun, a dog, and a steam yacht, and then went to Europe, where he lived to a good old age. "I'll be a druggist," says Roots, and straightway he went and hired himself to Dr. Syrupus, at the brain turning wages of two dollars a week.

Long and late did Esquillious work for the doctor, and at the end of four years he went to a pharmaceutical college in a distant city, where he graduated with honors,

He tacked the usual Ph. G. to his name, and settled down to his life's work as head clerk of a city pharmacy. Contact with the cold, cold world had dissolved the dreams of his youth, and a little broken love affair had made him sour. Of course he was used to the many vexations, incidental to the city drug trade, and had grown to overlook them in most customers.

He did not have much time to himself and therefore did not have many pleasures.

He often thought of getting a store of his own, but that thought never grew any larger, and, its needless to say, was never realized.

At the time I write, twenty years had past him by, but he looked many years older.

One Saturday night after "the old man" and the clerks had gone home, Roots began to close the store. He locked the doors, drew the curtains, put out the front lights, shut off the soda water, and then sat down in his easy chair to enjoy his Savannah cigar.

The clock struck eleven when Equillious thought best to retire. He set the little skeleton framed cot back of the prescription counter, pulled out the unaired bed clothes and soon had the cot ready to receive his tired body.

In the dim light he undressed, turned [illegible] gas still lower, and —— did he [illegible] down on his knees and pray? Let [illegible] be charitable enough to believe that [illegible] did anyway. Everything is quiet in [illegible] drug store. The morpine bottle is [illegible]lking to the Quinine, and trying to [illegible]hange places, in order to get Roots in [illegible]ouble. The Spiritus Fumenti is wooing his weaker neighbor, the angelica wine. The drug scales, lie in weight for the unwary, and the soda syrups are [illegible] for to-morrow's battle. The [illegible] of the drugs are all wrapped up in themselves and say nothing. All this is [illegible] quietly and will not disturb the [illegible]. Esquillious sleeps!

[illegible] sleep is sound; and his dreams are [illegible] pleasant, for a smile is on his [illegible] and he seems to be in another world. [illegible] is the case; He is walking with [illegible]rpheus through dream land. They [illegible] in a populous town, and the god of [illegible] goes on to make other mortals [illegible]. Esquillious walks through clean, [illegible] streets, past fine houses, and wanders into the business places. [illegible] he looks for the drug stores, [illegible] with his own name on the [illegible] and over the doors

[illegible] ROOTS' PHARMACY.

[illegible] his eyes; but, no, the place [illegible] and so he entered in and [illegible]. Everything is just as [illegible] [illegible] druggist, but Roots noticed that they kept on the right side of the counter and did not help themselves to cigars. Neither did they tap the soda fountain, nor "knock down" the vine gallice. Not one asked to have his bill charged, and on leaving, each asked Roots out to dinner. "Strange!" said Esquillious to himself, "This world is not half so bad as I thought." And then he looked at some prescriptions the doctors left and he began to ponder again. They looked like copper plate engravings. "These doctors must be very fresh," was his next remark.

While he was thinking of the doctors, a vision in pink flutters in at the door, and our friend recognizes her as the millionaire daughter living on Bullion street. She makes a petty purchase, and as she receives her change, ventures to smile on Roots. He rubs his eyes again as she goes out of the door, and pinches himself to see if he's still there.

"Here comes a tartar, I'm sure," and in sails the tartar in the shape of a typical old lady. But, no; he was mistaken, She put down her bundles, and buying a good bill of drugs goes out without contending a price.

A bluff farmer came in, and Roots remarked afterwards, that he did not say that, "The drug business was the best paying business in the world," nor that, "everything is all profit with you."

Not one of the many customers asked for a postage stamp, and so of course Esquillious did not have to change a five dollar bill to get his pay for the same; nor did he have to lick any stamps, and then post the letters. None of that in his new store. All the drummers that came in, were quiet, gentlemanly fellows, and took his orders without a question. Roots missed the usual freshness of the ordinary drummer and wondered why.

He looked ten years younger, and said he was willing to kill the man that wrote: "This world is but a fleeting show, to man's delusion given;" and while getting up to the killing point, the millionaire's daughter came in the store again, smiled and said————Ding, along! Ding, along! ding! ding! Esquillious jumped four feet from the cot, and landed directly under the vibrating night bell.

In the dim light the clock hands pointed to the first hour of the new day. Roots rubbed the sand out of his sleepy eyes, drew on his clothes and opened the front door.

"Shay misther! I wants a chew schent stamp, hic! My wifes gie me dish letter to mail and I fergot it. Wash ish dat? Ain't got one! Pretty drug store dish ish. Send me trade down ter Mr. Killemquick, and ter teach yer a leshion, I'se a good mind (hic) ter punsh yer head."

But Roots slammed the door shut, and locking it went back to bed to dream that he was employed by the ruler of Hades, to mix refrigerant drinks for the unhappy souls in that unhappy region.

H. C. Geisler guarantees positive relief from any cough, cold, croup, or lung complaint by using Acker's English remedy, or will refund the money.

Jeff Davis' Poverty.

The current impression that Jeff Davis is in affluent circumstances is contradicted by a Georgia newspaper, which publishes a letter from a lady who has just visited the ex-Confederate president, in which she reports that he is very poor. The plantation which Davis received as a legacy from a female sympathizer, is covered with water at the present time, and is not very richly covered with crops at any time. Davis has been disappointed also in the returns from his book, "The Rise and Fall of the Confederate States," which has never been in demand since the first feeling of curiosity was satisfied. A popular subscription in the South is suggested, of such proportions as will enable Davis to spend his remaining days in pecuniary comfort.—[Chicago Tribune.

A Young Man's Platform.

"Well, Brown, old man, what is your platform for this campaign?" asked a young man about town of a convival acquaintance.

"I don't know, my boy, but I guess it will be reform. I struck father to-day for a ten and he shut down on me. He said it would be a tariff for clothes and shoes only this year. I guess I'll have to bolt, if I want to settle my bills."

Where They Go.

"What becomes of men who steal?" asked the Sunday school teacher of a sharp little boy.

"They go to Canada."

"No, little boy, that is not the right answer. They ultimately go to the wicked place."

"Oh, yes; you mean Chicago."

TWENTY-FIVE PER CENT. STRONGER THAN ANY OTHER BUTTER COLOR.

Burlington, Vt., May 3d, 1882.

I hereby certify that I have examined the Butter Color prepared by Wells, Richardson & Co., and that the same is free from alkali or any other substance injurious to health; that I have compared it with some of the best of butter colors in the market and find it to be more than twenty-five per cent. stronger than the best of others. I am satisfied that it is not liable to become rancid, or in any way to injure the butter. I have examined it after two months free exposure to the air in a place liable to large changes of temperature, and found no trace of rancidity, while other kinds similarly exposed became rancid.

This is to certify that I am an engineer by trade, and for the last five years have been troubled more or less with rheumatism, and for the last five weeks before this dade I have been unable to work, and when I commenced using the Rheumatic Syrup I could hardly leave my chair. After using one-half a bottle of the Syrup, I began to grow better, and am now at work again as usual, having been cured with three bottles. I should advise any one troubled with Rheumatism to use Rheumatic Syrup. Enough cannot be said in its praise.

DON'T LOOK LIKE A WRECK.

"When a man is going down hill everybody is ready to give him a kick." Yes, that is so. It is sad, but natural. Why, many a man and woman, seeking employment, would have got it if their hair hadnt been so thin and gray. One bottle of Parkers Hair Balsam is then the best investment. It stops falling hair, promotes new growth and restores color. Clean, highly perfumed, not a dye. A great improvement over any similar preparation, and sold at the low price of 50c. 14t4

MARY ANDERSON is in London.

CHAUNCEY M. DEPEW has returned from Europe.

THE Democrats are rejoicing over the Vermont election.

EX-GOVERNOR ST. JOHN will address the Prohibitionists of Utica next month.

SAMUEL J. RANDELL was renominated for Congress last Thursday for the twelfth time.

CINCINNATI was visited by a destructive fire Sunday night. The losses are several millions of dollars.

THE Prohibitionists of Massachusetts claim that they hold the balance of power in 20 legislative districts.

JOHN TEEMER, through the London Sportsman, issues a challenge to Hanlan or Beach to row for $2,500 a side.

GOV. CLEVELAND visited the State fair at Elmira Monday and from there he went to Geneva to attend the funeral of Secretary Folger.

IT is highly probable that Congressman Nutting will be defeated at the Weedsport convention to-day. Payne has a majority of the delegates.

WE announce in our columns the suicide of Cashier Hill of the National bank of New Brunswich. Since our writing the President, Mahlon Runyon, has also committed suicide. The affair is shocking and the town is under great excitement. Runyon's deficency will not exceed $50,000.

SIXTY-four persons suspected of plotting against the Czar have been arrested at Warsaw. The police have ordered all warehouses, shops and taverns closed at nine each night during the Czar's visit. Each police agent is charged to watch five houses. Emperors William and Joseph will be the Czar's guests during the visit. Cossacks have been sent to guard both sides of the Warsaw and Vienna raitway.

ANOTHER bank defaulter. This time it proves to be Charles A. Hill, cashier of the First National Bank of New Brunswick, who prefers death rather than disgrace. Hill was found dead in his room Thursday morning by his servant. It was suspected at once that there was something wrong at the bank and an examination was at once commenced, which resulted in the discovery of a deficiency of at least $235,930. Hill held the office of county clerk.

THE Maine election was held Monday. It was a complete Republican victory. Robie was elected Governor by 17,000 plurality in a total vote of about 140,000. Maine is not a Republican State like Vermont. Four years ago it went point blank against Garfield in September. This is certainly favorable for Blaine and is a good estimate of his strengch. The prohibition amendment to the constitution of Maine was adopted and received general support from both Republicans and Democrats.

IT is probable that President Arthur will appoint in the place of the late Secretary Folger either First Asst. Secretary French who is now returning from Europe or Second Asst. Secretary Coon who is now acting. Mr. French is not a favorite at the White House. The law makes no distinction between the two Secretaries. A member of the cabinet may also by assigned to the department if the President is so disposed. If First Assistant Post Master Hatten fills the vacancy at Judge Greshan's retirement, and no other changes are made President Arthur's adminstration will end like that of James Buchanan, with two places in the Cabinet filled by head clerks of the respective departments.

THE death of Secretary Charles J. Folger is announced. He died at his home at Geneva, at 4:55 o'clock Thursday afternoon. Although everybody at his home knew of his seriousness illness his death was a great shock to the whole community and in fact the country. Mr. Folger's health has been poor for some time. His close application to his duties at Washington have had much to do in shortening his life, while his great defeat when running for Governor was a severe blow to his sensibilities. Geneva has been the home of Mr. Folger since he was twelve years of age and he has been the pride of Ontario county. Mr. Folger was universally respected and his death will be mourned by many. His two daughters were in the Adirondacks and his son was at Alexandria, Va., at the time of his death. Flags were at half mast all over the country. The funeral was held yesterday at 2 p. m., and was largely attended. President Arthur and his cabinet attended the funeral. The Rochester Democrat says: With his death is closed a career which was most honorable, and a life which has been most useful to his fellow men. Across the brightness of his fame there falls no shadow which he cast, and his manly virtues are clouded by no suspicion of wrong doing. Charles J. Folger came of the best New England stock. The ancestor of the Folger family was among the first colonists who settled on Nantucket island, to conquer the [illegible] by the arts of peace and to make [illegible] of the branch of the [illegible]

We are ready to bet that St. John will get more votes in this State than Blaine. Sealed proposals will be received from Blaine betting men for the next sixty days.—Cato Graphic.

A person who went a short distance in the country west of the city, last evening, reports that the farmers have been obliged to prop up their pear trees to keep them from breaking down. Such reports speak well of Oswego county.—Palladium.

The Volney correspondent of the Oswego Times says: Mr. Leander Beols and another gentlemen of Palermo went to Fulton Wednesday and on their return halted at the well at Volney Center to water their horse. They took the bits out of their horse's mouth to give a better chance to drink. The horse imminately started and ran north. A man working near the road went to stop it, when it turned into Mr. Wetherell's buckwheat and field of cabbage. Taking a circle it came back into the road, crossing a deep ditch twice, and near the place of starting four men succeeded in turning it up to the fence and securing it all right without any damage to the horse or buggy.

Mrs. A. J. Phillips of Fair Haven was found in her orchard on Saturday morning strangled with a rope. She had been ill for several weeks and had been living with her daughter, Mrs. N. W. Dean, until Friday night, when she returned to her home. Her husband who is also in poor health, is nearly insane from the shock. Her son, who had come from the west on a visit, found his mother dead when he arrived at the house.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

At Milford, Otsego county, Saturday, Thos. Byard, in a fit of despondency, caused by liquor, set fire to the homestead he had recently been compelled to sell and then drowned himself. The fire was quickly subdued.

The talk about a narrow gauge railroad to South Bay has not subsided, says the Syracuse Herald, and operations are being carried on in a quiet way that many predict will result in the construction of the road. A prominent business man and capitalist has been at work within a few days, with others, getting subscriptions for the purpose of making a survey.

In New York Sunday the heat was intense. There were 153 deaths during the day, most of which resulted from the heat.

AN independent German club, 3,000 strong organized at Cleveland, Ohio, last Saturday evening declared for Cleveland and Hendricks.

THE PEOPLE OF THE STATE OF NEW YORK, to Deborah Miller, of Warren, Pa., Angeline Seeley, of Fulton, N. Y., William Bennett, whose place of residence is unknown, Franklin Weller, of Morrisville, N. Y., Alice Parks, of Oneida, N. Y., Carrie Weller, Jay Weller and Irving Weller of Volney, Oswego county, N. Y. And all the heirs and next of kin of Sophia Bennett, late of the village of Fulton, in the county of Oswego, deceased, Send Greeting:

Whereas, Mary E. Wells of the village of Fulton, in the county of Oswego, has lately made application to [illegible]

[illegible] notified [illegible] buried it Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. H. T. Hubbard of Fulton spent Sunday with friends here.

Mr. Julien Benoit expects to put up an American evaporator this week which with his store will make quite a business and a market for apples which are plenty.

It is alleged that not long ago not many miles from here some of the boys thought they would try how much regard some of the neighbors had for tramps, so they got some old clothes, stuffed them with straw and made what they called a "straw man." When they had him dressed up in good style they set him on the front steps of the residence of a prominent citizen, made a little noise and hid behind the fence to watch the result of their trouble. Mr. B. as we will call him, heard the noise, went to the door and there found as he supposed a tramp on his steps. He told him to go away, to which the tramp neither moved or said a word. He told him the second time to go, the tramp held his position in silence. Mr. B. commanded him the third time to leave or he would help him to go, the tramp not making any attempt to go he took him by the coat collar gave a powerful jerk. The straw man not being as heavy as he expected Mr. B. went on his back, the straw man on top of him. Now Mr. B. belongs to the church and don't swear but he said something about Claud Duval or something that sounded like that, got up and kicked the poor tramp into the middle of the street, put two quarts of kerosene on him, lit him with a match, which illuminated the corner for a few minutes so the neighbors rushed out to see the fire. When he had cremated the body of the poor tramp he went into the house muttering to himself "them fellows think they are awful smart."

Jacksonville.

JACKSONVILLE, Sept. 9.—Geo. W. Allen while moving his threshing machine engine from the barn of George Rumsey of Granby, Saturday night, was thrown off the engine and striking on his head received injuries which left him unconscious for several minutes. The engine tipped partly over and was saved from going entirely over by several men, otherwise Mr. Allen might have been buried beneath it and probably more seriously hurt. He should be thankful that he escaped with as few injuries, he receiving several cuts about his head.

Our organized base ball club went to Baldwinsville last Saturday by an invitation of that cracked club the Senecas, and played them a matched game of ball on their grounds with 28 to 39 scores in favor of our club. Both sides did some heavy batting and played for all they were worth, but the Senecas will have to try again if they intend to wear the belt. We believe the Jacksonville boys have not been beaten only once this season, and that was the first game played and before they were organized.

OCCASIONAL.

South Hannibal.

The Prohibitionists of this place had a pole raising and picnic here last Saturday. The picnic was held in Mr. G. V. Wolven's orchard and the pole was raised in front of the Good Templars hall, on which was hoisted a flag with their candidates names. The Rev. D. D. Davis of Lysander delivered a stirring address. Music was furnished by Randell's Concert band. A general good time was enjoyed by all.

The farmers are very busy cutting tobacco.

Mrs. John Blacke sen., is very sick and not expected to live.

The Hannibal Centre camp meeting commenced yesterday and will continue one week.

The hop pickers that went from this place to Eaton, Madison county returned home Saturday.

Labor Notes.

A revolution in American affairs is surely needed when silk weavers work for an average of a dollar a day.—[Ex.

The Chicago City Council has passed an ordinance requiring shopkeepers to furnish seats for their female clerks. The cultivated East can find something to learn from Chicago.

The manufacturing companies of Lowell shut down work the week commencing September 1st by reason of the accumulation of goods and low prices.

All of the prescription and glass bottle factories of this country but two are running full time, and the latter will no doubt be in running order in a few days.

The Newark, N. J., Trades Assembly, representing 6,000 workmen, have passed a resolution denouncing the New York Tribune, and instructing that the resolution be forwarded to the Republican National Committee.

Furniture manufacturers throughout the country are begining to reduce wages on account of the backward demand for all kinds of furniture. Hardened Liver.

Five years ago I broke down with kidney and liver complaint and rheumatism.

Since then I have been unable to be about at all. My liver became hard like wood; my limbs were puffed up and filled with water.

All the best physicians agreed that nothing could cure me. I resolved to try Hop Bitters; I have used seven bottles; the hardness has all gone from my liver, the swelling from my limbs, and it has worked a miracle in my case; otherwise I would have been now in my grave. J. W. MOREY, Buffalo, Oct. 1 1881.

Poverty and Suffering.

I was dragged down with debt, poverty and suffering for years, caused by a sick family and large bills for doctoring.

I was completely discouraged, until one year ago, by advice of my pastor, I commenced using Hop Bitters, and in one month we were all well, and none of us have seen a sick day since, and I want to say to all poor men, you can keep your families well a year with Hop Bitters for less than one doctor's visit will cost. I know it.—A WORKINGMAN.

Miller—Comstock Case.

The case of Richard P. Miller vs Harry Comstock occupied the attention of Justice Parker and a jury Monday evening. Miller brought the action to recover for alleged services rendered by him for Comstock, and for breach of contract on the part of Comstock, who Miller claimed promised him work with the Enterprise Manufacturing Co., of Ackron, Ohio, at $2.00 per day. That his wages were reduced to $1.20 per day and that he was soon after discharged, all on account of a libellous article circulated in Ackron by Comstock. The amount claimed by Miller was $60. The jury returned into court at 2 o'clock a. m., and rendered a verdict of no cause of action. S. N. Dada appeared for Miller and Mead & Stranahan for Comstock.

Cause of Death.

The Lutesville, Mo., Vidette has the following:

Mr. Wm. H. Schenck, a young man who has been on a visit to our town and the guest of Mr. Stanton for the past two months, died very suddenly last Sunday. He had only been sick a few minutes, and thought he was going to have a chill, and went to bed. While there he called for a drink of water. In a few minutes he began to vomit and turned on his side, becoming unconscious in a few minutes. Dr. Pittman was summoned but before he could render any assistance the young man was dead. An inquest was demanded by his friends, and Dr. Wittmer, the coroner, held an inquest over the body of the deceased, by the following physicians, Drs. Pittman, Jaques and Wittmer, when the fact was revealed that death had been caused from a ruptured internal blood vessel. The deceased was only 26 years old, a bright young man and lived at Fulton, N. Y. His remains were shipped last Monday by express to his parents at that place.

Dr. BOSANKO.

This name has become so familiar with most of the people throughout the United States that it is hardly necessary to state that he is the originator of the [illegible]

[illegible] N. Y. [illegible] I found the large union depot, laid low by the fire of the night previous. Everything was in confusion, and the remains of the large wooden structure were still smoking. After running around and asking questions for about an hour, I found the night train, and was soon comfortably seated watching the outgoing and incoming trains. The ride over the West Shore Road to Cornwall was one of interest. We passed through pretty towns, made brilliant with gas and electric lights; past quiet farm houses on the hills, and the glorious Hudson constantly in sight. Oft times a beetling crag would over-hang the train, threatening to drop upon it and crush it with one blow. Then we would shoot through a deep cut, over a gully and on to a level plain. Thus the scenery changed all the time.

The ride from Cornwall to Middletown was through a flat unintersting country, but after we passed that town the scenery was really grand.

Mountains above on one side of the train, and a deep valley on the other. The creeks and streams below, looked in the moonlight, like plates of burnished silver. The zig-zag near Delhi was as intresting as ever, and the views round about this place were grand. We passed through the land of hops and hop poles and then to Oneida, where the festive bloomer holds forth. The train was on time when we reached Fulton and I was soon on my old stamping grounds, among friends. Fulton as I saw it, has surly not been retrograde in its movements. The town has grown considerable and a great many improvements have been made.

I spent one fore-noon on the river below the village and while sailing over the water, and by shady banks I wondered if the people of Fulton really appreciated the wonderful gift that nature has bestowed upon them? Not only from a picturesque view, but from a sanitary and commercial point. And again it is so accessable for fishing and boating. I spent three happy days in the village and on Sunday I started again to join the "Foundlings."

The steamers Ontario and Sumner were in connection with the morning trains, leaving Oswego usually at 8:45. Oswego looked to me as though it had died some time ago and was waiting for the Coroner to hold the inquest. Of course it was early and Sunday morning too, but never the less, the streets looked tired and lonely and most of the people discouraged. The docks and harbor had a regular Rip VanWinkle aspect and some of the piers looked as though they had been through a recent war. A citizen pointed out two or three new malt houses; great mammouth buildings, but the cause to which they are dedicated reflects no good on the city. It was "the fast and commodious steamer Ontario" that made the trip on this day, and if ten miles an hour is deemed fast, then the Ontario must surely correspond with the flaming posters. As for room there is hardly room to turn in when there is a hundred people on board. The run to Kingston occupied just six hours and after we got out of sight of land, we had nothing to do but watch the result of Seth Green's fresh water experiment with salt water shad. The only thing that broke the monotony of the trip was the appearance of a shambling youth dressed in a dirty white shirt and a baggy pair of blue trowsers supported by one "gallos." His cry was "dinner." Everyone rushed for the tables and I was lucky enough to get a seat next to the big smoke-stack, which ran right through the cabin in which the meals were served. Imagine how I felt. But I got even with them by eating everything that was within my reach. The dinner was good and plenty of it too, but miserably served. From the tables we all went on deck to get the first news of Kingston the granite city.

I thought of some studies in grays I had seen at the academy. The waters around the city front was a bluish grey the buildings and roads were grey and the afternoon sky was grey. The greys became monotinious. As we approached the city the buildings became more distinct and I could pick out the insane asylum, prisons and city hall. All the rest was massed in one grey spot. The turrets in the rixer and on shore attract some attention and strangers put forth some funny surmises as to their probable uses. Kingston although smaller seems to have more life and do more business than Oswego. The boat stopped fifteen minutes and while wandering around the docks I found that excursionists could get "good Squire meals at old Sam's." This sign was painted in several places.

Kingston is placed exactly at the mouth of the St. Lawrence and right here the islands appear after passing a lot of small ones we came to Wolf or Long Island which is the largest of the group and it is about thirty miles long by four or five wide. We made a stop here on one of the excursion boats afterwards and I got a good look at the natives. I always thought that the Pennsylvania Dutchmen were crude and primitive enough, but here I saw men who discounted the Dutchmen. Long and lank, with sallow complexions and no expression or vitality seemingly and they all smoked poor tobacco in clay pipes. They shambled when they moved and lounged when at rest. One man boarded the boat. He was loaded with a half of mutton and two bags of wool. "Going to Kingston to do some trading." I did not see any of the women of this island but I hope that they are an improvement on the men.

The ride to Clayton occupied two hours, but we sailed along between [illegible]

[illegible] "Foundlings" [illegible] The trip down the river did not occupy many minutes and was also very pleasant. Round Island looked desolate and lonely and I noticed that the upper story of the hotel was closed. We passed on down the river and was soon in sight of camp. The "Foundlings" had placed their asylum on Prospect Point and just in front of the misnamed Crystal Bay. The two tents and wooden kitchen, backed up by the green trees beyond, were thrown out strong and clear, while the stars and stripes added just enough color to make a pretty picture, and real inviting too, to one who had spent a miserable day on a hot steamer. It did not take me long to tear over the bit of ground between the boat landing and the tents and I jumped into camp in time to take a seat at the well filled table, and eat my first meal under the canvass of the "Foundlings." I did full justice to the meal and I am sure that everyone in the camp did likewise.

After supper I bid good bye to the "biled shirt" and long trousers, put on the flannel and the knicker-bockers and then was indeed a full fledged "Foundling." I then went outside to get external view of the camp. It consisted of two large wall tents, and the wooden shed or kitchen. The front tent was used in the day time for a reception room, and at night served as a dormitory. The other tent was the dining room and was fitted up with a cupboard and a long rough pine table, nicely covered with a colored spread and kept set for ten hungry beings, all the time. The crockery was all new and silver plated knives and forks lay beside each plate. The boys took much pride in the sugar bowl for it was of the finest China and the party who contributed it, often pointed to the makers name and stamp on the bottom with much pride. "That came from across the briny and is a work of art." The kitwas the place that interested the boys a great many loving glances were cast in that direction. The front was open and in one corner stood the stove; the pride of the camp. It was new and did its work well; not only for us but others around. All around the sides of the structure was arranged the pans and kettles, so necessary to this department. Over all this presided an old gentleman who will always be remembered by the "Foundlings," not alone for the good dinners he set before them but for the pleasant words and the many home comforts that he afforded them. All wish that he may be spared many more years and also that he may be with us again.

And now a few words for the camp decorations.

Over the front of the tent, was the word "Foundlings" in letters so large "that he who ran might read," and just below was the American flag nicely draped. All the tent poles were covered with cabinet photo's and the walls were decorated with chromos and charcoal sketches. The asthetic rush occupied a prominent place and the first born (a big rag doll) sat upon the seat of honor. Before this shrine we all worshiped, before partaking of the morning meal. We all concludad the child must have been the step-child of the camp, for we found it near the front door. One of the sympathetic young men from Fulton has adopted her and she bids fair to grow up an orniment to society.

THE SUN.

NEW YORK, 1884.

About sixty million copies of The Sun have gone out of our establishment the past twelve months.

If you were to paste end to end all the columns of The Suns printed and sold last year you would get a continuous strip of interesting information, common sense wisdom, sound doctrine, and sane wit long enough to reach from Printing House Square to the top of Mount Copernicus in the Moon then back to Printing House Square, and then, three-quarters of the way back to the Moon again.

But The Sun is written for the inhabitants of this earth; this same strip of intelligence would girdle the globe twenty-seven or twenty-eight times.

If every buyer of a copy of The Sun during the past year has spent only one hour over it, and if his wife or grandfather has spent another hour this newspaper in 1883 has afforded the human race thirteen thousand years of steady reading, night and day.

It is only by little calculations like these that you can form any idea of the circulation of the most popular of American newspapers, so of its influence on the opinions and actions of American men and women.

The Sun is and will continue to be, a newspaper which tells the truth without fear of consequences, which gets at the facts no matter how much the process costs, which presents the news of all the world without waste of words and in the most readable shape, which is working with all its heart for the cause of honest government, and which therefore believes that the Republican party must go in the coming year of our Lord, 1884.

If you know The Sun, you like it already, and you will read it with accustomed diligence and profit during what is sure to be the most interesting year in its history. If you do not yet know he Sun it is high time to get into the sunshine.

A first class boarding school for [illegible]

Fans are still large.

Crinoline is on the increase.

Small inconspicuous buttons remain in favor.

Very high standing collars are worn on wool dresses.

Cameo clasps fasten belts to round-waisted dresses.

Belts and sashes tied on one side are much in favor.

Some of the newest handkerchiefs are ruffled and tucked.

There is a rage at the moment for excessively small bonnets.

Foulards are the favorite wear of children for fall dresses.

Jackets of ribbed velvet or velveteen are correct for fall wear.

Bias folds and tucks will continue in favor in preference to flounces for wool skirts.

Among the new card receivers is one shaped like a begonia leaf with a rusty toad sitting on it.

Silver braid in rows or rings will be the stylish trimming for black cashmere dresses the coming season.

Three bias lapping folds, each four inches wide make a pretty border for the foot of a wool skirt.

Sleeves retain their close shape without fullness at the top; a cord is again used to strengthen the armhole.

Rich passementeries and bands of velvet are used on the panels and pleated skirts of silk and satin dresses.

Polonaises are very long in the back, in some cases requiring only the front of a skirt to complete the costume.

The standing collar is cut in a single piece without a seam in the back, and is straight in front, so that the edges meet.

Little blocks of glass, scooped out in the center, and made to look like ice as near as possible, are newest ice cream dishes.

Skirts are made with kilt pleats from four to six inches broad, separated by a cluster of two or three narrower pleats.

The plain smooth waist is most popular for heavy wool goods, and this can be diversified by introducing a vest or a square plastron.

Some young ladies at the seaside wear around their straw hats a twist of comcommon hay, kept in place by a bow of bright colored ribbon.

A border for the foot of skirts is made of very large lapping rings of braid or of galloon, and a narrower border to match trims the apron drapery.

Four successive panels covering the front and side breadths are neat and stylish as drapery for flannel dresses, and may be bordered with rows of braid.

Basques are made in habit fashion with the postillion pleats pressed flat; the sides are very short, the front is sharply pointed or rounded, and only a trifle longer than the sides.

The fan must match the toilet and suit the occasion. There are race fans, regatta fans, ball room and dinner fans, piazza, parlor and theater fans, but no church fans. Fans should never be carried to church.

RELIGIOUS READING.

The second congress of the Episcopal church of Canada will be held at Toronto in October, the adoptation of the "cathedral system" being among the many important questions to be considered.

At last accounts, about 1,300 persons had signified their design to attend this year's meeting of the Evangelical alliance at Copenhagen. Some 200 British and American visitors are expected to be present. The attendants pay their own board, the reduced charges at the principal hotels of Copenhagen being about $2 a day.

A missionary in Georgia writes: "In five years I have organized 231 Sunday schools, with 11,492 teachers and scholars: visited and aided 84 schools, having 9,689 teachers and scholars; delivered 1,361 addresses; visited 6,285 families: distributed 9,401 Bibles and Testesments, and other publications to the value of $902; traveled 24,890 miles in my own conveyance."

Mr. Moody says that he has been entirely misrepresented in the public press in the public press in regard to Mr. Sankey's condition; that he never made such a statement as that Mr. Sankey was permanently disabled. He says Mr. Sankey is already restored to health, and that they expect to work together in this country, beginning at an early date; both are impatient for that time to come.

The established church in London is apparently not acting in a very Christian spirit by appointing a clerical conference during the week of the Evangelical alliance at Copenhagen and in other ways trying to take from the interest at that meeting. The alliance, it will be remembered, was to have met in London but the established dignitaries refused to affiliate with certain of the denominations and so Copenhagen was selected as the place of meeting.

For several Springs past there has appeared all over my face and arms a fine scarlet rash. I've been bilious all my life, but I don't know what to make of this. I felt so sleepy and miserable that I knew my system needed renovating and toning up. I took a great deal of medicine in two weeks, to hit this billiousness. The fine rash remained however. I was all broken out. One day, over at the shipyard, one of the sailors began talking to me about what was used a great deal on shipboard by the lake sailors for bilious disorders. 'Try Dr. Kennedy's FAVORITE REMEDY,' he said 'we get it at the drug store down at the foot of Main street.' I went and got a bottle, and it is the best medicine I ever took for cleansing my blood. The rash disappeared and I never felt better in my life than I did this spring."

FARM GOSSIP.

Hay made from grass cut when "almost ripe" will make the most milk.

Sow a patch of millet to get the seed for chicken feed before they can eat larger grain.

The farmer who lets weeds go to seed does great damage not only to himself but to his neighbors.

In sowing peas, it is well to plant rows at intervals of a week or so, to provide for steady and successive supplies.

Don't neglect to pinch off the sprouts which appear on the stock where you set grafts this spring or budded last season. Throw all the vital force of the stock into the new growth.

A prominent breeder of Holsteins claims that the introduction of ensilage in his feeding has entirely prevented losses from milk fever among his cows, though previous to its use in feeding he usually lost one or more valuable animals every year.

Slices of raw potatoes, soaked in water, sprinkled with Paris green, and placed under young potato vines will be appropriated by the first comers among the potato bugs and naturally contribute to diminish the propagation of the pest.

Among farmers, butter culture of smaller surfaces is the shortest way to success. Instance, a man in Orange county who keeps more stock, raises more grain and makes more money on thirty acres than another, in the same town, who "skins" ten times as much land.

Pastures are frequently reduced to less than half their natural production by being eaten off too closely. If the ground be too bare it dries out until the blades and roots of the plants are scorched. If enough grass be left to protect soil, and keep it damp, the pasture will be much more productive.

A correspondent of the Country Gentleman says that in 1882 the Baldwin trees in a small orchard were nearly all profusely filled with blossoms. From three trees, which were more abundantly filed than the rest, all the blossoms were sheared. Last year these three trees blossomed profusely. The correspondent is firm in the belief that the bearing of fruit trees may be changed at will by the shearing plan.

Where wheat is largely grown rye is one of the worst kind of weeds that can get in the land. It is very difficult to separate the grains so that some rye will not be sown each year. But as rye runs up into head several days earlier than wheat it is a comparatively easy matter to go through the grain, and with a corn knife cut out the rye. If cut just before the wheat heads out the rye will not sprought soon enough to mature any seed.

History of the Hardest Struggle of His Life—Of Deep Interest to all Professions.

WORCHESTER, MASS., March 23d 1884.

Dr. David Kennedy, Rondout, N. Y.:

DEAR SIR: My son, a lad of fifteen, editor of the "Go-Ahead," amateur journal, of this city, has been at different times most severely and apparently hopelessly, afflicted with Salt Rheum. When a very small child his body was almost entirely covered with this loathsome eruption. It mostly passed away, however, after the teething period, and he was not seriously troubled with it again until about one year ago, when the salt rheum first appeared on his hands between his fingers, then on his limbs, then on his face and head in one solid mass. His condition was terrible. The rash resembled ivy poisoning and we at first fancied it might be something not so bad as his old troubles, but the physicians pronounced it salt rheum and made every effort without avail, to cure it. We tried a preparation widely advertised as a specific for skin diseases, but it made about as much of an impression as so much cold water might have done. You can understand the situation when I say we were in despair of obtaining real help from any source.

At this point, through the advice of Mr. J. W. Bacon, whose daughter had been cured by it, I tried KENNEDY'S FAVORITE REMEDY. This was the right and only thing at last! The skin began to heal at once, and to-day the evidences of the disease have wholly disappeared. How thankful we are Dear Doctor, I leave you to imagine. Yours.

"Only Cousins, Do you See."

Charming cousin, tell me where
Shall I find one half so fair?
Let me, as I taste thy lip,
Swear how sweet is cousinship.
Like a sister? Yes, no doubt;
Still, not sister out and out.
Who that ever had a sister
Felt his heart beat when he kissed her?
Who, by looking, ever knew
That his sister's eyes were blue?
Who, in name of all he loves,
Bets his sister pairs of gloves?

Charming cousin, still are you
Sister in a measure, too.
We can act as pleases us,
No one thinks it dangerous;
Talk of love or of the weather,
Row or ride or read together,
Wander where we will alone,
Careless of a chaperon.
You may dance with none but me—
"Only cousins, don't you see!"
Cousins safely may forget
All the laws of etiquette

Charming cousin, in your eyes
I can read a faint surprise
Most bewitchingly they glisten
To my nonsense as they listen—
"What can Harry mean to say?"
You may come to know some day.
Just one word, sweet cousin mine,
Ere we go to dress and dine;
If I ever chance to woo,
Cousin, she must be like you.
And the one who comes the nearest
To yourself will be the dearest,
Type of what my love must be;
Cousin what if you are she?

AN EDITOR'S DREAM.

BY SCOTT WAY.

[Read by the Author before the Peninsular Press Association during the literary exercises of the Annual convention on steamer Breakwater, Aug. 19th, 1884.

Once upon a time a village editor sat in his quiet sanctum industriously perusing the political editorials in his daily city exchanges. At length that which he read began to have its legitimate effect; his eyes closed, the city daily fell from his nerveless fingers, and three flies lit upon his bowed bald head and balanced all, and swung corners, and crossed over, and promenaded all around to the music of the rythmetical editorial snore. The village editor was asleep; and sleeping, the village editor dreamed:

He sat at his desk with weary fingers and aching head. The last local item had gone into type, the last inside reading notice had been set up, and the youngest apprentice stood grimly by, with lines of impatience upon his brow and a daub of ink under his left eye, waiting for more copy. Suddenly there was a step without, the door opened, a man entered, and taking the vacant chair in front of the editor's desk, to which the editor had politely called his attention, he said:

"My dear sir, my name is John W. Smith. I am a subscriber to your paper, as you very well know, and being in town to-day I thought I would take the opportunity to call and tell you that I like your paper all but one thing: You don't print enough matter on the Tariff question. Poetry and stories and funny paragraphs and local items may be well enough to fill up a paper with in ordinary times, but just now the country is awake to the tariff question, and if you want to keep your paper alive you've got to give your subscribers light on the Tariff. You should not have less than three columns of editorial and five columns of extracts on the Tariff every issue.—That's all I've got to say, and I hope you'll bear it in mind. By the way, I owe you for two years subscription and one of these days I'll call in and pay it. Don't forget to let yourself loose on the tariff; good by."

As the man who wanted more light on the Tariff passed out, a little nervous looking person came in and took the vacant chair.

"Ah," he said, with a little smile that didn't look strong enough to be out, "ah, my dear man, I see you are absorbed in thought, as an editor always should be. And that reminds me that you are neglecting—almost totally neglecting science. Too much of politics, too much of politics, my dear man; your paper will never grow in circulation while you neglect science for politics. You should devote not less than four columns a week to science. That's all I came in to say. Be in some day and pay you my subscription. Good day; but don't forget to give us plenty of science."

The footsteps of the man who wanted science had not gone beyond the editor's hearing when a third visitor entered and took the vacant chair as if he were accustomed to sit in it.

"I am sorry to notice that you are neglecting politics just at this important period," he said, kindly but gravely. "You should strive to keep the vital principles of our party constantly before the people.

I like your paper in all but its lack in this respect, and some day, perhaps at the beginning of next year, I will subscribe for it. I see it now every week at Brown's office. If you would write about five columns of fresh political editorials every week you'd see your paper going right up in circulation. That's what I told Brown yesterday, and he agreed with me. A story and a scientific article occasionally and a little local matter and some marriage and death notices to please the women are all well enough but I can tell you that a country paper to amount to anything, and have any influence, has got to be full on politi- [illegible] that sort. I want the news when I take a paper. I want a full account of murders and suicides and railroad collisions and divorce cases. Don't send me the paper any longer. I will come in and pay you what I owe you when I have sold my corn; good day."

And then there was a light step at the door, and a person wearing a severe countenance and a shawl came in and took the vacant chair.

"I am very sorry," he said in measured tones, and with a fixed and critical stare at the editors nose—"I am very sorry," to notice that you are giving in your columns so little attention to the cause of Prohibition—the noble cause of Prohibition. You must rouse yourself upon this great question and give your readers a page of it weekly. I am not a subscriber to your paper, but I borrow it every week of my neighbor and I loan him the Banner of Light in exchange. So you will observe that I have been one of your faithful readers and I know just where you fall short of a good newspaper. I will leave you a few tracts from which you should make liberal extracts from time to time. You will notice that this one, entitled 'Dash the Cup Away!' is written by myself. You are at liberty to print it in full. And when I come across anything particularly good in the columns of the Banner of Light I'll cut it out and send it around to you. You have a grand opportunity to make your paper grow in circulation and influence, and I hope you will come boldly to the front on the right course and no longer continue to devote your valuable space to trivial matters. By the way, have you a few exchanges that you are done with? Ah, that will do; good day."

In the door the man in a shawl passed a man with a merry twinkle in his eyes.

"I like your paper—it is first rate," he said, as he dropped into the vacant chair, "except that it does not contain humor enough. Why don't you fill her full of jokes and bright things by the funny fellows, and make your readers laugh? Nobody cares a cent for those political editorials and those scientific articles, and that stuff about the Tariff you print. That puts me to sleep. Give us a plenty of jokes to shake a man's liver up and let the Tariff take care of itself. That's all. Be in to see you again when I've more time; ta, ta."

The next person who took the vacant chair had a countenance as solemn as a second-hand hearse. He didn't look as if he had smiled more than once in forty years, and the village editor took him for an undertaker who wanted to advertise a patent embalming process and pay in trade.

"Sir," said the solemn man, after a silence that became very painful to the village editor. "I am grieved to notice the tone of levity that has recently pervaded the columns of your paper, and I am compelled to ask you on that account to take my name off your list.—You seem to forget that this is a world of calamity and woe, and that a spirit of levity in the press is unseemly, and tends to draw attention from the solemn realities of life and the near proximity of death. Last week you declined to print my article entitled: 'Reflections on the Grave,' alleging that you did not have room for it, and then gave up nearly a column of your paper to frivilous jokes. I do not intend to read anything light this year. That is all I have to say; ood afterno on."

The door closed behind the solemn man and then softly opened again to admit a dreamy-eyed man with a poetic brow and a general expression that seemed to indicate that he wanted something he had never had and never expected to have.

"I merely came in to remark," he began, as he took the vacant chair, "that you are sadly neglecting the literary department of your paper. I not only have noticed it myself, but several of my friends have called my attention to it. You should by all means run a continued story and have from two to three good short stories in each issue. Good stories is the thing that is wanted to make a village paper popular. Everybody you ask will tell you that. A little news and some local matter and the marriages and deaths should be printed, of course; but you shouldn't let anything crowd out the stories. I don't take your paper, but my brother-in-law does, and I borrow it of him. I have intended for some time to mention this matter to you but could never think of it when I was in town before. If you think these suggestions are of any value to you, you may send me your paper gratuitous for a year. Allow me to bid you good day, sir."

The dreamy-eyed man went out as softly as a sixty days' note falls due, and a moment later another style of person dropped into the vacant chair and spoke thus in tones that were sharp and quick:

"I don't think I shall take your paper another year. You are not making as good a paper as you should with your opportunities. You are not giving your readers enough local matter. Local matter should be the chief feature of the village paper. Everything else should be made to give way to local matter. A story now and then when you have plenty of room, and a bit of poetry to please the young folks who are in love, and a little news matter are all well enough, but if you want to make a village paper a success you've got to let [illegible] brought him from his dreams to his waking senses.

"How are you old fellow!" cried a cheery voice, and the Old Subscriber from up the creek took the village editor by the hand with a hearty grasp and shook a pain in the editors shoulder-blade. And then the Old Subscriber from up the creek seated himself in the vacant chair and merrily spoke thus:

"Well, old boy you're just giving us the very best paper we ever had. A good story every week, some poetry to please the women folks, a column or two of fresh humor to make us laugh and keep our lives running on regular schedule time, just about enough of politics, all the news that is worth a busy man's time to read, every important local event written up in breezy, readable style, and advertisements of all the public sales and of the stores and shops that offer us bargains. Yes, sir; your paper is good enough for me—worth twice what you ask for it—and I want to pay you a year's subscription for myself, and here are four dollars more, for which you may send your paper to my son, out West, and my daughter, down South, for they both like to get the news from the old home, and you give them more of it in one issue of your paper than I could write in twenty letters. That's all I've got to say to-day. Come out and see me when I begin to make cider, and bring a jug along if you've got one, and if you haven't I've got one to lend you; good bye."

And the Old Subscriber from up the creek went out with a smile upon his face that began just below his left ear and spread leisurely about over his face and then quietly meandered back to the place of beginning.

The village editor was about to pinch himself to assure himself that he was really wide awake, when the cry of "copy!" came to his ears, and then he didn't think it necessary to pinch himself. He only folded up three crisp two-dollar bills and put them in his pocket with the beautiful thought that this world in which we live is not half so bad a world as folks sometimes dream it is.

FASHION NOTES.

Feathers will be worn in profusion in the trimming of winter bonnets.

Beautiful ball dresses of tulle are covered with little flounces edged with gold.

Half-long Turkish jackets of velvet baoache will be the first dressy falt wraps.

Hats and bonnets are made very narrow in the back, to be worn with the hair dressed high.

A little ribbon bow or small natural flower or bud can be worn right at the back of the hair.

Percale and sateen suits are the correct outdoor wear in the country in the month of September.

Round felt hats are trimmed with velvet, and a bunch of feathers directly in front will be much worn.

Waistcoats of Valenciennes lace are worn under open bodices of black surah or china crape dresses.

The trimming on small bonnets is placed directly on top or in front, as the object is to add to their hight and narrowness.

Felt bonnets will be trimmed with embroidered bands on the brim, and flowers on the crown, done in the color of the felt.

One of the new neck ornaments consists of satin or velvet ribbon set in a muslin band to keep it firm. It is secured by a clasp.

Velvet will be used for dress bonnets, and felt and cloth bonnets will be choosen to match woolen costumes, for autumn and winter.

Young ladies are now wearing the graceful Grecian sleeves, which are buttoned across the shoulders and conceal the upper part of the arm.

Many skirts are being made with one deep flounce extending almost to the waist. Over this falls a short overskirt scant and slightly draped.

Polarian is a new woolen stuff for jackets, ulsters and trimmings. It comes in smooth, curled, fleecy piled surface, imitating the skins of the Persian lamb.

Gold and silver waist-belts are very much favored by young ladies and are particularly pretty with tulle and crape dresses. Some have clasps with initials engraven on them.

Linen collars are considered most suitable for ordinary occasions, the narrow standing collar having the preference, though the scolloped collar finds many admirers.

A fan or rosette of red velvet ribbon, on which are two or three swallows, is a pretty trimming for gray or brown felt bonnets. Aigrettes and pompons of the most delicate marabout arranged with other feathers; wings, or a bird will be used on winter bonnets.

WISELY ADOPTED BY DAIRYMEN.

The adoption by most of the prominent dairymen and farmers of the United States, of the Improved Butter Color made by Wells, Richardson & Co., Burlington, Vt., is a proof of their wisdom in a business point of view. [illegible]

Scientific persons have tried in vain to ascertain why oysters are fit to eat only in months that contain an "r." They have found that the oyster in May or in August does not differ from the oyster in April or September in any perceptible way.

The oyster is all right, and it is the public stomach which is wrong. Horse beef is perfectly wholesome, but we do not eat it, not because there is any pretense that it is unfit to eat, but because we do not want it. Early in May the human stomach rises in revolt against oysters, and continues in that condition until September.—[New York Times.

HOW HE GOT A POSITION.

"I applied for a position in a banking house in Wall street six months ago, and although I proved my competency, they would not take me. I had been down on my luck and looked old and shabby. GRADY is the plague of Tammany.

TOM GRADY has declaired for Butler.

WATCHING and waiting—for a Butler scandal.

FRANK HISCOCK will be re-elected to Congress in the 85th district

A LARGE stock of Presidential candidates on hand this year. Take your choice.

A NEW YORK papers say ex-Speaker Geo. B. Sloan wants to be United States senator.

THE Vermont Legislature will re-elect United States Senator Morrill. He is in his 75th year.

MUCH dissatisfaction is manifested in Oswego county over the nomination of Payne.

THE second district Democrats nominated Don C. Bishop for member of assembly last Saturday.

THE young men's Republican club of Brooklyn held a rousing mass meeting Thursday night. Resolutions were adopted endorsing Blaine.

IT is rumored that President Arthur will be a candidate as Senator from this State in place of Mr. Lapham, and that he will have Blaine's help.

IT is understood that the examiner of the New Brunswick, N. J., National bank will report that the liabilities are $631,000 and the assets $551,000.

THE second batch of the Blaine-Fisher-Mulligan letters have been made public and show up Blaine's financial transactions in the Little Rock Railroad enterprise.

IT is the opinion of no small number of Republicans in this vicinity that the defeat of Nutting for Congress will weaken Blaine's prospects considerably in this county.

THE New York Truth heads its editorial columns as follows: "Our particular ticket. For President, Mrs. Belva Lockwood. For Vice-President, Charles A. Dana. Isn't it just too lovely."

THE Republican congressional convention for this district was held at Weedsport, last Wednesday. Hon. Sereno E. Payne was nominated for congressman on the first ballot, he receiving 24 votes and Hon. N. W. Nutting 12 votes.

AT the meeting of Tammany Hall Friday evening that body resolved to ratify and endorse the nomination of Cleveland and Hendricks. Grady renounced Cleveland in strong language and declared himself in favor of Butler which was not in the least surprising.

AT the county Democratic convention at Mexico, last Wednesday, George N. Woods was nominated for Sheriff; N. J. Boggs for District Attorney; G. N. Harding for Superintendent of the Poor; Dennis Hayes for County Treasurer; George B. Wright for Justice of Sessions; James S. Gallagher for Special County Judge and Azariah Wart for Special Surrogate.

BY means of a "Stalwart-Half-breed" fight in Oswego that county has lost the ablest man it has had in Congress in many years. The nomination really belonged to Oswego, as it has the only port of any importance in the district, but Mr. Nutting, who has made a creditable record in Congress, excited the enmity of the "Half-breeds" by presuming to offer himself as a delegate to the Republican National Convention last spring, and so the knife of a vindictive faction has been plunged into his political vitals.—[Buffalo News.

IT is now tolerably clear that there is no chance of Grover Cleveland's election to the Presidency. He cannot carry New York. He will be beaten in this State by a majority of not less than fifty thousand, in spite of every exertion that may be made between now and election day.—[New York Sun.

The sun remarked the day before the Chicago convention: "We think Grover Cleveland is beaten." Cleveland, as everyone knows, was nominated on the second ballot. Now we place as much weight in the above assertion as we did in his prediction on the convention. But then, Dana is whooping it up for Butler.

THE voters of the country are no doubt aware that the election which will decide the Presidential contest of '84 is but a few weeks distant. It is expected therefore that you have weighed carefully, irrespective of party, the ability of each candidate to execute the high official duties involved in this office and that you are acquainted with their past record and know full well the position of each candidate upon the great and all important questions of the canvass. That you are sufficiently informed as to their moral standing. After considering these points as no doubt most of you have, you cannot help but make a judicious choice. At least you have acted honorable in choosing your man. Many men are so raped up in their party that they are blind to the faults of their candidate while on the other hand they are continually discovering imperfections in their opponant's choice. Loyality to party is good if it is backed by honesty.

Dr. BOSANKO.

This name has become so familiar with most of the people throughout the United States that it is hardly necessary to state that he is the originator of the great Dr. Bosanko Cough and Lung Syrup, the people's favorite remedy wherever known, for Coughs, Colds, Consumption and all other affections of the Throat and Lungs. Price 50 cents and $1.00. Sold by M. M. Williams. eow

The schooner [illegible] T. [illegible] valued at $18,000, and insured for $8,[illegible] was sunk by collision with an unknown vessel on Lake Erie, Friday. It had on board 700 tons of coal. The crew escaped in a yawl.

The other night two barns, one tobacco shed and a corn house owned by James Slocum, near South Hannibal, were struck by lightning and burned. The barns contained 500 bushels of old wheat, unthrashed, and 20 acres of oats, unthreshed, and a quantity of hay, besides farming utensils. Total loss $3,000. No insurance.

At Hannibal Centre, Saturday evening during the absence of the Rev. Mr. Ernest at camp meeting, thieves broke into his house and stole about $20 worth of jewelry. The return of the family frightened the rascals away and search for them has so far proved fruitless.

The firm of Pierce & Lund has sold out their stock of goods to Alvah Lund, who has taken possession. We understand the firm was somewhat embarrassed in their business matters, and concluded that the best course for all concerned was a transfer of their stock to Mr. Lund, who will continue the business.—[Hannibal News.

At Phœnix Saturday afternoon a fire broke out in the lock house, opposite the lock. The fire companies were promptly on hand, but not before people with pails had the fire under control. The house was occupied by Hiram Fralick, one of the lock tenders. He cannot account for its taking fire. The house is owned by the state of New York and was not insured.

The entire force employed at the Butler cigar manufactory in Binghampton quit Friday because the proprietor refused to grant an increase demanded.

There is a queer case on trial in Schenecady. A physician has sued to collect a bill for services at the birth of a child which was still born. The parents answer that the body of the child was delivered to the doctor in full payment of his bill.

The Delancy Forge and Iron works of Buffalo have shut down on account of a a lack of orders. It is thought they will not resume before December. One hundred men are thrown out of employment.

By the decease of an uncle in Scotland the family of a poor widow, named Grey, in Cohoes, gets $100,000. One-half the amount goes to one son who is a waiter in New York, and the remainder is to be divided between the widow and the other son, who is a printer.

Henry Lamb, aged 90 years, died in Fairfal county, Va., recently. To his dying day he asserted that the valt containing the remains of Washington was violated and the skull carried to France where it was sold to a firm of phrenologists. He said that French sailors committed the desecration.

The officers and crew of the United States steamship Richmond, were paid off Thursday at the Brooklyn navy yard. The amount paid out was $90,000. To avoid the land sharks who always lie in weight for sailors who have just been paid off, the men were taken in tugs and landed at different points in New York. The harpies waiting at the navy yard gates were disappointed.

KITCHEN ECONOMY.

Interesting Testes Made by the Government Chemist.

Dr. Edward G. Love, the Analytical Chemist for the U. S. Government, has made some interesting experiments as to the comparative value of baking powders. Dr. Love's tests were made to determine what brands are the most economical to use, and as their capacity lies in their leavening power, tests were directed solely to ascertain the available gas of each powder. Dr. Love's report gives the following:

Name of the Baking Powders.	Strength: Cubic Inches Gas per each ounce of Powder.
"Royal" (absolutely)	137.4
"Patapsco" (alum powder)	125.2*
"Rumford's" (phosphate) fresh	122.5*
"Rumford's" (phosphate) old	32.7*
"Hanford's None Such," fresh	121.6
"Hanford's None Such," old	84.35
"Redhead's"	117.0
"Charm" (alum powder)	116.9*
"Amazon" (alum powder)	111.9*
"Cleveland's" (short weight ¾ oz.)	110.8
"Sea Foam"	107.9
"Czar"	106.8
"Dr. Price's"	102.6
"Snow Flake" (Groff's, St. Paul)	101.88
"Lewis" Condensed	98.2
"Congress" yeast	97.5
"C. E. Andrews & Co's" (contains alum)	78.17
"Heckler's"	92.5
"Gillet's"	84.2
"Bulk"	80.5

*In his report the Government Chemist says:

"I regard all alum powders as very unwholesome. Phosphate and Tartaric Acid powders liberate their gas too freely in process of baking, or under varying climatic changes suffer deterioration."

Dr. H. A. Mott, the former Government Chemist, after a careful and elaborate examination of the various Baking Powders of commerce, reported to the Government in favor of the Royal Brand.

ABOUT ADVERTISING.

Don't expect an advertisement to bear fruit in one night.

You can't eat enough in one week to last you a year, and you can't advertise on that plan either.

A large advertisement once, and then discontinued, creates the impression that the man has fizzled.

Large type is not necessary in advertising—blind folks don't read newspapers.

Don't be afraid to invest in printers ink lest your sands of life be nearly run out.

If you can aroused curiosity by an advertisement, it is a great point gained. The fair sex don't hold all the curiosity in the world.

People that advertise only once in three months, forget that most people can't remember anything longer than about seven days.

Quiting advertising in dull times is like tearing out a dam when the water is low. Either plan will prevent good times from ever coming.

To make a man realize an idea as you realize it, is what is necessary to make him understand his needs. Advertisements should aim to place a matter so clearly before the public that they see it as the advertiser does.

It is a mistaken notion that a fine store in an elegible location, surrounded by attractive signs, is a superior advertisement; for the experience of most enterprising merchants is that it pays better to spend less in rent and more on advertising.

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS.

DO YOU KNOW

[illegible]

Two [illegible] to-day. [illegible] they [illegible] second [illegible] sold all their August make [illegible]. We should say that cheese in this market is sold down to the 15th or [illegible] an average, or perhaps even later. Prices were stronger to-day than salesmen had anticipated, and they were correspondingly pleased. No one pretends that August cheese is superfine in quality and buyers know this as well as the factorymen. As a consequence, the purchases to-day have been made with a full knowledge on both sides that the stock might be better. But this favorable change in the weather, with a reasonable certainty that the heated term was over, is regarded as furnishing a better outlook for cheese which has now probably seen its worst days for this season. Transactions include 57 lots, 5,295 boxes, at 10¼c.; 6 lots, 575 boxes, at 10⅜c.; 16 lots, 1,785 boxes, at 10½c.; 2 lots, 250 boxes, at 10¾c.; and 6 lots, 850 boxes, at p. t. Sales, 9,134 boxes; commissions, 1,490; total. 10,587. Ruling price, 10¼c. Of year before, 7,925 boxes; ruling price, 11c.

AT LITTLE FALLS.

SEPT. 15th—We have had quite a boom in prices to-day and a good brisk market. The morning market did not show so much improvement in prices as the trade in the afternoon. When business in the large factories began, however, it was apparent that the morning's dealings did not show quite the true situation. Few expected that the ruling price would be over 10¼ cents, but upon getting altogether the figures show a strong market at 10½ cents. The cold weather is doubtless the main cause of the advance in prices. Fine stock is in excellent demand, and a sharp competition was was aroused on this grade. The bulk of the sales was of the make of the second milk in August and Julys are now closed out. To-day's transactions are:

Lots	Boxes	Price
11	680	10
41	2,554	10¼
77	5,845	10½
2	224	10¾
1	60	11
13	905	Com
145	10,832
Farm Dairy	1,220
Total	11,458

FARM DARIES.—There was a large sale of cheese on the forenoon market, consisting of farm dairies and cheese from the smaller factories. There were 1,220 boxes sold at 9a10¼c.; but three lots brought the latter price, the bulk going at 10c.

BUTTER.—There was a total sale of 77 packages of butter. 34 of which was farm dairy at 24a25.; mostly 25c: and 43 packages of creamery at 24a26c., nearly all at 26c.

AT FULTON.

Sales were brisk at the market Monday night. Twenty-two factories were represented with 1,500 boxes of farm dairy cheese, which sold at 10 to 10½c, compared with 9½ to 9 3-4c, a week ago.

LIFTED OUT.

In what way a Watervliet Farmer was Sent Back to his Plow.

Leaving the cars of the New York Central Railroad at a pretty little station called Kenner, and driving three miles back in the country, you reach the fine, well kept farm of Mr. Jacob Cardell, Deputy Sheriff and Commissioner of Highways for the town of Watervliet. In the sunshine of a bright day last summer a traveler who had heard something of his history, visited Mr. Cardell, and said as he marked the hale appearance of the farmer: "Can you be the man whom they told me of in Albany as having been almost raised from the dead?"

"Perhaps I'm not quite entitled to that distinction," he answered half laughing, "but I was lifted out of a serious situation, that is certain. For fifteen years I had kidney disease in the worst form. I obtained but little rest day or night, so extreme was the pain in the small of my back. I tossed upon my bed, as pitiable an object as ever attracted the sympathy or excited the disgust of a sound man. Of course my business was neglected and my farm went to rack. All this came from catching cold in a camping out expedition, and I came near camping out in the cemetery as the end of all."

"If the doctors couldn't cure you—as I assume they couldn't—what on earth did you do?"

"Well help came to me; I didn't go for it One day when in Albany a druggist said: 'Cardel don't surrender yet. Try Dr. David Kennedy' FAVORITE REMEDY—a famous medicine sen up from Rondout, N. Y.' I did and it cured me I owe everything to D. Kennedy and his medicine. It has recalled me to life and labor. You may tell the world so, if you like."

[illegible] alloyed the metal and gave it the pliability of lead rather than the elasticity of silver.

Under the improved methods, each part of the Keystone Silver Watch Case is made of one solid piece of metal hammered into shape. The advantages are readily apparent, for every one knows that hammering hardens the metal while soldering softens it.

To test the superiority of the Keystone Silver Watch Case, take one of 3 oz. weight, press it squarely in the center when closed, and it will not give, while a case of same weight of any other make will give enough to break the crystal. The Keystone Silver Watch Case is made only with silver cap and gold joints.

Send 3 cent stamp to Keystone Watch Case Factories, Philadelphia, Pa., for handsome Illustrated Pamphlet showing how James Boss' and Keystone Watch Cases are made.

History of the Hardest Struggle of His Life—Of Deep Interest to all Professions.

WORCHESTER, MASS., March 23d 1884.

Dr. David Kennedy, Rondout, N. Y.:

DEAR SIR: My son, a lad of fifteen, editor of the "Go-Ahead," amateur journal, of this city, has been at different times most severely and apparently hopelessly, afflicted with Salt Rheum. When a very small child his body was almost entirely covered with this loathsome eruption. It mostly passed away, however, after the teething period, and he was not seriously troubled with it again until about one year ago, when the salt rheum first appeared on his hands between his fingers, then on his limbs, then on his face and head in one solid mass. His condition was terrible. The rash resembled ivy poisoning and we at first fancied it might be something not so bad as his old troubles, but the physicians pronounced it salt rheum and made every effort without avail, to cure it. We tried a preparation widely advertised as a specific for skin diseases, but it made about as much of an impression as so much cold water might have done. You can understand the situation when I say we were in despair of obtaining real help from any source.

At this point, through the advice of Mr. J. W. [illegible] had been cured by it, I [illegible] KENNEDY'S FAVORITE REMEDY. This was the right and only thing at last! Fair Rules.

As many who attend Agricultural fairs are ignorant of the rules that govern such exhibitions, a practical agricultural man has made up the following code of rules that are applicable to Fairs at all times and in all sections. As the season of fairs is upon us, it is only fair that those attending fairs should carefully heed them :—

Don't crawl in over the fence, but through the gate. The fence is simply for ornament.

Keep to the right as you pass around if you don't you may get left.

If you observe any animal which strikes your particular fancy, go by it at once.

In passing around among the live stock, remember that the horses and cattle are well heeled.

Beware of pickpockets ! In order not to put them to unnecessary trouble, carry your wallet in your hands.

In case you get lost hire some one to find you. Twelve cheap boys will be stationed on the ground for this purpose.

In walking 'round you will find plenty of chances to get a square meal.

An efficient corps of police are on the ground, ready to club in and help make the fair a success.

Any man caught squinting at the weather and predicting rain will be ordered to dry up.

The half mile track is not a mile around. Bear this in mind and it may save you much sorrow in after years.

In case your pig don't get a prize don't bristle up about it or squeal.

When you get tired of sitting take a grand stand.

Quarters provided for all the officers of the association, but if you want a quarter you must go down in your pocket.

[illegible] This Year Promises to Exceed All Others.

The Seventeenth Annual Fair of the Oswego Falls Agricultural Society will be held Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, September 23, 24 and 25, on the society's grounds in Oswego Falls. This society from the commencement has steadily grown in prominence until today it stands on an equal with any fair in the State. Their liberal premiums and unsurpassed exhibits, together with the delightful location, commodious building and speeding facilities, have won for them a widely known reputation. Everything is in better condition this year than ever before. The agricultural and mechanical halls despite their large capacity will be taxed to the utmost to accommodate the thousands who will visit them. Tents will be erected outside for the display of those not fortunate enough to obtain admittance to the hall. A new and convenient dining hall is among this year's improvements.

The society has engaged Carlotta, the Aerial Princess, to make a balloon ascension on the last day which will be a sight worth seeing.

Wednesday there will be a trial of speed for a premium of $50 for horses that have never beaten 3:10; also a premium of $100 for horses that have never beaten 2:40. Thursday the premiums will be $250; running race $50, $200 free for all, sweepstakes. The track will be in good condition. There will be reduced rates on all the railroads running through Fulton. No intoxicants will be sold on the grounds.

The New Rink.

The new mammoth roller skating rink will be completed this week, and will be opened in grand style next Tuesday evening. Messrs Bogart & Eno, fancy trick and acrobatic skaters, will give a first-class exhibition and the Fulton Amateur Band will be in attendance and will discourse very fine music. The rink is a fine commodious building with an excellent hard wood floor and has seating capacity for about 1,000 and will be beautifully decorated for the occasion. The manager, Mr. C. M. Harlow, is doing every thing possible for the convenience and comfort of the skaters, and visitors. This new enterprise will no doubt be liberally partonized by our citizens. Skating is a healthful and invigorating exercise for old and young. Good order will be maintained at this rink. Gentlemanly instructors will be in attendance to teach those desirous the art of roller skating. The rink will be open morning, afternoon and evening after next Tuesday. Let all who can attend next Tuesday evening and enjoy themselves.

C. L. S. C.

The Lower Oswego Falls C. L. S. C. accompanied by several invited guests met in O. J. Jenning's grove last Thursday afternoon. After partaking of refreshments the company adjourned to the house where they were pleasently entertained by Mrs. Anna Randell Diehl. The society will observe Garfield's memorial day on Friday evening of this week at the residence of Mrs. E. E. Swan. Persons wishing to become members of the society or to investigate the subject are cordially invited. Preparations will be made for the work of the coming year which commences October 1st.

Base Ball Notes.

About 500 people assembled on the Oswego Falls fair ground last Wednesday to witness a game of ball between the Syracuse Stars and the Oswegos. The game was the most interesting of the season. Only two Oswego batsmen were able to hit Geer, the Syracuse picher. Both clubs did good good work. The scores stood 8 to 9 in favor of the Stars.

The Oswego Falls nine will soon play the Stars on the O. D. A. grounds.—[Syracuse Journal.

Mr. Miller not appearing the court entered an order forfeiting the bail, ordering the same sued and that the defendant, Mr. Miller, be re-arrested. The warrant for his arrest was given to Deputy Sheriff Hulett, who immediately went to Syracuse on learning that Miller left the village. Monday on the Steamer Van Doren in company with George Dada. Deputy Sheriff Hulett assisted by the Syracuse police force made a thorough search for the young man but were unable to find him. Miller was last seen in Syracuse Monday about 8 o'clock carrying a large satchel. No effort will be made to discover his whereabouts until the December session.

One of Mr. Stiles' Pictures.

In Mr. Hendrick's art store is a painting of more than ordinary interest. The piece is by Mr. Stiles of Fulton, and in treatment is somewhat similar to the artist's "Astronomer," exhibited at the same place some months ago. It represents an elderly man reading from a large book. He leans his head upon his left hand and turns his face slightly to the right, and the page he is reading, so that it presents nearly a full view to the observer. Without being pretentious the picture is dignified and accomplished. Quiet in treatment and rather low in tone, it charms by the skillful and effective employment of simple elements.—[Syracuse Standard.

Republican Meeting.

On Monday evening next, September 22d, the Republicans of the towns of Volney and Granby will open the campaign with a Republican rally at the opera house in Fulton. The Blaine and Logan club will attend in uniform. There will be a fine glee club of twelve members to sing some rousing songs and Judge Yates of Schenectady and Col. Archie E. Arthur of New York, both most eloquent speakers will address the meeting. All and especially the ladies are invited.

Jack Frost.

Farmers in this vicinity are not as jubilant as they were a week ago. The frost of Saturday night did considerable damage to corn, tobacco and buckwheat. The largest portion of the tobacco crop has been harvested, but that still standing on low lands was badly cut. But there will be an unusually large crop nevertheless with what was harvested. The losses on tobacco in the town of Hannibal is estimated at $10,000.

Lightning Rod Company.

So much has been said and written about lightning rod swindlers that most every person looks upon one of these agents with suspicion, and well they may. We have now in our village L. P. Kile, representative of the "Improved Forest City Lightning Rod Company," and we are pleased to inform our readers that he is an honorable and fair dealing gentleman, conducting a legitimate business in a legitimate way. His improved copper tube and lightning conductor is the best and surest protection to property from this destructive element. For the next four weeks he will make the Lewis House his headquarters, and will call on farmers and others who wish to put lightning rods on their buildings. All orders left at the Lewis House will be promptly attended to.

For reference we refer you to H. H. Merriam, Granby; Wm. Ouderkirk, Granby; Mrs. Lucy Hall, Granby; Mr. Ware, Granby; J. H. Goodwin and Lewis F. Tator, Granby, who have patronized him. He is daily adding new names to his list.

The reason why Bristol is now selling so many Carriages and Wagons is because his prices are way down, and goods are extra quality. Go in and get prices and be convinced. 16w2

On the evening of the second day of the fair, Wednesday, Sept. 24, there will be a grand social hop in the Opera House ball room. A good time is guaranteed to those who attend.

A musical took place at the residence of James Hubbard on Fifth street last Thursday evening. Many of our best singers were present and took part in the evening's program, but the most prominent singer present was Miss Eva White of Philadelphia, who has been making a visit in our village. Competent judges pronounce her singing superior to any listened to in Fulton in some time.

While in Fulton a few days since our attention was called to the interior decorations, frescoing, etc., of the residences of D. W. Gardner and J. G. Benedict. The work, which we believe is as fine as any of the kind in this section, was done by Mr. Worden, of the firm of Lester & Worden, Fulton, assisted by Mr. John Farrell. Several hundred dollars have been expended in the decoration of these houses and they are marvels of beauty. Mr. Worden has a high reputation as an artistic painter.—[Phœnix Register.

I. C. Curtis of this village was summoned to Hannibal last Thursday on account of an accident which befell his father. The Hannibal News has this about it: Thursday morning about ten o'clock Mr. Ira Curtis while engaged in building a stack on his farm on the back road about two miles north of Oswego, about two miles north of this place fell from the stack severely injuring his wrist, and nearly severing his right ear from his head. Although not very seriously injured, he was severely jarred up.

John O'Brien, an attorney of Phœnix, was arrested Friday charged with forging the name of Alma Wood to pension drafts and defrauding the United States out of $1,924. O'Brien was arrainged before United States Commissioner Northrop in Syracuse and partially examined. It was shown he forged Mrs. Wood's name to the pension drafts August 4, 1882. Mrs. Woods had at that date been dead a month. By means of the forged signature and forged affidavits O'Brien obtained the money on the drafts from the Onondaga County Savings Bank. The examination will be concluded September 19. In default of bail O'Brien was sent to jail.

[illegible] Sept. 18th, '84.

Far out on the point of rocks in front of the camp stands a typical "Foundling," waving a towel at some early bathers on the other side of the bay. It is six o'clock in the morning and he has just put the finishing touches on his toilet, and he stands there outlined against and mirrored in the clear blue water of the river,—a living picture. His well made frame shows to a good advantage in the natty tight fitting suit of the camp. Locks of his dark hair just escape the flannel hat set jauntily on his head. His cheeks are aglow and show the effects of the vigorous rubbing, and the work of the sun. His eyes sparkle, and his whole being is alive and active and he is filled with that restlessness that comes only with a clear conscience and a vigorous body surrounded by everything perfect in nature.

The sound of the breakfast bell spoils the picture, and our "Foundling" springs up the bank to take his place at the long table with the other nine big appetites. Each of the ten around that festive board would eat as though the meal before them was the last they would see for a week, and as the "Foundlings" arose from the table their unclasped belts plainly told that they were too full for utterance.

After breakfast the smokers would produce their pipes, and sit in their hammocks to enjoy them. Then a row over to Hub or Grinnel Island, after which they would all make a break for the postoffice. The number of perfumed, crossed lined, finely written letters that went into our box, would lead one to believe that the "Foundlings" had left some one at home. After a frolic in the grove in front of the office they usually went back to camp to receive the callers. The register shows that over two hundred people (mostly all of the gentler sex) graced the camp with their presence. Each caller was required to register, and on their departure received a beautiful photo, and a "Foundlings" card. Some fared better for they took away the hearts, or part thereof, of the most susceptible of the campers. Dinner over, some would give themselves up to the drowsy feeling, and sleep away the afternoon, in the shade of the trees. Others would go away on some of the many excursions that start from the Park.

Grindstone Island was a very attractive place and the "Foundlings" were always represented there. The camp of the American Canoe Association was located on this island, and all along the shore for nearly a mile the little tents of the different clubs were placed. They were backed up by a high hill, and were thus made prominent. Canoes of all sizes, styles and makes were strewn along the river front, and canoeists in kinds of dress were to be seen on all sides. The races drew great crowds, and on fete days the river would be just alive with all kinds of crafts.

Kingston was visited by some of the party, but every one that went declared that it would be the last visit they would make to that place. One night our camp jester came home from Kingston with nine coppers almost as big as saucers, that he had received in change. "Why it's worth a man's life to carry these things," he said, "but anyway I can use them as a weapon of defence." So he tied them in an old stocking and carries them for a black jack.

But the twilight hours were the most enjoyable. Supper was usually eaten "in the gloaming" and after the lights around the camp were brightly burning, each "Foundling" would take to himself the girl of his choice, and go out upon the river to while the hours away. What could be more bewitching? Why the thought alone is delightful. There you are, out upon the most perfect river in the world, in one of the finest boats made, alone with a charming girl talking sweet nothings, and floating with the current. You loose all power to use the oars and so you float. The moon smiles on the scene. The music from the shore comes to you in mellow tones, the girl talks low, and the gentle motion of the boat rocks you to sleep. In this way the hours go by and it is with regret that you row your homeward way, but the ten o'clock bell warns all that "lights must go out and all noise cease." Perhaps the poem in the last century might come in nicely right here, so I'll copy what Agnes Maude Machar has written.

DRIFTING AMONG THE THOUSAND ISLANDS.

Never a ripple upon the river,
As it lies like a mirror beneath the moon,
—Only the shadows tremble and quiver,
'Neath the balmy breath of a night in June.

All dark and silent, each shadowy island
Like a silhouette lies on the silver ground,
While just above us, a rocky highland
Towers grim and dusk, with its pine tree crowned.

Never a sound but the waves soft splashing
As the boat drifts idly the shore along,—
And the darting fire-flies, silently flashing,
Gleam living diamonds, the woods among.

And the night hawk flits o'er the bays deep bosom,
And the loon's laugh breaks through the midnight calm,
And the luscious breath of the wild vines blossom
Wafts from the rocks like a tide of balm.

A peep in the front tent of the "Foundlings" camp after ten o'clock at night, would reveal ten little cots arranged in two rows ready to receive the ten pleasure tired bodies of the orphans. The dim light above sheds its rays on the sleeping forms of three or four of the boys who were either too tired to go out, or else "got left." One by one the rest come in, but everyone makes it his especial business to wake all the sleepers. It was often one o'clock before all would get settled down for the last time, to sleep. About two o'clock some one would wake up and start a pillow around the tent. Soon the fight would become general, and in a few minutes all the boys would be either fighting on the ground or else outside on the damp grass. Just one hour was required to get settled down again, and by that time some wretch would get the big dinner bell, or the fish horn and make night hideous. After he had been sat on properly, we could all sleep in peace. The "Foundlings" [illegible] to make themselves [illegible] Bay, to King[illegible]

[illegible] found the basket containing the two waifs. By the light of the candles we all drew around the basket, and admired the innocents as they slept. Tucked away in the clothing was a bottle of soothing syrup and the following letter: "Unfeeling parents have thrust us upon the world, but from far distant isles we've seen your kindred sign, and felt a hand guide us to seek your tender care."

THE TWO ORPHANS.

The twins have made Fulton their home.

Four o'clock found us up next morning. The tents were all laid low, and everything was packed away, ready to ship, and by six o'clock the wagon came down and took our home away. We all stood in silence on the ground on which our home had been builded. No one spoke, but I am sure that some would have cried, had they been alone. We traveled the well worn path along the river, through the woods, and then to the hotel. Every familiar object was looked on for the last time as we slowly made our way to the boat. Friends along the streets and paths bade us good bye, and a little knot of people gathered at the dock for the same purpose. We said our last farewells and were soon on our way up the river. Did we leave with regrets? Well, yes! There is not a word in our language that would express our feelings as we looked at Prospect point for the last time.

An insane boat builder in Oswego once went to sleep and dreamed a dream. It was nearly a nightmare. He awoke next morning and set his men at work on the old hull of the burned tug, Sumner. The result of his dream is plainly shown in the magnificent craft—the Sumner, that crawls through the blue waters of Ontario. That's the boat we came home on, and had it not been for the pleasant company on board we would have all pumped off, and swam to Oswego. At Clayton part of the New York canoe club came on board with their traps and canoes and soon made themselves and every one else at home. On leaving the dock their bugler sounded the farewell to friends left behind, and then the club settled down to enjoy itself. Songs and stories whiled away the hours and when Oswego was reached we all left the boat with more regrets. On the trip across our register was produced and W. A. Rogers, a well known New York artist sketched "the youngest of the camp." All the rest of the club either registered, or drew some picture suggestive of their canoes. The page surely deserves a frame, for a glance at it will bring back so many pleasant recollections. The stop at Oswego was short and in a few moments we were again in Fulton shaking hands with our friends who awaited our return. Again the bugle of the New York club sounded the farewell and the train soon separated us from the pleasant friends of the short acquaintance. We all returned in good health, brown as old Sol could make us and filled with the determination to go again next year if spared. The trip has furnished material for talk and thought for all next winter, and I am sure that not one Foundling will tire of the subject.

Letters from the Park since we came home, assure us that we are all very much missed. The boys are puzzled to know if its the noise the people miss, or ourselves. And a fair correspondent says that one of the party cast a cloud over the fair name of the camp by attempting to get away with Grinnels Island. But I can contradict that report, for I know that the said young man had that morning received a very corpulent letter written very finely, and evidently from his girl; so he was not to blame because he left the boat fastened to the dock and tried to pull the island across the bay to the camp.

To finish I would say that the "Foundlings" brought home the good will of every one they met, and all expressed the wish that "the whole camp would come again. The good will is kept in a big box in Fulton. "Please pass the sugar" to THE WANDERING JEW.

THE SUN.

NEW YORK, 1884.

About sixty million copies of THE SUN have gone out of our establishment the past twelve months.

If you were to paste end to end all the columns of The Suns printed and sold last year you would get a continuous strip of interesting information, common sense wisdom, sound doctrine, and sane wit long enough to reach from Printing House Square to the top of Mount Copernicus in the Moon then back to Printing House Square, and then, three-quarters of the way back to the Moon again.

But The Sun is written for the inhabitants of this earth; this same strip of intelligence would girdle the globe twenty-seven or twenty-eight times.

If every buyer of a copy of The Sun during the past year has spent only one hour over it, and if his wife or grandfather has spent another hour this newspaper in 1883 has afforded the human race thirteen thousand years of steady reading, night and day.

It is only by little calculations like these that you can form any idea of the circulation of the most popular of American newspapers, or of its influence on the opinions and actions of American men and women.

The Sun is and will continue to be, a newspaper which tells the truth without fear of consequences, which gets at the facts no matter how much the process costs, which presents the news of all the world without waste of words and in the most readable shape, which is working with all its heart for the cause of honest government, and which therefore believes that the Republican party must go in the coming year of our Lord, 1884.

If you know The Sun, you like it already, and you will read it with accustomed diligence and profit during what is sure to be the most interesting year in its history. If you do not yet know the Sun it is high time to get into the sunshine.

Carrying coals to Newcastle—telling a girl she's pretty.—The Judge.

Why should a man live two lives, while a woman must stand or fall by one.

Girls, don't paint. Men know that a pale apple is just as sweet as a red one.—Phila Bulletin.

No young man will ever expect to find a good wife in a young woman who is not first a good daughter.

Helen Williams: Women who live in their feelings—and most of them do—live closer to nature than men.

A Woman is employed at Saratoga to advertise soap by sitting in a booth and exposing her clean, white skin.

At 20 man is less in love with woman than of women; he is more in love with the sex than the individual, however charming she may be.

Masked hugging parties are popular at church fairs in Missouri. By paying 15 cents a man is allowed to hug a girl but he is first blindfolded. It makes a man awful mad to find, on removing the bandage from his eyes, that he has been hugging his own wife. Fifteen cents gone for nothing.—Somerville Journal.

Women are more cheerful than men, and yet are getting the reputation among men of complaining. The wife stays in the house too much. The evil of "dressing to go to market" is in the way. Let it be considered as bad taste to see a housewife "dress up" while she is doing her marketing; then there will be more "time" to get fresh air.

A scientist says the reason kissing is so pleasant is because the teeth, jaw bones and lips are full of nerves, and when the lips meet an electric current is generated. He should explain why it is the electric current does not work when he kisses his mother-in-law to please his wife. Science cannot upset our religious notions about kissing.—Texas Siftings.

RELIGIOUS READING.

The Episcopal Church in Scotland shows an increase, during the last thirty years, of 133 clergymen, 50,000 members, three cathedrals, 120 churches and ninety parsonages. This increase, it is said, is giving the Presbyterians of "the land o'cakes" much concern.

Among the Presbyterian churches in this country having a membership of over one thousand are the Fifth Avenue, New York, reporting 1,991 communicants; the Lafayette Avenue, Brooklyn 1,928; the Tabernacle, Brooklyn, 3,002; Brick Church, Rochester, 1,368: Bethany Church, Philadelphia, 1,513; Third Church, Chicago, 2,183.

The London "Society for the Promotion of Christianity among the Jews" held its seventy-sixth anniversary last May. This society has had great success in England, on the continent and in the east. Rev. Dr. Stern, himself a converted Israelite and a leader of the work in London, declaired that there are at least 3,000 Christian converts from Judaism in the churches of England. Some have attained to position in the church.

A new religious movement is reported from southern Russia, where a Jewish advocate, Joseph Rabinowitz, is organizing Jewish-Christian communities. He has already been joined by some 200 families. The plan is to keep aloof from organic union with any of the Gentile-Christian churches, rejecting their misinterpretations of the teachings of Jesus, and adhearing closely to Jewish customs, circumcision included. The founder looks hopefully forward to the ultimate planting of Palestine with these communities.

Both the Congregationalists and the Baptists are trying to capture bodily the 75,000 members of the Free church who recently left the established church in Sweden. This matter recently came up before the Home Missionary society at Saratoga, the Congregationalists claiming that the Free church is in government and belief in sympathy with them. An American Congregationalist Mr. Montgomery, has been in Sweden explaining to the Free church people the similarity between the two denominations.

ALL IN THE LINE OF NATURE.

There is nothing in the line of mag c or mystery about that wonderful and popular medicine, Parker's Tonic. It is simply the best and most scientific combination possible of the essential principles of those vegetable curatives which act powerfully and directly on the stomach, liver, kidneys and blood. But there neither is, nor will be, any successful imitation of it. It is all the time curing those who had despaired of ever getting well. For yourself, your wife and children. 14w4

Nothing should be given a milch cow that, so far as quality is concerned, we would not be willing to eat ourselves. Pastures should be free from weeds, brush and rank grasses, also from bitter herbs and low-growing decidious and evergreen trees.

Whenever any garden crop is past use for the kitchen, it should be cleared out of the ground. Such a course keeps the garden looking well and prevents a needless seeding. It should be remembered that a seed crop exhausts the soil more than two crops taken off in a succulent condition. The refuse of the kitchen is not fit to save another year's seed from.

Where the weeds have been closely kept down throughout the season until now, little trouble will come from them after this. But a few no doubt were missed, and these receiving the benefit of clean culture, are soon of large size, and ready to perfect a vast quantity of plump seeds. Just to prevent this we must not give up the battle yet, for a few such plants would make endless work next year, while now it is no task to level them.

History of the Hardest Struggle of His Life—Of Deep Interest to all Professions.

WORCHESTER, MASS., March 23d 1884.

Dr. David Kennedy, Rondout, N. Y.:

DEAR SIR: My son, a lad of fifteen, editor of the "Go-Ahead," amateur journal, of this city, has been at different times most severely and apparently hopelessly, afflicted with Salt Rheum. When a very small child his body was almost entirely covered with this loathsome eruption. It mostly passed away, however, after the teething period, and he was not seriously troubled with it again until about one year ago, when the salt rheum first appeared on his hands between his fingers, then on his limbs, then on his face and head in one solid mass. His condition was terrible. The rash resembled ivy poisoning and we at first fancied it might be something not so bad as his old troubles, but the physicians pronounced it salt rheum and made every effort without avail, to cure it. We tried a preparation widely advertised as a specific for skin diseases, but it made about as much of an impression as so much cold water might have done. You can understand the situation when I say we were in despair of obtaining real help from any source.

At this point, through the advice of Mr. J. W. Bacon, whose daughter had been cured by it, I tried KENNEDY'S FAVORITE REMEDY. This was the right and only thing at last! The skin began to heal at once, and to-day the evidences of the disease have wholly disappeared. How thankful we are Leat Doctor, I leave you to imagine. Yours,

No. 17 Terril Street J. W. BATCHELDER.

The experience of years, and the testimony of thousands demonstrate DR. DAVID KENNEDY'S FAVORITE REMEDY to be the most successful medicine for organic and blood diseases ever discovered. Prepared solely by Dr. David Kennedy, Physician and Surgeon, Roundout, N. Y.

Too Considerate.

BY R. C. [illegible]

I rowed her out on the broad bright sea,
And the land lay purple upon our lee.

The billows were trying the waves to outshine,
With never a cloud to the far sea line.

On the reefs the billows in kisses broke—
But, oh, I was dying for one small smoke.

She spoke of the gulls and the water green—
But what is Nature to Nicotine?

She spoke of the tides, and the Triston Myth;
And said Jonas was engaged to the blonde Miss Smith.

She spoke of her liking lemon on clams,
And Euclid and paralelograms.

For her face was fair and her eyes were brown
And she was a girl from Boston town.

And I rowed and thought—but I never said—
"Does Havana tobacco trouble your head?"

She talked of algæ, she talked of sand,
And I thought: "Tobacco you cannot stand?"

She talked of the ocean steamers' speed,
And I yearned for a whiff of the wicked weed.

And at last I spoke, between fight and fret:
"Would you mind if I smoked a cigarette!

She dropped her eyes on the ocean's blue,
And said: "Would you mind if I smoked too?"

A Rise in the Fall.

When the summer is departing and the year is growing old,
When the forests are assuming richest hues of red and gold,
When a softer, deeper azure tints the cloudless, noonday skies
And the sunset gives us glimpses of the walls of Paradise;
When the song-birds have departed to a region less austere
And their melody, mellifluous, greets no more the longing ear;
When the wild goose flying southward of approaching winter warns,
And the earth's ripe fruitage, garnered, safely lies in sheltering barns;
When the nights are growing chilly and more welcome is the sun—
It is then the thrifty coalman adds a dollar to the ton.—[Somerville Journal.

A WHITE VIOLET.

A white violet is the fittest emblem of my darling. Its purity is like her gentle heart, its fragrance symbolical of her sweet, lowly spirit.

Through a mist of tears, I look back upon her face as I remember it long ago.

Let me tell you how I won and lost her in the past.

I see a garden, filled with old-fashioned flowers, decking it in wild luxuriance, while the mingled scent of roses, sweet briar, mignonette seems blown to me on the evening air.

It is enclosed by a long wall, the stones of which are nearly covered by trailing sprays of ivy.

Rooted on its ledge grow many colored snapdragons, while tall hollyhooks peep over like children on tip-toe, striving to catch a glimpse of the stream below.

Slowly the great mill wheel goes round, and churning the water into yellow foam, and bright drops hang sparkling in the sunlight like jewels on its dark wood.

The miller's house is quaintly built for strength rather than beauty; but time's pencil has brightened it with various spots of color, and climbing roses envelope the rough sides, as they envyingly aspire to reach the roof, until the old building is royally mantled in bloom.

Across the stream a row of willows casts deep shadows beneath the bank, while tall poplars rise like giants in the land from between the interlacing branches, through which the purple hills are seen lying in the sunset glow.

'Twas a fair picture which saluted me, and one that has never faded from out my memory since the hour when crossing the rustice bridge above the old mill at Wandswater I saw the only woman that I have ever loved.

She was reading, and I perceived her to be quite unconscious of a stranger's observation; so for a few minutes I gazed silently on the singularly sweet countenance before me.

It drew me then like a spell—a spell which neither time nor death has ever had power to break. Many years have passed since that evening. I have mingled with the acknowledged beauties of Society, yet never have I beheld a woman's face which has thus attracted me.

It was not beautiful in correctness of feature or warmth of coloring, but purity and truth were written upon it; guileless peace smoothed the brow, softened the eyes; while the mouth wore an expression only seen in one of Raphael's Madonnas—at once so human, yet divine.

Suddenly she lifted her eyes and saw me, so I went forward—for I knew this old mill house beside which she stood was the abode I had come to seek. Some weeks of illness had brought down my strength, and the doctor who attended me had recommended the fresh air of Wandswater as likely to restore it. From him I carried a letter which he assured me (there being little accommodation for strangers in the village) would secure me a comfortable lodging in the miller's (Mr. Hayward's) [illegible] memories shrined within my heart in sacred silence, until death shall lay its solemn seal upon them.

"I suppose I must speak to Mr. Hayward to-night," I said, after a pause.

Violet was a cousin of the miller's and upon her father's early death he had adopted her. He and his wife were kindly people, who loved Violet as a daughter, and she gave back affection in return; but she had had different surroundings from her birth for her father had been an artist, and my darling was as little like her relations as is a flower to the rough prop about which it twines.

But Mr. Hayward had given me a hearty welcome, and as my love lived beneath his roof, I thought it only right to acquaint him with how matters stood between us; for as I said to Violet I did not think he suspected the fact.

"I am sure that he does not," she answered; then, in a low tone, "He will be very angry. He has an only son; for years he has cherished the desire that I should marry him."

And has this man dared to address you?" I asked my newly acquired rights as her promised husband causing me to feel furiously jealous of any one else aspiring to that position.

"He has paid me a few foolish compliments, but I do not like him at all, and he sees it. He is a wild, ungovernable man, and has a fierce temper."

"He shall never come near you now," I said tenderly, for I saw that she feared this man.

"He is expected home to-night. I I really believe he loves me in his own desperate way, so when he sees you he will be furious."

"Let him be fursous. I have won the prize. You are mine—mine, Violet!

A soft blush stole over her cheek.

"I should never have been his," she replied firmly.

A shadow passed between us and the sun. My darling started violently, and I knew the man who stood before us was my rival, John Hayward.

A maligninant smile crossed his lips and his black eyes flashed as, looking down on me lying on the turf at Violet's feet, he saw our clasped hands.

He had a baleful face, swathy of hue, and dark-brown, with masses of black hair round it. His frame was powerfully made, and as he watched us I saw his strong hands twitching restlessly, as though they itched to clutch my throat.

"Who is this, Violet?" he demanded fiercely.

I was about to answer, but she stepped before me so as to confront him; then, with her calm eyes fixed on his face, she said, "This gentleman is Mr. Howard, an my promised husband!"

John Hayward raised his hand as though to strike her, let it drop, and with a savage imprecation upon both of us, rushed away.

"Violet," I cried, "you do well to be afraid of that man: there is madness in his eyes."

She shuddered. "I know that look too well; I have often seen it. He will tell what I have said to them, and the storm will burst when we go in. Stay with me here a few more minutes; they are the last that we shall spend together in this dear old garden."

"Nonsense!" I said.

But the words were prophetic. We went in and found Mr. Hayward in a towering rage.

He strode up to me with the words, "Sir, you have abused my confidence! Violet is to be my son's wife!"

"She has chosen me in preference!" I said, quietly.

"Because during his absence you have persuaded this child that she loves you! Sir, you must now leave my house, at once!"

"If I left it this moment your son would never win her!"

"Why not? They have grown up together, and he loves her passionately! Surly, in time her heart will turn to him?"

"Never!" said my darling, emphatically, as she quietly, but firmly looked her adopted father in the face. "You have been very kind to me, and I would, If possible, respect your wishes; but I don't love John, nor shall I ever love him! Mr. Howard has won my heart; it will never swerve from him!"

In sight of them all I put my arm round her, and I saw John Hayward gnash his teeth at the act; but she was mine, my brave girl.

"Voilet," I cried. "I must leave you this night, for I cannot remain in a house where the master bids me go! Make your preparations, my dear love, for our speedy marriage! One month hence I shall come to take you home!"

"I will be ready!" came the answer.

I drew her to my breast in a long, close embrace. A few minutes later I passed over the threshold of Wandswater Mill, little dreaming of the anguished heart with which I should next cross it.

* * * * * *

It was our wedding morn. I had arranged that Violet should meet me at the railway station.

Quietly, without any festivities, we were to be married in the little church, and then I should take her away at once.

No secret was made of our plans; but Mr. and Mrs. Hayward made no comment upon them, and John maintained a sullen dogged silence.

Still, he did not press his attentions on Violet, so I was satisfied.

How happy I was as I entered the train which [illegible] to my bride! [illegible] bitter sorrow has indelibly stamped the scene upon my brain; her slender figure in its floating dress; her fair, sweet face, lovelit and glowing with soft blushes, as the morning air gently kissed her brow.

[illegible]

Thus she remained for one instant, with all her woman's love revealed in the eyes which met my ardent gaze. Then succeeded a sudden, startling expression of fear, and she was speeding madly down the path that led to the railway.

I saw her white figure in the center of the line struggling to lift or drag away some heavy object from it.

Oh, heaven! the train was close upon her!

An agonized shriek broke from my lips.

The engine driver, seeing Violet, endeavored to stop the train. Its speed slackened, it stood still; but to late for love, for youth, for beauty—too late for all save death!

But the solemn ending had come quietly to my darling, for the flying engine had flung her body outside the rails.

I found her quite unmaimed, lying white and still on the green turf beside a large mass of stone which she had lifted from the track.

I raised my love, whose life had been thus given for mine, and laid her against my breast.

A soft perfume floated toward me. I looked down. There, at her breast, was fastened a bunch of white violets, crushed by her fatal fall, yet still sending forth their sweet fragrance—fit emblem of the spotless soul which had passed away!

Unheeding those around me, I bore in my arms all that was left to me of my dear love back through the village up to the mill door.

On its threshold I met John Hayward.

"Behold your work!" I said, fiercely, knowing too well whose murderous hand had placed the stone upon the railroad.

He glared down upon the still face resting against my breast, flung up his arms, with a wild laugh, and rushed from the house—a raving maniac!

* * * * * * *

Beneath the shadow of the gray old church in which we were to have been made husband and wife my lost love sleeps.

In the spring mantle of sweet white violets covers her resting place. They seem to me like guardian angles, waiting beside her tomb until the Last Great Day shall see her once more restored to me.

RELIGIOUS READING.

Rev. Mr. Sankey of Rochester, lately returned from the Pan-Presbyterian council in Belfast, expressed the belief that "the Presbyterian churches of England Scotland and Ireland are tending toward rutualism very rapidly. This is especially so in the Scottish churches, surprising as it may seem."

The fact is noted that the attempt of Moneure D. Conway to preach a "cultured in fitelity" in London has failed much as the attempts of Felix Adler and Rev. O. B. Frothing have failed in this country, for lack of practical interest and result like them he gives up.

The total Christian population of India is 1,852,634. Of these 963,058 or more than half, are Catholics. The state expenditure for the maintenance of religion amounts to about $1,000,000 yearly, of which the church of England gets $870,000 anb the Catholic church $50,000.

Presbyterianism in Australia is not so divided as it is either here or in Scotland; but the different colonies have each churches of their own—which makes Presbyterianism divided by the colonies. Confederation of the colonies has naturally enough suggested the propriety of the union of the different Presbyterian churches. Should the union take place we shall no longer hear of the Presbytorian church of New Zealand, or of Victoria, or of Queensland, but of Australia.

The fact was brought out in the late council at Belfast that valuable writings of John Wycliffe now lie in manuscript in the universities of Prague and Vienna. Dr. McCosh, Dr. Briggs and others advocated the bringing out of these writings, and the council authorized a committee to make arrangements to publish them. This committee will act in concert with the movement already begun under the patronage of the lord mayor of London and the Wycliffe society to raise funds for the publication.

THERE was quite a Maine crowd in the Fifth Avenue hotel lobbies all day Friday. They were headed Hannibal Hamlin and Congressman Reed. The venerable Hamlin smoked black cigars and stood about all day, showing no more fatigue than a young man. This old man who is now in the neighborhood of 80, intends to go to Ohio to make several speeches. He still wears his dress coat of 1840, and up to this day has never commited the weakness of wearing flannels or an overcoat.—New York Sun.

THE number of deaths from cholera in Itely already exceeds by 1,000 the total number in France, where it first began its ravages. Owing to the unfavorable latitude of Naples the disease is very likely to rage there for a month to come though with diminishing force. The lower temperature of the advancing season will favor the efforts to deal with the epidemic and bring it under control, and its ravages may be gradually restricted until it works itself out. It is still spreading from town to town in Southern France and in Spain, though the rapidity of its movement is checked. The winter will doubtless extinguish the plague, but the seeds of infection are almost sure to survive, and the necessity for watchfulness against their importation will not cease until another warm season comes. It has heretofore been the second summer that witnesses its outbreak in this country.—[New York Times.

AT LITTLE FALLS.

LITTLE FALLS, Sept. 22.—CHEESE.—Prices have made another material advance, showing upon the average one-half cent better rates than a week ago. This was sufficient to secure a quite free sale by factorymen generally, and yet the sales do not aggregate a large amount; this is due to great shrinkage in production. To-day's shipments will leave but small amounts of the August cheese upon the factory shelves. The late August make has done rather better in price to-day than that made early in the month. Quality in general is well maintained; the heated stock is now closed out. Dairymen anticipate still further advances in price, as another week will show considerable amounts of fine September in the market. Transactions are:—

Physicians are constantly ordering consumptive patients to the Pine Woods; we have succeeded in bringing all the virtues and vital principles of the "Pineries" to the invalid at home—accomplishing what many have long tried to do. We have demonstrated the perfect solubility of the tar, and thereby its ready absorbtion into the system—by a much more rapid and general power than merely inhaling the air of the Pineries. It is perfectly safe to be taken as the case may require—small and frequent doses being most effectual in allaying the existent irritability. Sold by the Popular Druggist, Charles Gieder, Fulton, N. LIFTED OUT.

In what way a Waterulcit Farmer was Sent Back to his Plow.

Leaving the cars of the New York Central Railroad at a pretty little station called Kamer, and driving three miles back in the country, you reach the fine, well kept farm of Mr. Jacob Cardell, Deputy Sheriff and Commissioner of Highways for the town of Watervleit. In the sunshine of a bright day last summer a traveler who had heard something of his history, visited Mr. Cardell, and said as he marked the hale appearance of the farmer: "Can you be the man whom they told me of in Albany as having been almost raised from the dean?"

"Perhaps I'm not quite entitled to that distinction," he answered half laughing, "but I was lifted out of a serious situation, that is certain For fifteen years I had kidney disease in the worst form. I obtained but little rest day or night, so extreme was the pain in the small of my back. I tossed upon my bed, as pititable an object as ever attracted the sympathy or excited the disgust of a sound man. Of course my business was neglected and my farm went to rack. All this came from catching cold in a camping out expedition, and I came near camping out in the cemetary as the end of all."

"If the doctors couldn't cure you—as I assume they couldn't—what on earth did you do?"

"Well help came to me; I didn't go for it One day when in Albany a druggist said: 'Cardel don't surrender yet. Try Dr. David Kennedy' FAVORITE REMEDY—a famous medicine sen up from Rondout, N. Y.' I did and it cured me I owe everything to D. Kennedy and his medicine It has recalled me to life and labor. You may tell the world so, if you like,"

A CURE FOR GRAVEL.

A Common and Painful Complaint—A Statement You May Confide in.

It seems to have been reserved for Dr. David Kennedy, Rondout, N. Y., to accomplish through his preparation widely known as KENNEDY'S FAVORITE REMEDY, what others have failed to compass. The subjoined letter will be found of vital interest to sufferers from gravel and to the general public:

ALBANY, March 20, 1884.

Dr. David Kennedy, Roundout, N. Y.

DEAR SIR; Let me tell you frankly that I have never been partial to proprietary medicines, as I believe the majority of them to be nothing better than methods of obtaining money from people whom suffering makes ready to catch at any hope of relief. They are mean cheats and delusions. But your FAVORITE REMEDY I know by happy experience to be a totally different thing. I had been a sufferer from gravel for years, and had resorted to many eminent physicians for relief, but no permanent good came of it. About three year ago your FAVORITE RMEDY was recommended to me. I can give you the result in a sentence; I tried it and it cured me completely. I am confident it saved my life. You can use this letter if you think best. Yours, etc.,

NATHAN ACKLEY.

Captain Nathan Ackley was for a long time connected with the Canal Appraiser's office in Albany. He is well known and writes for no purpose but to do good to others.

As a medicine for disease of the Blood, Liver, Kidneys, and digestiqe organs, KENNEDY'S FAVORITE REMEDY oas fairly won its high reputation. Write if desirable to Dr. David Kennedy, Rondout, N. Y.

[illegible] introducing the speaker. Notwithstanding the inclement weather a crowded house applauded the excellent speech of Col. Barker. The tariff and all of the other noticeable issues were thoroughly and eloquently discussed. One of the features of the speech was the entire absence of political abuse so often resorted to by campaign orators. The Blaine and Logan club was in attendance one hundred strong in uniform and made a fine appearance. As soon as seated three rousing cheers and a tiger for the tickets were given. A glee club comprised of twelve members sang three enspiring songs. The announcement that James G. Blaine would be at the fair Thursday was cheered to the echo.

The Fulton Amature band accompanied the club to the Opera House and executed some fine selections before the opening of the meeting.

The following named gentlemen were elected Vice-Presidents and Secretaries:

President, Capt. E. S. Cook; Vice-Presidents—Dr. W. A. Hall, D. W. Gardner, Geo. M. Case, David Ramsden, Wm. G. Gage, John W. Pratt, L. B. Babcock, J. J. Fort, Henry E. Fulton Reading Circle.

The members of the Fulton Reading Circle together with a few invited guests met last Monday evening, to celebrate the eighth anniversary of the society, at the residence of the President, Mrs. C. M. Lee. After a finely rendered musical selection by Miss Lizzie Lee, the literary entertainment of the evening was opened by the report of the Secretary, Miss Ellen Emerick, which briefly reviewed the gatherings of the past year. This was followed by a rapid resume of the course in French History by Mrs. D. W. Gardner. Mrs. Ramsden varied the programme with an original poem. The report of the committee on French literature was then made by Mrs. E. French. The reports of the year's work bear witness to much thorough and careful study on the part of the members. The recitation of a poem by Miss Mary Lawrence, Lowell's "Description of a Summer Storm" closed the literary entertainment of the evening. After a few congratulatory remarks by the President, a pleasant social hour was spent. At the request of those present, Mrs. Ramsden kindly consented to the publication of her poem, which we give below:

The reading society's session is past
And bread on the waters each member has cast,
The seed time we all most delightful have found
And the season for harvest will surely come round·
Our case the Scotch proverb will certainly touch
Which says, "many littles must aye make a much,"
And to Pope's fatal dogma our faith we'll near bring
Of "Drink deep or taste not the Pierian spring."
The mind like the body rejects this regime—
So we'll vote this famed paradox, folly extreme.
As 'tis better to have half a loaf than no bread,
We will take the half loaf if we can't be full-fed.

The hotel Rainbouillet and its scudery clique
Were the subject of many a scornful critique.
They—"the Precieuses Ridicules" Moliere drew—
Those laughed at by the many, admired by the few,
They might be conceited, pretentious and vain
But refinement for grossness was surely a gain.
Let those laugh that win shall still be our creed
And to our modest efforts let all wish God speed.
'Tis said a fresh wrinkle is made in the brain
For each new idea that it's owner may gain—
If the face shared this fate, there is good cause to fear—

Such meetings as these would at once disappear—
For we do not love wrinkles, while beauty we prize
'Tis the letter of Marque which men dare not despise,
They surrender at once without any pretence
Of being taken captive by virtue or sense.
So we value the power of reprisal—why not?
And try to preserve all that falls to our lot.
But beauty untrained, like the wild growing flower
Soon withers—'tis culture gives good staying power.
It sweeps off mental cobwebs, makes the mind's eye more clear,
Adorning, not damaging woman's true sphere.
Then go forward and fear not, nor halt by the way
Nor be frightened at what Mrs. Grundy may say.
But if we decide to wear stockings of blue
Let us not ostentatiously force them in view,
Yet as skirts are now short, by our fate will abide
If they prove insufficient our stockings to hide.

When Scarron of old his companions invited
Each guest brought a dish and the feast was united
And now to a feast we our meetings compare
A pic-nic like Scarrons, where each brings his share
But the fare must be mixed or dyspepsia ensues
And instead of bright health we get fits of the blues.
Mr. Gradgrind's pure facts proved a starvation diet
Which made poor mathematical Tommy run riot.
By metallurgy and the whole circle of science
For Louisa, all fancy was set at defiance,
While Bitzer, the much-praised prize boy of that school
Was a first-class sneak, liar, traitor and fool.

Give facts, dates and statistics their own humble grade,
To high thoughts, in choice words, let high honor be paid.
To philosophy give her own time-honored place,
Let the sunshine of honor illumine each face,
Let the poet's strong wing fan the fogs of low case
And raise us to breathe a more purified air.

This good varied food at our feast you will find
A problem suited to strengthen the mind.
The "piece de resistance" our history proves,
The Belles-Letters of all countries supply the removes.
For dessert, wit and humor are found in our store

Speaking of the recent frost the Phoenix Register says; "It killed almost everything that was green and made improvident young men without underclothes and no overcoat in prospect feel extremely chilly. It made beer unpopular and brought woolen stockings to the front with a rush. The only things not affected by the frost were the cider crop and politics. Both go merrily on.

Lightning Rod Company.

So much has been said and written about lightning rod swindlers that most every person looks upon one of these agents with suspicion, and well they may. We have now in our village L. P. ASSEMBLY NOMINATION.

Henry C. Howe of Fulton Receives the Nomination.—The Blaine and Logan Club Serenade Him.

For the second time within the past few weeks Fulton has been honored with the nomination of a candidate for an important office. At the Republican county convention our esteemed townsman S. B. Mead Esq., received the nomination of district attorney. Last Friday at the Republican assembly convention held at St. James hall in the city of Oswego, Henry C. Howe of this village received the nomination for member of assembly from this district. The convention was called to order by Colonel A. Cropsey, and the Hon. N. W. Nutting was made chairman. After the usual preliminaries the Hon. D. C. Littlejohn arose and, after referring to his work in the Assembly, called attention to the fact that the surrounding towns had never been fairly dealt with in the assembly nominations, and that Volney came there presenting one of her ablest citizens, and in justice to the town he nominated Henry C. Howe, of this village as member of Assembly, and moved that his nomination be made unanimous. D. P. Lester seconded the nomination which was made unanimous.

Mr. Howe was born in the town of Granby. His early education was obtained at Falley Seminary in this village. He then entered Hamilton from which institution he graduated. Mr. Howe then commenced the study of law and was admitted to the bar in 1858. After being admitted he located in this village where he has since followed his profession successfully. Mr. Howe has been a representative from the town several times as supervisor which office he performed to the satisfaction of all. He will have the undivided support of the Republicans throughout the county.

At about 8 o'clock upon the evening of Mr. Howe's nomination the Blaine and Logan club of this village about sixty strong headed by the Fulton Amateur Band and equipped with uniforms and torches, marched to his residence and seranaded him. The Blaine and Logan glee club discoursed some fine music which was followed by an appropriate address from Mr. Howe. In his remarks he said "he had not sought the office but that it belonged to the towns of Volney and Granby."

A large banner was carried in the procession bearing the following inscription: "Our next Member of Assembly, Henry C. Howe."

In the main hall which always is the centre of attraction every inch of space is taken, and the hall presents an appearance of indescribable beauty. We will give a brief sketch of some of the exhibits.

F. E. BACON.

Passing into the hall from the east wing one is agreeably surprised at the gorgeous display of dry goods, millinery, rugs, fancy goods and carpets, made by our popular merchant F. E. Bacon, who has outdone himself this year. The floor is covered with superb carpet, and rugs and drapery are strewn promiscously about. Hours could be spent in examining these lovely articles of use. The ladies will do well to visit Mr. Bacon's exhibit.

JAMES MCCARTHY.

Directly accross from Mr. Bacon's display is that of James McCarthy of Oswego, the prince China merchant of Northern New York. His exhibit is unsurpassed in the quality and arrangement of goods. Without McCharthy's display the fair would be deprived of one of its grandest attractions.

THOMAS KINGSFORD.

From the centre of the hall through to the end of the south entrance is occupied by Thomas Kingsford of Oswego—the same booth he had a year ago. His exhibit of dry goods, carpets, etc., is simply immense and cannot help but catch the eye.

M. V. CONNELL.

M. V. Connell our enterprising shoe merchant has an attractive display in the centre of the hall of boots and shoes of all grades and sizes. Mr. Connell deserves much credit for the efforts put forth in making so good a show,

JOHN HADCOCK.

Near the centre of the hall is noticed John Hadcock's grand display of books and stationary. The artistic arrangement of his goods cannot but create an eulogistic feeling toward the young man. A brief history of the Oswego Falls Agricultural Society printed on an elegant card is being donated by Mr. Hadcock to the many who visit his booth,

M. M. WILLIAMS.

Our popular druggist M. M. Williams is at his old place in the centre of the hall with a beautiful exhibit of toilet and fancy articles.

LINDSAY & BULLOCK.

Lindslay & Bullock, the New York store of Oswego are not behind in their magnificent display of dry goods etc. They are located near the centre, of the hall.

ALMON BRISTOL.

In the west end of the hall Almon Bristol is well represented. The air in this locacity is filled with sweet music which of course comes from Bristol's instruments. His pianos and organs are of the best make. Lap robes of various desgns, also the singer sewing maching helps to make up his great display.

PECK & SCHILLING.

Peck & Schilling, music dealers of Oswego are also making a fine exhibit. Pianos, organs, sewing machines, etc, are well represented at their stand in the north end.

N. V. POUCHER & CO.

VON FRANKENBURG & CO.

The Famous Opera Clothing House of Syracuse, Messrs. Von Frankenburg & Co., proprietors of the only exhibit of clothing in the hall. They are located in the west end in the same booth as last year. Their display is excellent and is being visited by crowds who are amazed at the low prices and fine quality of goods.

BUCK & HUNTER.

The rich display of furniture this firm are giving the people will not be forgotten. They are in the south wing of the main building.

Our hardware merchants are all well represented in the stove hall. Geo. Johnston, J. H. Woodin, J. J. Wright, and Sheridan Bros., each have exhibits in stoves and hardware that it is worth ones while to look through. The poultry exhibit up stairs in the hall is also an attractive feature of the fair.

A fine exhibit of fancy work is noticeable up stairs. Mrs. N. Soule of Syracuse has as nice an exhibition as one wishes to gaze upon, also some very handsome oil paintings. Master Harry Butler has a fine display of stuffed birds which attract the attention of many. Noticeable among the exhibits on the floor is that of A.D. Perry & Co, of Syracuse. Opening of the Rink·

About 500 people assembled in the new roller skating rink last evening to witness the grand opening. The weather was not very favorable but the managers expressed themselves as being satisfied with the attendance. Unfortunately they were disappointed with their lights which was rather annoying for all. About 150 pairs of skates were engaged during the evening. The rink was tastefully decorated and presented a fine appearance. The audience was composed of many of our best citizens. The fancy skating by Messrs Bogart and Eno of Binghamton, was graceful as well as difficult. They were loudly applauded. On account of poor lights the most arduous feats was postponed until this evening. For an evenings enjoyment the rink is the place to visit.

SPECIAL BARGAINS.

To be Found Every Day and Evening at McCarthy's China Hall.

As China Hall it is proposed to clear the decks for the fall campaign and for this reason the bargains are better than ever. This is saying a great deal of a house which has always been famous for selling goods lower than any other crockery firm in Central or Northern New York. But Mr. McCarthy does not believe in allowing goods to get stale on his hands and keeping up his principle of always showing a constant succession of novelties. He is disposing of staple goods at even lower rates than before. This reduction is not confined to a few articles as is too often the case, but is general throughout the store. This is especially the case in regard to the common grades of crockery. The season for stocking up for the fall is at hand and McCarthy wants room and is going to have it and the way to get it is to sell better goods than other firms at lower figures. We might refer to particular lines of goods and point out special bargains but that would be a task of too great labor. The proper way to find out whether McCarthy does as he advertises is to go to China Hall, No's. 2 and 4 Jefferson block, Oswego, and take a look through the immense stock, and, if, after you have done so, you do not say that McCarthy does even more than he advertises, you are hard to satisfy. You will surely find something suited to your taste.

THE CENTURY CO. NEW YORK, N. Y.

THE SUN.

NEW YORK, 1884.

About sixty million copies of THE SUN have gone out of our establishment the past twelve months.

If you were to paste end to end all the columns of The Suns printed and sold last year you would get a continuous strip of interesting information, common sense wisdom, sound doctrine and sane wit long enough to reach from Printing House Square to the top of Mount Copernicus in the Moon then back to Printing House Square, and then, three-quarters of the way back to the Moon again.

But The Sun is written for the inhabitants of the earth; this same strip of intelligence would girdle the globe twenty-seven or twenty-eight times.

If every buyer of a copy of The Sun during the past year has spent only one hour over it, and if his wife or grandfather has spent another hour this newspaper in 1883 has afforded the human race thirteen thousand years of steady reading, night and day.

It is only by little calculations like these that you can form any idea of the circulation of the most popular of American newspapers, or of its influence on the opinions and actions of American men and women.

The Sun is and will continue to be, a newspaper which tells the truth without fear of consequences, which gets at the facts no matter how much the process costs, which presents the news of all the world without waste of words and in the most readable shape, which is working with all its heart for the cause of honest government, and which therefore believes that the Republican party must go in the coming year of our Lord, 1884.

If you know The Sun, you like it already, and you will read it with accustomed diligence and profit during what is sure to be the most interesting year in its history. If you do not yet know The Sun it is high time to get into the sunshine.

[illegible] the Sun, well [illegible] Deputy Sheriff and Commissioner of Highways for the town of Watervliet. In the [illegible] of a bright day last summer a [illegible] who had heard something of his history, visited Mr. Cardell, and said as he marked the hale appearance of the farmer: "Can you be the man whom they told me of in Albany as having been almost raised from the dead?"

"Perhaps I'm not quite entitled to that distinction," he answered half laughing, "but I was lifted out of a serious situation, that is certain. For fifteen years I had kidney disease in the worst form. I obtained but little rest day or night, so extreme was the pain in the small of my back. I tossed upon my bed, as pitiable an object as ever attracted the sympathy or excited the disgust of a sound man. Of course my business was neglected and my farm went to rack. All this came from catching cold in a camping out expedition, and I came near camping out in the cemetery as the end of all."

"If the doctors couldn't cure you—as I assume they couldn't—what on earth did you do?"

"Well help came to me; I didn't go for it. One day when in Albany a druggist said: 'Cardel don't surrender yet. Try Dr. David Kennedy' FAVORITE REMEDY—a famous medicine sent up from Rondout, N. Y.' I did and it cured me. I owe everything to D. Kennedy and his medicine. It has recalled me to life and labor. You may tell the world so, if you like."

—If farm implements can not be painted, brush them over occasionally with crude petroleum.

—Wisconsin hop growers sow buckwheat in their yards, upon which the lice will feed in preference to the hops.

—There is room for a live young man in every neighborhood who knows how to deal with the insect pests of the farm.

—An occasional sprinkling of water on the celery plants will help them during this month, as they require quite an amount of moisture.

—Poultry can not be made to pay unless provided with a properly arranged house for their accommodation. This is as necessary to their well being as it is that horses and cattle should have a good stable.

—A daub of tar on the noses of sheep is an effective preventive against the attack of annoying grubs. The sheep grub is not always fatal, but very disagreeable, and doubtless has a bad effect on the general health of the animal.

—An exchange remarks that the proper time to gather the apple is when the stem loosens readily from the limb, and potatoes should be gathered when the tubers loosen readily from the stalk, which may not be until some time after the tops are dry and dead.

—When we pulverize the ground to a great depth the warm air comes in contact with a body cooler than itself, the water in the soil condensing into drops, which partially answers in place of rain. The deeper we pulverize, therefore, the greater the amount of moisture collected.

Tillage and manure seem to go together or are intimately connected. Complete success can not be looked for without both. However strong the tendency on the part of mankind to avoid labor it must be remembered that it has been proved that, as a rule, crops will not perfect themselves without attention.

Advice to a Young Man.

And, then, remember, my son, you have to work. Whether you handle a pick or a pen, a wheelbarrow or a set of books, digging ditches or editing a paper, ringing an auction bell, or writing funny things, you must work. If you look around you, son, you will see that the men who are the most able to live the rest of their days without work are the men who worked the hardest. Don't be afraid of killing yourself with work, son. It is beyond your power to do that. Men cannot work so hard as that on the sunny side of thirty. They die sometimes, but it's because they quit work at 6 p. m. and don't get home until 2 a. m. —It's the interval that kills, my son. The work gives you an appetite for your meals, it lends solidity to your slumbers, it gives you a perfect appreciation of a holiday. There are young men who do not work, my son; but the world is not proud of them. It does not know their names, even; it simply speaks of them as old so-and-so's boys. Nobody likes them, nobody hates them; the great busy world doesn't even know that they are there. So find out what you want to be and do, son, and take off your coat and make a dust in the world. The busier you are the less deviltry you will be apt to get into, the sweeter will be your sleep, the brighter and happier your holidays, the better satisfied will the world be with you.—[Hawkeye.

The Duty of Rest.

We hold that it is is a breach of good faity for a pastor who is given a vacation for rest and recuperation to spend that time in hard study, and return to his flock with less reserve force and physical vigor than when he left. We hold that it is a sin against himself and against his family for any man to keep up a constant grind through the year. We believe in hard work, preach it, and try to practice what we preach; we also believe in taking rest at least once a year, in laying aside for a time all mental work harder than the reading of a little good poetry or a good novel, and spending all the time possible in the open-air in some work or recreation that will harden the muscles, expand the lungs and give the mind a good rest. It pays to lie fallow for a little time in this way. Experience has demonstrated that a man can do more manual labor in six days a week, taking the year through, than he can by working seven; and a man can do more mental work in eleven months than in twelve, taking a series of years together.—[The Examiner.

How Watch Cases are Made.

In buying a silver watch case great care should be taken to secure one that is solid silver throughout. The cap of most cheap silver cases is made of a composition known as albata, which is a very poor substitute for silver, as it turns black in a short time. The backs of such cases are made much thinner than those of an all silver case, being robbed in order to make the cap thicker and get in as much as possible of the cheap metal. Another important point in a silver case is the joints or hinges, which should be made of gold. Those of most cheap cases are made of silver, which is not a suitable metal for that purpose. In a brief period it warps, bends and spreads apart, allowing the backs to become loose upon the case and admitting the dust and dirt that accummulate in the pocket. The Keystone Silver Watch Cases are only made with silver caps and gold joints.

In our long and varied experience [illegible] we cannot but acknowledge and give our testimony that the Keystone Solid Silver Watch Cases are the best made to our knowledge. Having no soldering they remain homogeneous, harder and stiffer than they would be were they heated for soldering, and have more resisting power against pressure than any other cases in the market. A Common and Painful Complaint—A Statement You May Confide in.

It seems to have been reserved for Dr. David Kennedy, Rondout, N. Y., to accomplish through his preparation widely known as KENNEDY'S FAVORITE REMEDY, what others have failed to compass. The subjoined letter will be found of vital interest to sufferers from gravel and to the general public:

ALBANY, March 20, 1884.

Dr. David Kennedy, Rondout, N. Y.

DEAR SIR: Let me tell you frankly that I have never been partial to proprietary medicines, as I believe the majority of them to be nothing better than methods of obtaining money from people whom suffering makes ready to catch at any hope of relief. They are mean cheats and delusions. But your FAVORITE REMEDY I know by happy experience to be a totally different thing. I had been a sufferer from gravel for years, and had resorted to many eminent physicians for relief, but no permanent good came of it. About three year ago your FAVORITE RMEDY was recommended to me. I can give you the result in a sentence; I tried it and it cured me completely. I am confident it saved my life. You can use this letter if you think best. Yours, etc.,

NATHAN ACKLEY.

Captain Nathan Ackley was for a long time connected with the Canal Appraiser's office in Albany. He is well known and writes for no purpose but to do good to others.

As a medicine for disease of the Blood, Liver, Kidneys, and digestive organs, KENNEDY'S FAVORITE REMEDY has fairly won its high reputation. Write if desirable to Dr. David Kennedy, Rondout, N. Y.

[illegible] YEAR. 45 FULTON, OSWEGO COUNTY, N. Y., WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 1, 1884. SINGLE COPY

Mary's Little Lamb Lammed.

Mary had a little dude
He [illegible], he said;
And everywhere that Mary went
This little dude she led.

So Mary went to church one day
And said she'd walk alone;
But, to her papa's great surprise,
This dude he followed her home.

The stern old judge espied this dude
That monkeyed with Mary Jane;
And it made the children laugh and shout
To see pa use his cane.

The judge stood on the burning deck;
The dude stood on his head;
The flame that lit the battle wreck
Showed Mary her dude was dead!

You Kissed Me.

MISS JOSEPHINE SLOCUM HUNT.

You kissed me! My forehead drooped low on your breast,
With a feeling of shelter and infinite rest,
While the holy emotion my tongue dared not speak
Flushed up like a flame from my heart to my cheek;
Your arms held me fast, oh! your arms were so bold;
Heart beat against heart in their passionate hold.
Your glances seemed drawing my soul through my eyes,
As the sun draws the mist from the sea to the skies.
And your lips clung to mine 'till I prayed in my bliss
They might never unclasp from that rapturous kiss.

You kissed me! My heart and my breath and my will
In delirious joy for the moment stood still;
Life had for me then no temptations, no charms,
No visions of pleasure outside of your arms.
And were I this instant an angel possessed
Of the joy and the peace that are given the blest,
I would fling my white robes unrepiningly down,
And tear from my forehead its beautiful crown,
To nestle once more in that haven of rest,
With your lips upon mine, and your head on my breast.

You kissed me! My soul, in a bliss so divine,
Reeled and swooned like a drunken man foolish with wine;
And I thought 'twere delicious to die there, if death
Would come while my lips were yet moist with your breath.
'Twere delicious to die, if my heart might grow cold
While your arms wrapped me round in that passionate fold.
And these are the questions I ask day and night;
Must my lips taste but once such exquisite delight,
Would you care if your breast was my shelter as then
And if you were here would you kiss me again?

DAISY'S LOVE.

BY S. B.

"There!" said Herbert Winfield.

He was sitting on the sunny south doorstep of the great, fragrant, hay-scented barn, where the sunbeams interlaced each other like slender, waving threads of gold, and the boughs of the old button-ball tree moved softly in the summer breeze.

He was a bright-eyed, bright-faced young fellow, dressed in a cool, white linen suit, with the glitter of a diamond stud at his throat, and slender, shapely hands—and close beside him Daisy Wallace sat with the pretty hands folded on her lap.

She was a daisy by nature as well as by name—a fresh-faced, sunny-haired little creature, whose big brown eyes were shaded by long, dark lashes, and whose nose turned up at the end the least bit in the world, giving a roguish espieglerie to the whole expression of her countenance.

"How did you do it?" said Daisy, with her scarlet lips apart and the brown eyes limbed with interest.

"Oh, I managed," said Herbert.

He had split a tiny gold dollar in two and wrought a hole in each, through which he had passed slender blue ribbons.

"Do you like them, Daisy?"

"Very much."

"Then you shall wear one and I the other, as pledges of our engagement."

Daisy blushed and laughed as Herbert suspended the golden trinket round her neck, and then glanced down at the broad engagement ring that circled the forefinger of her left hand, Herbert's eye following her look.

"You do not regret it, Daisy?"

"Regret it? No, Herbert!"

"Because, Daisy, you are so young!"

"I am not too young to know my own mind, Herbert," she said, with an assumption of dignity which was very pretty to look upon. "I was sixteen last week!"

Sixteen! Daisy Wallace felt all the dignity of her mature years. Sixteen years old and engaged!

And they sat there, under the shadow of the button-ball tree, with the fragrance of the new hay coming ever and anon to their senses, talking of the house which was one day to be theirs, and even deciding, in boy and girl fashion, what was to be the color of their carpets, and the special flowers to be planted in the garden, and even the pattern of the antique furniture which was to decorate Herbert's library!

"How foolish we are," he said at length, starting up with a laugh.

"Yes; but it is very pleasant to be foolish," Daisy answered, smiling and blushing in the same instant.

Yet, engaged lovers though they were, Daisy had a woman's coquettish little instincts, and in the course of time they brought trouble between the young [illegible].

"I don't like it, Daisy," Herbert said [illegible].

"That's because you are so old-fashioned in your ideas," said Daisy, erect[illegible] slight figure, to look as dignified [illegible] all the girls are delighted [illegible]

[illegible]

Daisy pouted and tore the petals off the bunch of roses she wore at her belt.

"You will not encourage him any more, Daisy?" pleaded Herbert after a moment of silence.

"I have not encouraged him, Herbert."

"At all events," Herbert Winfield answered, "you know how I feel upon the subject now, and I trust you will respect my opinions."

He went away, for the first time during their engagement, without a kiss, and Daisy, standing there on the piazza, thought how very unreasonable Herbert Winfield was growing.

But a pretty girl of sixteen cannot always regulate her freaks and fancies, as if she were a staid matron of six-and forty—and the very next day Miss Daisy allowed herself to be coaxed to a picnic party, where Mr. Revere Sykesleigh was one of the principal actors, and, of course, Mr. Sykesleigh, being to a certain degree responsible for her presence, was obliged, not at all unwillingly, to see her there.

"And, as ill luck would have it, she was just driving up to the door, sitting by Mr. Sykesleigh's side, when Herbert Winfield entered the gate. He turned instantly away.

"Herbert," she called, leaning over the side of the carriage, "Herbert!"

But he either did not hear her or would not heed, and Daisy was too proud to repeat the call.

"Let him go she thought to herself, with provoked dignity. "He will come back soon enough."

Here, however, was where Miss Daisy, miscalculated the relative strength of a man's pride and a man's love! Herbert waited for her to send for him—she waited for him to come, and neither of these events transpired. At the end of a month he wrote her a brief, cold note, of farewell; she answered it by enclosing the engagement ring without a word of comment.

"But I won't send the little gold dollar," she thought, with an involuntary pang at her heart. "He will never think of that!"

How many engagements that might have ripened into a long life of mutual happiness are broken just so! Alas! did we know all life's secrets, how soft our hearts would grow toward one another!

Ten years afterward, and Daisy Wallace, far away from her tree-bowered country home, was standing beside a meager fire of carefully-husbanded coals, her hands clasped thoughtfully before her, after the old, girlish fashion she had not yet forgotten.

"I don't like to part with it, mother," she said, sadly; "It was papa's present, in the old days."

"We can remember papa without any such relics, Daisy," Mrs. Wallace answered, "and we need the money."

Daisy took down the little clock, with its carved garland of ivy leaves, from which the dial peeped, with gilded hands and figures traced in dainty enamels.

"I suppose it must go," she sighed, "but I should like to keep it."

Nevertheless Daisy put on her shawl and bonnet and wrapped the tiny clock in fragments of brown paper, as if it had been a human creature.

The keeper of the second-hand curiosity shop was not at all anxious to buy the clock. "He had plenty of such trifles on hand already," he said; "they did not sell well, but to oblige the lady he would let her have a dollar for it."

"A dollar!"

"And that's more than it's really worth," the sly Jew answered.

What was Daisy to do? What can a poor, forlorn woman do when all the knaves and and cheats in the world conspire against her? Only submit—and so Daisy left the clock and went slowly home with the dirty one-dollar bill in her portmonie.

The Jew put the clock in his window, chuckling to himself over his excellent bargain as he did so, and it was not long before a customer arrived.

Herbert Winfield wanted just such a picturesque little piece of carving for his library mantel—the very mantel he and Daisy had talked about years ago, and he promptly walked in and asked the price.

"Ten dollars, sir—and cheap at that!" the dealer answered. "Look at the carvings!"

And Herbert paid the ten dollars and took the little clock home.

"It finishes up that side of the room very nicely," Herbert thought. "Stay—I have half a mind to try how it would look on the bracket over the table!"

As he lifted it down, something seemed to click on the top of the case, below the carved wreath of ivy leaves—something so hidden and obscure that even the shrewd eyes of the Jew dealer had failed to perceive its presence.

Herbert Winfield, his curiosity somewhat piqued, unscrewed the top, and there, on the dusty case, lay a slender blue ribbon, as if it had some time been caught there, with a split gold dollar attached to its azure fillet!

Winfield started and colored, and his heart throbbed! It was as if Daisy's own voice had called to him, out of the depths of the past! He was never one who took heed of signs or omens—and this was a sign he could not disregard!

Straight to the curiosity shop he went.

"Who sold you that clock?" he asked. "The little French clock with the garland of ivy leaves around the top, I mean!"

The Jew turned to his book with a [illegible] which was [illegible] [illegible] of Winfield's [illegible] mood.

[illegible]

How the old times come back to him as he entered and saw Daisy sitting all alone at the window, sewing wearily away at some coarse work.

She rose up, with a little shriek.

"Herbert!"

"Yes, Daisy, it is I! Are you sorry to see me?"

"Oh, no, no!" she sobbed. "I am so glad. I thought everybody had forgotten me!"

"Did you suppose I could ever forget you Daisy?"

He listened to the story of reverse and trouble which she had to tell with a tender sympathy which soothed her like the touch of a friendly hand.

"Why did you not send to me, Daisy?" he asked, almost reproachfully.

"I thought you did not care for me any more, Herbert!"

"Look in my eyes, Daisy, and tell me what you think now!"

She glanced shyly up—then her look fell!

"What do they tell you, Daisy? Do they speak the the secret of my heart, and say that I love you still as dearly as ever? Daisy, you will come back to my heart."

He drew out the gold coin, hanging from its faded ribbon, and extended it smilingly toward her.

"Oh, Herbert! I have missed it and wept over it so often! Where did you find it?"

He told her, adding: "It is a golden link, dearest, to bind our two hearts together; a little guide which has led me back to your side, after all these years of estrangement!"

When Mrs. Wallace returned from her brief absence, she found Daisy once more the betrothed bride of Herbert Winfield. The ten years of trial and poverty were but a dream that had passed away, and round Daisy's neck hung, as of old, the talisman she had not seen for such a weary while—the tiny gold dollar on its ribbon of blue!

The "course of true love" had not run smoothly, but it was true love, and so it came right at last!

FASHION NOTES.

The newest Jerseys have vests of kid of light tan or leather color.

The rough twilled serges are in great favor for English tailor suits.

In combination suits the vest, collar and cuffs are frequently made of red velvet.

Ladies once more rejoice in the flat outside pocket sewn on the left side of their gowns.

Fancy feathers successfully rival the much more graceful ostritch tips and plumes at present.

For girls sugar loaf hats in crimson, dark blue and other colors are popular for school wear.

Plaids in olive-green gold, crimson and bronze are used for girls school dresses, with plain Jersey waists.

The long laid away locket or pendant is now brought forward and worn on a velvet neckband, with evening dresses.

Plain white satin is the favorite choice for bridal dresses, the fronts enriched with pearl embroidery and lace flounces.

Velvet ribbon, with the reverse side of either satin or ottoman is the first choice for the cockades of ribbon loops placed on the new bonnets.

A long filled sacque, of black velvet, single breasted and buttoned its entire length and trimmed with fur or feathers will be a stylish wrap for winter wear.

Combination dresses for autumn and winter are maid of three different materials, two of which are wool, and the third velvet, usually of different color from the others.

A coming novelty which will have the effect of the richest embroidery, will be a combination of chenille, colored jet and gold cord in the form of garniture for elaborate dresses.

The soutache skirt is a new fancy, and is maid by covering the lower skirt with lengthwise rows of mohair braid, sewed on one edge, and placed near together but not quite touching. This skirt is worn with simple apron drapery.

A Few Thoughts on the Tariff Question.

To the Editor of The [illegible]:

Free Trade as one has said, favors the restriction of the functions of government to the narrowest limits consistant with the establishment and maintainance of liberty and order, the protection of life and prosperity, the dispensation of justice and the providing for the common defence and the public wellfare of the people governed. It means the free commerce of the world and the highest right of 'prosperity; the right to sell where goods will sell best; the right to buy where one can buy cheapest.

In this article the term free trade will be used in the same sense in which it is used in the political issues of the day: that there should be no greater tax upon imports than is sufficient to pay the necessary expenses of government. In other words, a tariff for revenue only. Protectionists argue, in opposition to this doctrine, that important industries of our country which are unable to compete with foreign manufactures, should be protected: that there shall be such a duty upon imports as will permit the home manufacturer to compete with the foreign market: that the tariff shall be, not only for revenue, but protective,

Suppose that from the superiority of her mines England can produce iron cheaper than America and that from a difference in climate and soil America can produce wheat at less cost than England. Suppose that England can produce iron at $5 per ton and, wheat at $1.00 per bushel and that America can produce iron at $6 per ton and wheat at 80cts. per bushel. It is evident that a free exchange of products would result in a greater production of iron in England and less in America and a less production of wheat in England and greater in America. There would also result a reduction in the price of iron in America and a slight rise in England, a decrease in the cost of wheat in England and a rise in America. The important fact in the argument is this: Labor would in each case be withdrawn from those channels in which it was being expended at a continuous loss and would be employed in fields producing continuous gain. In the case of wheat the loss to English labor employed in cultivating wheat would equal the difference in the cost of producing wheat in England and the cost of American wheat delivered in England and the gain to American labor would be the same. A similar illustration might be made with respects to iron. [illegible] benefits deriviable from the less cost of each article would in time through the channels of trade be experienced by the whole people. But protectionists say, the iron manufacturer and the English wheat growers suffer by this reduction. True, but is it right that a tax should be laid on the [illegible] to favor a few wheat growers and manufacturers? [illegible] Protection [illegible] industry. To the averment we reply "that whem any trade is undertaken for public advantage, private enterprise is competent to its accomplishment; and that protection cannot rightfully claim support from manufacturing enterprise on no other ground than that they are not able to support themselves."

Does Free Trade lower wages? This is maintained by the opponents of tariff reform.

It is an uncontroverted principle that the standard of wages is gauged by the industry for which the country is especially adapted. Ours is preeminently the home of agriculture. It follows as an economical truism that the wages standard is the amount paid in agricultural pursuits. The price paid for our agricultural products is not affected by the tariff as there is no duty on experts so that the price of our wheat cereal and like products is effected entirely by the foreign demand. But on most of the articles consumed by farmers there is a protective tariff. If this were abolished the farmer would pay less for his goods and could afford to pay higher wages to the laborer. Consequently it would follow that a reduction of the tariff would tend to raise wages.

The existing tariff imposes a duty of about 40 per cent on the whole value of imported goods and as these number some 2.000 articles and include almost everything that is necessary or useful in life the cost all such articles whether imported or produced at home, is enhanced. If the American laborer is thus compelled to pay more for the necessaries of life than his foreign competitor, his wages must be increased, or else be at a disadvantage. But if the wages are higher, in order to meet this difference, nothing is gained by the laborer; but usually he is at a disatvantage. For there is a great difference between the wages of the American and foreign laborer. It was only a few years since that skilled labor received higher wages in England than here, and there the tide of skilled labor rolled back to England. The census reports of the United States show that the amount paid for wages represent only about 20 per cent. of the manufactured product. If the foreign workmen received $1.00 and the American $2.00, a tariff of 20 [illegible]

[illegible] proves that they are better workmen, and that the Germans need protection against them. In America the argument is that the Englishmen do not get as good wages as the Americans, and that therefore the Americans need protection. The advantage of this kind of an emperical argument is, that it goes as well one end foremost as the other.

Suppose the Germans should argue like the Americans. They would then have to argue that free trade would raise wages to the English rate, as the Americans argue that free trade would lower their wages to the English rate.

Suppose the Americans should borrow the German argument. They would then have to argue that, as the Americans get higher wages, it proves that they are better workmen than the English and need no protection against them, and consequently none against the workmen of the continent.

In 1840 the industries of Great Britain were in a very depressed condition, The revenue was insufficient to meet the expenses of government, and laborers of all classes were eeking out a miserable existence.

The ministry that came into power in 1841 determined to adopt the system of free trade. In the face of a most determined opposition and prophecying that evil only would befall the country from such a course, and Mr. Disraeli voicing the thought of his constituents, gravely asserting in the House of Commons that "free trade would sap the spring of our manufacturing prosperity:" and that weightier assertion of the earl of Derby —that "before many years you would have the manufacturing interests of the country earnestly requesting the legislators to give them the protection that they have been so desirous you should withdraw from us." Against this opposition the government repealed the "corn laws" the test question, which virtually adopted free trade. Now let us review the results.

Under a stringent protection the growth of British exports between 1805 and 1825, a period of 20 years, was only $2,000,000 or $200,000 per annum. From 1825 to 1837 under a reduced protection tariff they increased at the rate of $400,000 per annum. During the next five years to 1842 there was no increase whatever. After protection to manufacturers had been abolished in 1842, but while there was still a tariff on agricultural products and shipping, exports increased $52,000,000 in the 4 years to 1846, or more than the total increase during the preceeding 37 years. Tariff restrictions were further removed and the growth of exports was rapid and continuous, being $289,000,000 in 1846, and reaching in 1880 the enormous figure—$1,432,000,000. For the 30 years preceeding the adoption of free trade in Great Britain, and while it was following a strict system of protection, the total increase of exports was 240,000,000. For the 30 years following, the total increase was $2,400,000,000, ten times as large as under protection. It was also predicted that under free trade British shipping would be destroyed. The result has been otherwise. From a tonnage of 80,000 tons in 1840, it increased to 6,575,000 in 1870.

Previous to 1849 the growth of wealth was slower than the growth of population. Since that time the growth of population has been in the ratio of 33 per cent., while the national wealth has been in the ratio of 130 per cent.

In 1850 there were 920,000 paupers in England and Wales. In 1880, only 803,000. In 1850 there were 51,000 convictions; in 1880 11,000. The average per capita consumption of food in 1840 was 4.90 pounds consisting principally of bacon and ham. In 1880 it was 84.41 pounds. We briefly tabulate these results which have occurred under the system of free trade.

The experience of Belgium has been similar. Under Napolean I protection in Belgium was very rigid; as a result, in 1841 when the Dutch reassumed sovereignty the country had become desolated and largely depopulated. The tariff was then greatly reduced, and under this wise system, their principal manufactures again sprung into existance. After the Dutch and Belgian separation in 1830 a protective policy was readopted with results so disastrous that in 1851 the finance minister declared that if the policy were continued it would ruin the whole system of domestic industry. In 1855 Belgium abolished protection and adopted free trade principles and the tariff was arranged with a view to revenue only. The result has been to give Belgium comparatively the position of the first commercial state of the world. With a population exceeding 5,000,000, occupying a territory of 11,000 square miles, Belgium, with few natural resources supports an army double the size of ours and enjoys a revenue of fifty seven millions annually.

Has the fact that the illiterate population of half sterile soiled Belgium has advanced to a people of the first commercial importance under the system of free [illegible] to bear to selfish men wh[illegible] to the truths of free trade and [illegible] protection?

No country offers a better illustration of the workings of the [illegible] systems, free trade and protection than the United States. Between the States there is the most perfect commercial freedom, while in its relations with foreign countries our government has [illegible] a strict protective policy. In another article we may discuss the workings of these systems in the United States and the results therefrom, a careful study shows vast benefit and trade expansion from its free trade p[illegible] great injury from its prote[illegible] of our trade wit[illegible] our shipping [illegible] ably show [illegible]

[illegible] to discuss [illegible] but merely to touch upon a few of the points in the controversy and to present a short compilation of some of the truths that have passed into the current literature of the day. Should any reader wish to give this important question further thought, valuable information can be gained from the writings of Prof. Sumner of Yale college, Prof. Perry of Williams, Henry C. Carey, Henry Clay, Henry Faucett, J. S. Mill, Adam Smith, and from occasional articles in our leading periodicals and in two of our leading daily papers, "The New York Times," and "Evening Post." K.

Blaine aroused much enthusiasm on his way to Ohio.

The President is expected to return Washington this week.

Mr. Eno, ex-banker, and a fugitive from justice has leased a residence in Quebec at $2,000 a year. E-no's what he is about.

Gov. Cleveland will visit Buffalo tomorrow for the first time since his nomination. He will be given a grand reception at his old home.

Baldwinsville has two candidate for Assemblyman for the First District Wallace Tappan, the Republican nominee, and Dr. J. C. B. Wallace, on the Prohibition ticket.

The Hon. James G. Blaine's reception in Syracuse Wednesday evening was the largest political demonstration ever held in that city. Three hundred clubs paraded the streets amidst a grand display of fireworks. Mr. Blaine upon his appearance was long and loudly cheered.

In an editorial on Butler in the New York Sun, that paper says: "Gen. Butler doesn't think much of the system of dressing up in uniform and following a brass band with a torch on your shoulder in order to emphasize your political principles. "It is ridiculous," he says, 'to put on red jackets and the helmets, and march around like monkeys. The only means of appeal he has lies in the fertility of his ideas and in his power of expounding them. In this respect Butler is richer than any other Presidential candidate; and after all, these are the weapons with which every political battle should be fought."

The Cleveland Lakeside Press is strongly advocating the election of Butler and West. This paper publishes a letter from W. C. Clark, Presidential elector from that Congressional district in which he says: "I have been to Oswego and at other points in the county. I can say that Big Ben's canvass is booming all along the line. Oswego, Fulton, Parish and West Monroe are falling into line; and as soon as General Butler and Senator Grady address the citizens of Oswego and vicinity, you may look for a general stampede from both the old machine candidates to the People's standard bearers—Butler and West."

Now, we have taken pains to inquire into Butlers strength in Fulton, and as yet we have been unable to find one man who will vote for him. There may be a few Butlerites here, but they keep to themselves. In a letter recently received here from Butler he stated that he would come to Fulton providing there was a Butler movement here, But there is none. As yet both Republicans and Democrats of this town are well enough satisfied with their respective parties. Our Butler friend should not over estimate his strength as it will only tend to increase their disappointment upon receipt of election returns,

Resolved,

Whereas the public street or highway known as Cayuga street was heretofore laid out in the village of Fulton, town of Volney, Oswego county, by the owners of the fee of the land which said Street occupies, and the dedication of such street, or highway was duly accepted by the proper authorities of said village and town and followed by public use and travel and work and labor were performed thereon by said authorities, and said street was duly designated on the official map of said village of Fulton made in 1855, and recorded in the Oswego county clerk's office, which said street or highway by reason and by virtue of said dedication and acceptance, and the designation thereof on said village map, was intended to be of the full width of Sixty-six feet and whereas said public street so dedicated as aforesaid has by an act of the Legislature of the State of New York, Chap 33, Laws of 1862, been declared a public street, as laid down on said map,

And whereas it appears to the undersigned, the President and Trustees of the village of Fulton, by personal examination and inspection, and by surveys caused by us to be made, that said public street or highway, known as Cayuga street and the full width thereof viz. sixty-six feet is encroached upon on the north side of said Cayuga street, between Fourth and Sixth streets by the fences of the following named persons respectively owning or occupying land and premises adjoining said street as follows:

Utica, N. Y., Sept. 23, 1884.

[illegible] of the New York Central [illegible] In the sunshine of a [illegible] a traveler who had heard something of his history, visited Mr. Cardell, and said as he marked the hale appearance of the farmer: "Can you be the man whom they told me of in Albany as having been almost raised from the dead?"

"Perhaps I'm not quite entitled to that distinction," he answered half laughing, "but I was lifted out of a serious situation, that is certain. For fifteen years I had kidney disease in the worst form. I obtained but little rest day or night, so extreme was the pain in the small of my back. I tossed upon my bed, as pititable an object as ever attracted the sympathy or excited the disgust of a sound man. Of course my business was neglected and my farm went to rack. All this came from catching cold in a camping out expedition, and I came near camping out in the cemetary as the end of all."

"If the doctors couldn't cure you—as I assume they couldn't—what on earth did you do?"

"Well help came to me; I didn't go for it One day when in Albany a druggist said: 'Cardel don't surrender yet. Try Dr. David Kennedy' FAVORITE REMEDY—a famous medicine sen up from Rondout, N. Y.' I did and it cured me I owe everything to D. Kennedy and his medicine It has recalled me to life and labor. You may tell the world so, if you like,"

A CURE FOR GRAVEL.

A Common and Painful Complaint—A Statement You May Confide in.

It seems to have been reserved for Dr. David Kennedy, Rondout, N. Y., to accomplish through his preparation widely known as KENNEDY'S FAVORITE REMEDY, what others have failed to compass. The subjoined letter will be found of vital interest to sufferers from gravel and to the general public:

Albany, March 26, 1884.

Dr. David Kennedy, Rondout, N. Y.

Dear Sir: Let me tell you frankly that I have never been partial to proprietary medicines, as I believe the majority of them to be nothing better than methods of obtaining money from people whom suffering makes ready to catch at any hope of relief. They are mean cheats and delusions. But your FAVORITE REMEDY I know by happy experience to be a totally different thing. I had been a sufferer frm gravel for years, and had resorted to many eminent physicians for relief, but no permanent good came of it. About three year ago your FAVORITE RMEDY was recommended to me. I can give you the result in a sentence: I tried it and it cured me completely. I am confident it saved my life. You can use this letter if you think best. Yours, etc.,

Nathan Ackley.

[illegible] of the citizens of [illegible]. There was at least 10,000 people assembled on the grounds at 9 a. m., to see and hear this great and brilliant statesman, James G. Blaine. A small delegation of prominent men from Oswego and Fulton, went to Syracuse and accompanied Mr. Blaine and party to the grounds. As the train came thundering in from Syracuse with the party there was much excitement manifested by the crowd. Mr. Blaine was admitted by the little gate at the north end of the grand stand. He was loudly cheered upon his appearance. Mr. Blaine spoke from the judges' stand and was introduced by Mr. H. H. Merrian, president of the society.

The Plumed Knight said: There is no year in the history of the United States in which through all its borders, the agriculturist has rejoiced as he does this year. There are no politics in agriculture (applause); the crop for the democrat and for the republican is alike good or alike bad. The need of the product is alike to the democrat and to the republican. We meet therefore, on the agricultural fair grounds, if no where else, on the broad plane of American citizenship ("Good! Good!") and cheers) which is a much higher title than democrat or republican. (Enthusiastic applause.) It is in that capicity that I stand before you this morning, and it is in that capacity that I extend to you my congratulations and my very hearty thanks for your generous reception. Great cheers.)

Hon. Chauncy M. DePew was then introduced and made an eloquent little speech. He was followed by Martin I. Townsend, Hon. Theodore M. Pomeroy and Senator Coggshall each making short speeches. The party remained on the ground about one half hour. Much praise is due to the managers of the society for their efforts in securing the presence of these notable gentlemen. W. B. Phelps, Supt. of the D. L. & W. railroad also vice-president of the society, deserves worthy praise for his generosity in donating the use of the road to Mr. Blaine and his friends.

The Fire Department.

The annual review of the Fulton Fire Department took place yesterday afternoon at 3 o'clock. The companies formed in line in front of the engine house and headed by the Fulton band marched through the principal streets making a very creditable appearance. President Waugh and the Board of Trustees were stationed in front of the Lewis House where they reviewed the company as they passed and were appropiately saluted. The leading business places and many residences were trimmed for the occassion. The residence of Chief Gilbert was handsomly decorated with flags and he was given three rousing cheers in front of his home. The companies made a fine appearance in their new uniforms and especially Chief Gilbert and assistants Mosher and Darrow who were elegantly dressed. The inclement weather was the only disagreeable feature. On account of the muddy roads it was decided to do away with the races. Asst. Chief Young of Oswego was present and viewed the parade.

Charles Mosher is moving his stock of goods into the Times block to-day.

A bet of one hundred a side on the general result of election was made in town the other day.

THE FULTON FAIR.

A Success—Good Order Maintained—The Races and Balloon Ascension—Premium List.

The fair this year from beginning to end was a complete success in every particular. The managers are more than satisfied with the results. There were more people on the grounds Thursday (the last day) than ever before at one time. The weather on the whole was very favorable. No rowdyism or drunkenness was observable on the grounds to mar the pleasure of visitors. On the contrary good order was maintained and the large attendance and enormous receipts this year are convincing evidence that the society is far more prosperous without the sale of liquor on the grounds. Many predictions had been made in regard to the result of this action on the part of the society, but no one will deny the fact that this was a grand and successful fair. The three races on the afternoon of the last day were especially interesting. In the free for all, the following were the entries given in the positions drawn:

B. McManus, "C. A. C,"	4	4	4
G. E. Potter, Lula P.	3	3	3
O. J. Jennings, Stephanus	1	1	1
A. B. Mann, Middletown	2	2	2

Premium $200.—Best three in five, free for all. $100 to first; $50 to second; $30 to third; $20 to fourth. Time, 2:39, 2:40, 2:35. Stephanus took first money; Middletown, second; Lula P, third; C. A. C. fourth.

A special race was made up, not on the programme, for a purse of $25. $13 to first, $8 to second and $4 to third. The race was won by the horse known as "P. C. Bradley."

The chief interest in the races centered in the running races. The following is the summary:

Delong, "Yankee Dan"	drawn
J. Depew, "Mollie"	3	2	2
J, Depew, "Nellie Arcola"	2	2	3
D. Burham "Eclipse"	1	1	1

Premium $50—Best three in five; $25 to first; $15 to second; $10 third.

During the races a large crowd witnessed the balloon ascension of Madam Charlotta. This experienced aeronaut made as fine an ascension as was ever made from the grounds. Madam took her seat in the basket and gave the signal to cast off. The balloon rose very slowly at first and became entangled in a tree on the grounds a quantity of ballast was thrown out and the balloon was caught by a strong breeze blowing from the lake and was taken in an easterly direction. The air ship was eagerly watched until it was lost to view behind a cloud. She landed in a cornfield about three miles east of Fulton, and returned to the fair grounds about five o'clock all safe and sound. The only misfortune was the renting assunder of the "Sky Lark" by the fresh breeze.

The second day of the fair the Hannibal Brewster Silver band furnished excellent music. This band is handsomely uniformed and travel in a decorated band wagon which is very attractive as well as convenient.

The total receipts from the fair grounds this year are $4,650. Below is the list of premiums:

WORKING CATTLE—Best pr oxen, M Chesbro; 2d do, W D Edgarton, best yoke 4 yr olds, E Wilcox; 2d do, F A Moore; best 3 yr olds, E R Downs; 2d do, F B Scudder; best 2 yr old, F B Scudder; best yearlings, Ira Foster; 2d do, David Davis; yoke yearlings, (discretionary) L Candee; yoke twin calves, A H Baldwin.

THE SUN.

NEW YORK, 1884.

About sixty million copies of THE SUN have gone out of [illegible] establishment the past twelve months.

If [illegible] were to paste end to end all the columns of [illegible] printed and sold last year you would get a [illegible] continuous strip of interesting information, common sense wisdom, sound doctrine, and sane wit long enough to reach from Printing House Square to the top of Mount Copernicus in the Moon then back to Printing House Square, and then, three-quarters of the way back to the Moon again.

But The Sun is written for the inhabitants of this earth; this same strip of intelligence would girdle the globe twenty-seven or twenty-eight times.

If every buyer of a copy of The Sun during the past year has spent only one hour over it, and if his wife or grandfather has spent another hour this newspaper in 1883 has afforded the human race thirteen thousand years of steady reading, night and day.

It is only by little calculations like these that you can form any idea of the circulation of the most popular of American newspapers, or of its influence on the opinions and actions of American men and women.

The Sun is and will continue to be a newspaper which tells the truth without fear of consequences, which gets at the facts no matter how much the process costs, which presents the news of all the world without waste of words and in the most readable shape, which is working with all its heart for the cause of honest government, and which therefore believes that the Republican party must go in the coming year of our Lord, 1884.

If you know The Sun, you like it already, and you will read it with accustomed diligence and profit during what is sure to be the most interesting year in its history. If you do not yet know The Sun it is high time to [illegible] sunshine.

ELDER'S, ELDER'S

Is what [illegible] Farmer was Sent Back to his Plow.

Leaving the cars of the New York Central Railroad at a pretty little station called Kanner, and driving three miles back in the country, you reach the fine, well kept farm of Mr. Jacob Cardell, Deputy Sheriff and Commissioner of Highways for the town of Watervliet. In the sunshine of a bright day last summer a traveler who had heard something of his history, visited Mr. Cardell, and said as he marked the hale appearance of the farmer: "Can you be the man whom they told me of in Albany as having been almost raised from the dead?"

"Perhaps I'm not quite entitled to that distinction," he answered half laughing, "but I was lifted out of a serious situation, that is certain For fifteen years I had kidney disease in the worst form. I obtained but little rest day or night, so extreme was the pain in the small of my back. I tossed upon my bed, as pitiable an object as ever attracted the sympathy or excited the disgust of a sound man. Of course my business was neglected and my farm went to rack. All this came from catching cold in a camping out expedition, and I came near camping out in the cemetery as the end of all."

"If the doctors couldn't cure you—as I assume they couldn't—what on earth did you do?"

"Well help came to me; I didn't go for it One day when in Albany a druggist said: 'Cardel don't surrender yet. Try Dr. David Kennedy' FAVORITE REMEDY a famous medicine sent up from Rondout, N. Y.' I did and it cured me I owe everything to D. Kennedy and his medicine It has recalled me to life and labor. You may tell the world so, if you like,"

A CURE FOR GRAVEL.

A Common and Painful Complaint—A Statement You May Confide in.

It seems to have been reserved for Dr. David Kennedy, Rondout, N. Y., to accomplish through his preparation widely known as KENNEDY'S FAVORITE REMEDY, what others have failed to compass. The subjoined letter will be found of vital interest to sufferers from gravel and to the general public:

ALBANY, March 5?, 1881.

Dr. David Kennedy, Rondout, N. Y.

DEAR SIR: Let me tell you frankly that I have never been partial to proprietary medicines, as I believe the majority of them to be nothing better than methods of obtaining money from people whom suffering makes ready to catch at any hope of relief. They are mean cheats and delusions. But your FAVORITE REMEDY I know by happy experience to be a totally different thing. I had been a sufferer from gravel for years, and had resorted to many eminent physicians for relief, but no permanent good came of it. About three year ago your FAVORITE RMEDY was recommended to me. I can give you the result in a sentence; I tried it and it cured me completely. I am confident it saved my life. You can use this letter if you think best. Yours, etc.,

NATHAN ACKLEY.

Captain Nathan Ackley was for a long time connected with the Canal Appraiser's office in Albany. He is well known and writes for no purpose but to do good to others.

As a medicine for disease of the Blood, Liver, Kidneys, and digestive organs, KENNEDY'S FAVORITE REMEDY one fairly won its high reputation. Write if desirable to Dr David Kennedy, Rondout, N. Y.

How Watch Cases are Made.

Most persons have an ambition to carry a gold watch case, and yet few people know how a watch case is made, or the vast difference in the quality of them. In a SOLID GOLD WATCH CASE, aside from the necessary thickness for engraving and polishing, a large proportion of the metal is needed only to stiffen and hold the engraved portions in place, and supply strength. The surplus is not only needless, but undesirable, because gold is a soft metal and cannot furnish the stiffness, strength and elasticity necessary to make the case permanently strong and close-fitting. The perfect watch case must combine gold with some metal that will supply that in which the gold is deficient. This has been accomplished by the James Boss' Gold Watch Case which saves the WASTE of needless gold, and INCREASES the SOLIDITY and STRENGTH of the case, and at the same time reduces the cost ONE HALF.

Send 3 cent stamp to Keystone Watch Case Factories, Philadelphia, Pa., for handsome Illustrated Pamphlet showing how James Boss' and Keystone Watch Cases are made.

In addition to the ordinary work of preaching and teaching both of which are being efficiently and successfully conducted, attention is paid to the physical condition of the people. A free hospital with a dispensary attached, has been opened at Bitlis. The hospital is under the charge of an Armenian deacon. It is proving of benefit to the native population and doing much to recommend the mission generally.

Leaving the constant discussion of how to reach the masses, the New York Evangelist says: "It is well known that there is a large class in our cities, belonging to the higher circles and literary classes of society, who have been alienated from the churches. These can be reached by courses of popular but scholarly lectures upon the great religious themes of the day. Such courses have been organized and carried out successfully in former years. It seems to us that a fruitful campaign might be waged in this direction."

The society of Friends report a total membership in this country of about 75,000 and in Great Britan and Ireland about 18,000. They carry on considerable mission work. Among the various Indian tribes they have 25 Friends engaged in teaching, and in foreign field are doing a noble service. They are sustaining thirteen missionaries in Madagascar, five in India, and a medical mission in Turkey under the care of the London Yearly meeting. In Syria they have two stations, Burmah and Mount Lebanon with training home for boys and girls, three Sabbath schools and nine day schools. At Ramallah, near Jerusalm, they have seven schools. These are under the care of the New England and London Yearly meetings.

Want any papers, Mister,
Wish you'd buy 'em of me—
[illegible] a fam'ly,
[illegible], you see.
[illegible]! There's Tommy and Tibby,
An' Dick, an' Mam, an' Mam's cat,
None [illegible] earnin' money—
What do you think of that?

Couldn't Dad work? Why yes, Boss,
He's working for guv'ment now—
They give him his board for nothin'—
All along of a drunken row.
An' Mam? Well she's in the poorhouse—
Been there a year or so;
So I'm takin' care of the others,
Doin' as well as I know.

Oughtn't to live so? Why Mister;
What's a feller to do?
Some nights, when I'm tired and hungry,
Seems as if each of 'em knew—
They'll all three cuddle around me,
Till I get cheery and say:
Well, p'raps I'll have sisters and brothers,
An' money an' clothes, too some day.

But if I do get rich, Boss,
(An' a lecturin' chap one night,
Said that newsboys could be presidents,
If only they acted right;
So if I was president, Mister,
The very first I'd do,
I'll buy poor Tom and Tibby
A dinner—and Mam's cat, too!

None o' your scraps an' leavin,s,
But a good square meal for three;
If you think I' skimp my friends, Boss,
That shows you don't know me.
So 'ere's your papers—come, take one.
Gimme a lift if you can—
For now you've heard my story,
You see I'm a fam'ly man!

TOMALO TOMMY.

BY S. H. JACKSON.

It was in '74—a frontier town in North Western Texas. The great Panhandle with its vast castle ranges lay to the far west, and Indian Nation with its predatory tribes on the north.

It had been an exciting day. I kept the Post Office in my store, literally kept it too, by standing guard at the door, with a Winchester in my hand, watching drunken scouts and cowboys ride up and down the main street at full gallop, lying back in their saddles, a revolver in each hand, firing indiscriminately at stores and houses, the crash of broken glass, and now and then a howl of pain, attesting the terror they were striking into the hearts of the citizens. They let me alone, not on account of my Winchester but out of respect to Uncle Sam I guess, whose representative I was.

Old Joe Bowers kept store in the block below me, and carried the largest stock in the town—dry goods, groceries, hardware and liquors. It was a wide one story building, with heavy front doors, and when the fun commenced Joe closed, and barred his front, and slipped across the creek for safety. He was not popular with the boys and he knew it. Little good it did him. When they found the place closed they fired a volley at the windows, got inside, unbarred the doors, opened the back, and remounting galloped in at the front and out of the back door, snatching up as they passed through anything they could lay their hands on. Down the street they came again, shouting, yelling, firing right and left, some waving a whole bolt of calico behind them like a monstrous banner, while others attested their fitness for a lunatic asylum, by cutting the bottom out of sacks of flour and galloping along enveloped in a misty cloud out of which came the frequent crack of the revolver. The boys had taken the town.

About sundown they were reinforced by another gang of cowboys. As they came riding slowly down the street it was noticed that the leader held in front of him a pale, delicate looking boy about 3 or 4 years old, whose refined features and terrified expression looked terribly out of place in this wild crowd.

A volley fired in the air and a whoop that could be heard a mile off was the welcome they received, and the little fellow, terror stricken, clung to his protector with renewed energy.

Greetings were exchanged, bottles—and there were plenty of them—passed around, and the whole crowd, cowboys, scouts, and outside vagrants, dismounted and crowded into the saloon.

"Bill! Whar did you get the kid?" said a tall, raw boned, weather beaten scout.

'Picked him up coming in,' was the answer, as he placed the boy on his feet in the center of a billiard table. "Good looking boy ain't he? Movers I guess—daddy and mammy shot and scalped—schooner turned over—horses gone—boy lying asleep on his dead mammy's breast—sobbed himself to sleep I reckon by the look of his face—don't know how the red devils missed him—almost a pity they did—poor little chap. Boys! let's take a drink."

While they were drinking, Bill came with his glass to the little fellow and said: "What's your name sonny?"

"Tommy"—was the whispered, frightened answer—"Where's mamma? I want to go to bed."

"All right Tommy, take a sip o' this and then you shall go to to bed."

The boy pushed away the glass in disgust, the man laughed and said with an oath: "What shall we do with him boys? Ther ain't three women in the county and nary of 'me fit to take care of an innocent boy."

"Let's raffle him off!" yelled one, and the drunken crowd endorsed the proposition with a loud yell and roars of [illegible].

[illegible], and trembling with terror, [illegible] had sunk on to the billiard table [illegible], half asleep. Bill—[illegible] protector, lifted him carefully [illegible] him in a blanket, carried [illegible] of the gallery, and laid [illegible]

He flung a twenty dollar note on the billard table and said: "Boys! a dollar a chance for the kid—I take twenty chances to help him along but I'm——if I throw any dice."

Soon the money came tumbling in, dollars, fives, tens, twenties, yet nothing was said about raffling and no account kept of the donors. Just then a man came in who was greeted with a yell and the cry of "Tomalos! tomalos!" went around the saloon.

Old Gilly, the tomalo man, sold out, took a drink of whiskey and looking at the pile on the table, said: "What's going on, boys?"

"All right!" was the answer,

"Gimme the box!" and with a laugh the crowd gathered around the billiard table to see the first last and only throw. "What's to beat?" inqured Gilly.

"You go ahead and throw," was the laughing response. Old Gilly threw with all the gravity in the world. Fourteen first throw, fourteen second—sixteen third—total forty-four.

"Gilly, you're the winner," said Bill; "pick up the money and I'll show you the boy, and by George if don't treat him right there's not a man here but will take it out of your old hide."

There was nearly four hundred dollars in the pile, and Gilly, almost tickled to death, made profuse promises as he followed Bill to the spot where the boy lay.

"Let him sleep whar he is to night, Gilly, and in the morning you can take him away;" and as Gilly turned away Bill bent over the unconscious boy and kissed his cheek. The boy smiled as the rough mustache brushed his face, and Bill, with a choking voice muttered: "Poor little angel, why didn't the red devils send him along with his mother?"

Old Gilly was an inveterate drunkard.

* * * * * *

Shortly after the above occurrence I sold out my business, regained my postmastership, left the town, and went East for a change. They say there is a fascination about Texas that compe's those who have once dwelt there to return. Anyway, about four years later, I found myself in Gammonsville, about eighty miles east of my old stamping ground. The town boasted water works, a street car line, two school houses, a handsome court house, churches and the usual complement of gambling houses and saloons. It had no sewerage system, however, and the doctors thrived on the fever stricken patients, which this lack of sanitary system supplied. Its greatest glory was its handsome residences owned by wealthy cowmen. One memorable day a cowman woke up to find that he had more money than he knew what to do with, and decided to build a fine house. The house was built, and he was proud but uncomfortable in it. It was too large as he had been accustomed to a two room shanty.

"How much did that house cost?" asked a brother cowman of the architect.

"$25,000" was the reply.

"Well, I'll see that and go him fifteen better. You build me a $40,000 house."

The fever spread till at last a cowman built a house fit for a metropolis, and which, should he ever fail, would not bring ten per cent. of its cost, unless the county bought it in as a home for demented cowmen.

I walked up the street to the bank which was located on the corner of the square, next to a saloon, and after transacting my business, stepped inside the saloon to take a cocktail. While there a bootblack came in, asked for half a pint of whiskey, which he paid for, put in his pocket, and then turned around and accosted me with: "Shine sir?" I sat down and let him go to work. He was a stunted specimen of humanity, with clearly cut and delicate features, but with the hardest look on his face that I ever saw in one so young. He could not have been more than eight years old.

Directly he had finished, and while I was fumbling for the necessary dime, he pulled out the whiskey flask, and taking a good drink, recorked the bottle, and drew his ragged coat sleeve across his mouth with the assurance o! an old veteran.

Astonished, I asked him how the barkeeper dared supply him with liquor, and he laughingly replied: "Oh I tell em' it's for old Gilly."

"Old Gilly!" I exclaimed. "Is he here? What is your name, son?"

"Don't know," was the reply, "I live with old Gilly and they call me Toma'o Tommy—so long. Shine 'em, sir? shine em?"

And this was the child found on the plains. God help him. The innocent bloom all gone, and in its place a depraved appetite for liquor which was quietly but surely sapping his young life and had already stamped the imprint of vice on his delicate features.

Outside, on the curb, sat, or rather squatted, a bevy of cowmen, with all of whom the boy seemed familiar and judging by the polish on their shoes, he must have had a profitable morning's work. I went to the hotel sad at heart.

A few nights afterward I went to the saloon to pass away the evening in a quiet game of billiards. About eleven o'clock I relinquished my cue and started for the door when old Gilly entered with his tomalo can, followed by Tomalo Tommy.

The old man was slightly intoxicated, and the ghastly [illegible] pale face of the boy denoted that he was [illegible] went inside again, sat down and watched the old man sell his tomalos. Occasionally he would call for a drink, hand the glass to the boy, who took a sip, and then passed it back to the old man to finish.

It must have been about twelve o'clock when the boy said: "Gilly! Let's go home."

"All right, sonny, come along," and the old men staggered to the door, the boy followed with unsteady steps. Out in the rain and sleet they stumbled, and I wondered if they would ever get home.

I must have sat about half an hour aftot they left, pondering in a half sleepy fashion, when I roused myself with a start and determined to make a quick run to the hotel. Out I went on a dog trot, holding my coat up to my chin, the rain coming in force and the north wind piercing to my very bones. As I turned the last corner I nearly stumbled over a figure kneeling in the mud, and, stopping short, I discovered old Gilly leaning over the prostrate body of little Tommy, whining in maudlin tones; "Tommy! Tommy, get up."

Pushing him on one side I snatched up the unconscious boy and made a bee line for the hotel. Blood was trickling from his mouth and it was evident that he was in the last stage of exhaustion. I called for hot water bathed him, and putting him in bed sent for a doctor.

Presently the boy opened his eyes and looked around in surprise. Old Gilly, who had followed me to the room put his arm over my shoulder—as I leaned over the boy and said: "Tommy take a drop." He held out a bottle in his hand. The boy made no sign of recognition and I fiercely pushed the drunken man back from the bedside. The blood came gushing once more from the boy,s mouth and as I wiped it gently away a soft smile came over the boys face, the hard expression vanished, and his face assumed that pure and innocent look, which I remembered so well to have noticed on the night of the raffle.

He did not recognize any one, but half raising himself in the bed and gazing straight before him, with his hands outstretched, whispered in brokan tones: "Mamma, Mamma, don't go—Tommy say prayers—Gentle Jesus—meek—mild—look—little—child—Pity my—simplic—i—ty—Suffer—Suffer—me—come to thee A—men."

The little head fell back on the pillow, the sweetest smile it was ever my lot to see stole over his face, and with a last murmured: "Kiss me mamma, night—night," he sank to the sleep that knows no waking.

* * * * * * * *

His friends, the cowmen, bore the expense of the funeral and the Methodist minister, who said the burial service, held the boy up as a striking example of the curse of strong drink. He knew not the sad story of his life, and still less did he know the glorious story of his death. That remained with me, and before I left the town a neat stone stood at the head of the little mound:

CURE FOR PILES.

Piles are frequently preceeded by a sense of weight in the back, loins and lower part of the abdomen, causing the patient to suppose he has some affection of the kidneys or neighboring organs. At times symptoms of indigestion are present, as flatulency, uneasiness of the stomach, ect. A moisture, like prespiration, producing a very disagreeable itching, after getting warm, is a very common attendant. Blind, Bleeding and Itching Piles yield at once to the application of Dr. Bosanko's Pile Remedy, which acts directly upon the parts affected, absorbing the tumors, allaying the intense itching, and effecting a [illegible]

Mr. Arthur's Future.

"Is h'Excellency, Mr. h'Arthur!" was the London English with which the President was announced at the dinner given in his honor at Delmonico's the other day, writes a correspondent of a western journal. The speaker was a uniformed flunky at the door. It must not be supposed, however, says the New York World, that Arthur has acquired any of the craze for the British customs though his appearance is so English that, hearing him thus announced and seeing him enter, one might easily imagine him to be a Briton. The servant is an attache of the restaurant and is understood to have been assigned to duty as announcer on occasions requiring such a functionary on account of his cockney dialect. All the other waiters are Italian or French. A man who has been the guest at some of the White House entertainments during Arthur's terms, tells me that, while the hospitality is somewhat formal, it is not in servile imitation of English customs, but is rather more than after the Paris model. Arthur is so nearly out of politics that there is no harm in discussing his social qualities in a non-political letter. There has been some astonishment that he should turn his back when President on men with whom he was in social contact before his exaltation. "The fact is, said a man who knows him intimately. "that Arthur never was a hail fellow with the riff-raff of city politicians. His position as a leader compelled him to associate to some extent with the toughs of both parties, but it was only in the way of political service that he did so. He had an odd rule as to that, and I have never seen it noticed in print. He would drink with such men, but on no account eat with them. From that resolution he never departed. His idea seemed to be that a touch of glasses involved no intimacy, but that a communion of knives and forks implied congenial companionship. I have seen him treat the worst kind of a heeler to the sharing of a bottle of wine at a public bar, but I never knew of his inviting a social inferior to dinner. In the former relationship he was the managing politician, while in the latter he was the private gentleman. This line of separation was peculiar to him and he rigidly adhered to it."

"What do you predict as to Arthur's future?" I inquired.
